3d. Agreeably to the strict principles of national law, connected with the solemn stipulations of treaty, we cannot conceive that any authority or power existed in the Spanish Government to sell and dispose of any part of Louisiana, subsequent to the treaty of St. Ildefonso, (October, 1800;) and that, if the Congress of the United States have, in the disposition of claims in the Territory of Orleans, sanctioned any originating since, (October, 1800,) they must have been governed by motives of a liberal and generous nature, and not from convictions of a positive legal right.

4th. From the statement of facts on the face of the memorial, it would seem that the Government of the United States, as well by their conduct as solemn declarations, have acknowledged Florida to be unconnected with the purchase of Louisiana, and that they have consequently taken possession of it alone by the strong arm of power—a statement, if true, (but which the undersigned, in perfect good faith, do most solemnly deny,) vitally affects the interest of the people of Florida, and the honor and fair fame of the Government.

Report of Joseph Wood, Register of the Land Office for the district of Marietta, dated July 31, 1816.

No lead mines or salines in the district.

VII.—LEAD MINES AND SALINES.

Report of Samuel Gwathmey, Register of the Land Office for the district of Jeffersonville, dated Nov. 7, 1816.

1. No lead mines in the district.
2. No salines of any considerable magnitude.
3. Two salines are reserved for the United States, viz: 1st. Section 15, T. 2, north, R. 4, east. 2d. Section 28, T. 3, north, R. 4, east.
4. Neither of these salines is worked at present; nor is it thought they can ever be to any advantage, either to the Government or an individual.
5. The first mentioned saline is on the head water of Great Blue river, a branch of the Ohio. The second is on a branch of the Musiakituck, a branch of White river, a branch of the Wabash. [See plate I, fig. 7.]

VIII.—LEAD MINES AND SALINES.

Report of Sam'l H. Harper, Register of the Land Office for the district of New Orleans, dated August 16, 1816.

He has no knowledge of any lead mines or salines belonging to the United States in the district of New Orleans, except one said to be in the county of Attakapas, in the western district.

IX.—LEAD MINES AND SALINES.

Report of Alexander McNair, Register of the Land Office for the district of St. Louis, Missouri Territory, dated October 20, 1816.

1. He encloses a request for the lease of a saline situated on the middle fork of the river La Moine, about ten miles distant from the Missouri, and about two hundred miles above St. Louis. [See plate I, fig. 8.]
2. No lease has been granted.
3. The petitioners for a lease represent the saline as being uncommonly rich, and capable of being wrought to great advantage.
4. This saline is in the vicinity of a fertile tract of country, which is rapidly populating, and which must be supplied with salt from this source, or from some other of the numerous salines discovered in that quarter.

X.—LEAD MINES AND SALINES.

Report of John Reed, Register of the Land Office for the district of Madison county, Mississippi Territory, dated September 1, 1816.

He knows not of any lead mines or salt springs within the district.

XI.—LEAD MINES AND SALINES.

Report of Moses Austin, Esquire, dated Mine à Burton, Washington county, Missouri Territory.

His report [see No. 406] is probably of more virtue than any other that can be expected. It is the result of the experience, for many years, of the business of lead mines, by a gentleman of intelligence and accurate observation.

We have no actual survey of the lead mine district described by Mr. Austin in the annexed report. I have caused a sketch to be drawn from his description; it accompanies this.

Further valuable information relative to these mines is daily expected from the recorder of land titles for the Territory of Missouri, which, when received, shall be communicated to the Secretary.

XII.—LEAD MINES AND SALINES.

Report of Leonard White, agent for the United States' saline on the Wabash, August 17, 1816.

Letter from N. Pope, Esquire, delegate from the Illinois Territory.

Mr. White having been for some years United States' agent for the saline, his report is deemed worthy of particular attention.

A sketch of the reservation of the saline accompanies this.

Also, a letter of Leonard White, dated 15th November, 1816, and a plat of the salt works.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE AT EDWARDSVILLE, December 2, 1816.

From my recent arrival in this country, and a desire to obtain the most satisfactory information in my power relative to the lead mines and salt springs of this Territory, has induced me to defer until this time an answer to your circular of the 3d July last.

The result of my inquiries, however, has not been so satisfactory as I could wish. On the Ohio there is said to be considerable quantities of lead ore, which, with a large tract of land including it, was some few years ago leased by Governor Edwards; but the lessee failed to make any experiments upon it, and consequently its value is entirely unknown.

I know of no other lead mines in the Territory, except those which lie above Rock river, and on the Mississippi and Ouiconsin rivers.

Those, for extent and richness, are universally believed by all who have seen them, and from many partial experiments, to be inferior to none in the world. They, however, lie north of a due west line from the southern extremity of Lake Michigan to the Mississippi river, and are included, as I am informed by Governor Edwards, in a tract of country which the commissioners appointed to treat with the Indians of the Mississippi and its waters, were directed to recede to the Indians.

The same gentleman informs me that the commissioners were fortunate enough to succeed in introducing it into the treaty. They were instructed to make a stipulation which authorizes the President to reserve, besides three leagues square at the mouth of Ouiconsin, any number of tracts, on and near to the Mississippi and Ouiconsin rivers, that should not in the whole amount to more than would be contained in five leagues square. These reservations, it is thought, will be sufficient to save the most valuable of those mines. Should the President avail himself of the stipulation, the sooner those mines are selected and worked the better it will be; because, otherwise, the Indians will begin to think we have no right to them, which happens in most cases where they are left for any considerable time in the possession of property they are stipulated to cede.

Those mines are a considerable distance from the settled parts of the Territory, and the greatest difficulty will be in supplying the necessary provisions upon the cheapest terms, by producing a competition amongst them.

For this purpose, I think it would be advisable that an agent should be appointed to reside at the mines, who should permit all persons who may go up to work such parts of them as may be unoccupied, for such a portion of the mineral as experience shall show to be just and reasonable, without confining them to a longer term than they shall choose to continue.

By these means it is believed that those mines will the sooner be explored, and more extensively worked than by leasing them to individuals or companies for a term of years; or, if a better plan should be preferred, it ought not to be to the entire exclusion of the farmer; for if the farmers of this country, when carrying up a boat load of provisions, be permitted to work a part of the mines upon reasonable terms, until, by this means and the sale of provisions, they could get a boat load of lead to return with, there are a vast number of them who would avail themselves of all leisure seasons for those purposes; which of all other plans would have the greatest tendency to render provisions cheap and plenty.

Of salt springs, I know of none in this Territory, except the United States' Wabash saline, which I passed through on my way to this place, and one on Muddy I have been informed of; both of which I believe are in operation under leases of the Government; and even of them, I know too little to justify me in giving any opinion concerning them. I am informed, and have reason to believe, that there are several valuable salines north of the river Illinois; but, owing to the late war with the Indians, and to the tract of country in which they are contained, having until lately been disputed, they have not been sufficiently tested to warrant me in making any representations at present concerning them.

I am, sir, respectfully, your most obedient servant,

JOHN MCKEE,

Register of the Land Office at Edwardsville.

Mr. JOSIAH MEIGS, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SIR:

UNITED STATES' SALINE, November 15, 1816.

In addition to a communication I had the honor of making to you on the 17th August, I will beg leave to add that, for some time, I have been convinced that the works at this place have been extended beyond the real interest of the United States. To explain this fact, I have caused a survey of the place to be made, a plat of which I herewith transmit. [See plate II, fig. 1.] By comparing it with one I transmitted in the year 1810, you will at once observe that, at that time, there were fourteen wells worked, and five useless; at this time there are thirty wells used, and twelve thrown idle. In 1810 there were five establishments, working four furnaces each, which manufactured at the rate of one hundred and twenty-six thousand bushels of salt per annum; a greater quantity than has ever been returned to me since, and I believe a greater quantity than has been made. In 1814 there was made one hundred and twenty-four thousand eight hundred and eighty-five bushels; in 1815 I received no return, but I believe there was not so much made, notwithstanding the increased number of wells and establishments; and, it is a fact, the water has been getting weaker as the number of wells increase; which I account for in this way, that scarcely a spring season arrives but what the wells are overflowed, and there being so many to receive and retain the fresh water, and particularly those that are not worked at all, out of which this water is not drawn, and from which it communicates to those that are worked; not only so, but those wells are thrown away, because they get too fresh to be worked, by fresh water breaking into them, and being very near to those that are worked, they communicate with them, and it follows, of course, that the whole becomes weaker. To obviate this, I presume if all the useless wells were filled up with earth, and no more suffered to be dug, it would have a good effect; indeed, I believe if all the wells were filled up, except sixteen, the water would shortly be as good as ever it was. Heretofore, the Government have required the lessees to make more salt than there really was water to do it with; this, I presume, was done to make the article as plenty and as cheap as possible to the consumer; but there is now no necessity for this precaution, because the article has become so plenty, from the Kenawha and other places, that it has brought the price almost below what it can be made for at this place, and I am of opinion that no person will be found to lease it in the way that it has heretofore been leased, to wit, pay for the metal and improvements in advance; but I think it may be leased if the Government furnishes the metal, &c., to be returned at the expiration of the lease, in as good order as when they were received. I would also beg leave to suggest the propriety of leasing, some time previous to the expiration of the present lease, so as to give the new lessees an opportunity of procuring the supplies necessary to carry on the works. I have the honor, &c.,

JOSIAH MEIGS, Esq.,

Commissioner General Land Office.

LEON'D WHITE,
Agent United States' Saline.

SIR:

UNITED STATES' SALINE, August 17, 1816.

I have had the honor to receive yours of the 3d ultimo, wherein I am requested to communicate to you any information I may possess relating to lead mines and salt springs belonging to the United States.

As respects lead mines, I possess but little information on that subject, never having had my attention drawn to that object.

Salt springs, as they are the only salt springs belonging to the United States with which I am particularly acquainted, I will confine my observations to them alone, and, more particularly, to your fourth proposition.

The present lease for this place expires on the 17th day of March next, upon which I will beg leave to observe that, hitherto, the United States have required the new lessee to pay to the old the price of the metal and improvements, which amounted to a considerable sum, and has operated as a bar to the practical salt-makers, and prevents them from engaging with the United States in the business, and, consequently, they become sub-lessees under the lessee, and thereby creates a third party over whom the United States have no immediate control.

Under the present lease there are so many more of this class that can actually get water, that they have injured the place considerably, first, in using so much more timber for pipes, troughs, &c., than was really necessary; and, secondly, by erecting so many establishments; all of which, for the want of water, making no more salt than perhaps little more than half the number would have done; by which means the expenses of the place were greatly augmented, and the means of payment not increased in proportion, thereby injuring the credit of the place.

To avoid which I would beg leave most respectfully to suggest the following plan for leasing this place: The United States to own all the property attached to the premises, including kettles, (the present being a favorable time to do so, the lessees being largely indebted to them,) and divide the lick into five parts: the half-moon lick composing four parts, and the saline spring or lower lick one.

Lease the kettles, &c., with the premises, to be returned in as good order as when they received them, to any persons who will give the greatest quantity of salt per annum, payable weekly or monthly, and for a failure to pay rent, or a breach of any of the stipulations of his contract, to be dispossessed, binding him, as at present, to commit no waste of timber. By this means the United States could, at any time, when improper conduct existed, get into possession, and lease again without doing any individual a great injury, as the only property belonging to the salt-maker would be moveable.

Should this plan meet the approbation of Government, the extent to be leased by each one ought to be laid off previous to leasing, both for water and wood, off of which he ought not to be suffered to go while any timber remained on his lot. This would prevent them from trespassing on one another. Improvements for salt-making are rather of a temporary nature, (being often removed,) and ought to be made by the salt-maker.

Though there are some improvements that might be an advantage to the United States to make. A tavern, for the accommodation of travellers and others, appears to be indispensably necessary, and, for the want of a convenient house, this has been hitherto badly done.

I would also suggest the propriety of the Government building a tolerably comfortable house for the residence of the United States' agent. The reservation for this place.

The intruders on this tract increase, and experience convinces me that their improvements must be destroyed before they will leave it. In fact, if one set leaves it, another comes on it immediately, and they no longer pay any attention to a threat from me.

I am, &c.,

LEONARD WHITE.

Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS.

SIR:

WASHINGTON, December 12, 1816.

Having called on you a few days ago, to remind you that the present lease of the United States' saline near the Wabash, in the Illinois Territory, was about to expire, and having been requested by you to suggest a projet for leasing it, I beg leave to submit the following remarks:

Shall the saline be leased entire or divided? If divided, into how many parts?

In few instances have the lessees manufactured salt themselves; but they generally sub-leased the saline in fractions to individuals, having no unity of interest, who found no obstacles to a fair and friendly partition of the water. It is fairly inferrible that the lessees made such terms with the manufacturers as secured to themselves some profit upon their contract with the United States. If this be the fact, it necessarily results that the Government lets the saline to the lessees on terms more advantageous to them than could be obtained of the manufacturer, who is the only meritorious person, if it were leased in fractions. It is as obvious that, whatever profit is pocketed by the lessee, in so much is the price of salt enhanced, because no man can doubt that the manufacturer would contract with the Government on the same terms that he does with the lessee, perhaps better, as he would have more confidence. Men of competent capital to work the whole establishment are generally devoid of the required information, which can only be acquired by a long apprenticeship in the school of experience. That information is most frequently found in men of moderate capital. As those are in fact the manufacturers of the salt on their own funds, it is justice to allow and secure to them all profits derivable therefrom.

If the lessee can subdivide the saline, and create rival interests there, and preserve harmony among his tenants, I see nothing to prevent the United States adopting with success the same plan. I believe the fact to be, that if any collisions appeared at the saline they arose between the lessee and his tenants, and not between the tenants themselves.

The Old Spring and Half Moon are distant from each other upwards of four miles; they are easily divided. The Half Moon is now, and has for many years, been partitioned out among different persons, without the least jostling, which clearly proves the practicability of the measure. I suppose it might be divided into any number not exceeding five parts. A multiplication beyond that number would tend to diminish the quantity of salt, in consequence of the increased waste and deterioration of the salt water. The removal of the water from the wells to the wood is always attended with a certain and not inconsiderable loss of water, which loss is not much varied by the quantity conveyed: e. g. the loss on a hundred thousand gallons will not much exceed that on fifty thousand, while the expense is almost the same on both quantities.

As to the deterioration of the water. It is believed by the best informed, that all the wells in the Half Moon derive their supplies from the same fountain or stratum of salt water, and that that fountain or stratum is not inexhaustible, and, as the site is liable to annual inundations, (at least,) it must be clear that the more apertures that are made into it by digging wells, the more fresh water will find its way to mingle with the salt water, and thereby augment the expense of restoring the salt water to its wonted state of impregnation.

Would it not be expedient for the United States to settle with the present lessee, and pay for all such stock and improvements as he is, by the terms of the lease, entitled to pay for? The moment is propitious, as it is clear the lessee will be in arrear. Upon making a new lease, the tenant shall take the lick, or his part of it, with its appurtenances, and also the kettles, &c., under such stipulations for restitution as the nature of the business shall indicate. The new tenant would then have it in his power to employ all his funds in providing the "ways and means" for a successful prosecution of business. It is also worthy of remark, that the amount to be advanced by new tenants is always wrapt in obscurity, and the old tenant, either from a desire to deter persons from bidding, or from a disposition of human nature to over-rate our own, does not fail to make the impression that the improvements, and stock on hand to be paid for, will amount to a fearful sum.

As to the price of salt. It is impossible to speak on this subject with confidence, unless I could look forward, and with certainty see what regulations will be adopted relative to the currency of the United States, and of the States respectively. It is very clear to my mind that, if no change be effected, the evil will reach us in the west, and produce an enhanced price of labor and provisions, and, consequently, of salt. But as the Government will have the power of affording appropriate relief, I do not hesitate to recommend that one dollar and twenty-five cents be assumed as the maximum price of the saline. It seems to me that the United States have committed a capital error in stipulating not to sell the rent salt at less than the maximum. If it were desired to raise the price of salt, no better plan could have been adopted, because it withdrew from the market all the rent salt, thereby enhancing the price of that necessary article. This stipulation was the offspring of fears, suggested by the lessees, that the rent salt would be carried into the market in competition with theirs. What has been the consequence? The consequence has been, that the United States' salt was wasted on hand, while the lessees were, under cover of it, extorting from the people a higher price than would have been asked or paid, if all the salt made had been in the market. Let the Government bind itself to sell none for less than one dollar at the lick, and at no other place for less than that, adding thereto costs of transportation and loss; but with some reservations; for example, reserve the Mississippi and the country near it in the Illinois Territory, and also the Illinois side of the Wabash. I recommend this reservation, because the saline belongs to the Illinois Territory, and also because it would avoid competition with the lessees, who have hitherto sent no salt up the Mississippi, (at least very little.) Some of the United States' salt has been sold at Kaskaskia, but upon hard terms. At the time that the lessees were selling salt at one dollar, we were obliged to pay at Kaskaskia one and a quarter, adding thereto carriage and loss. If this plan be adopted, the rent salt will be of some use. Therefore, let the Government reserve the right to sell, as it pleases, its rent salt in those sections of country, without reference to the wishes or interest of the lessees.

As to the duration of the lease. On this subject I have no doubt. The best lessons of experience admonish me that short leases are very unfriendly to the salt-making business. Much time is elapsed before the works are put into operation, and at the conclusion they are declining, so that it may safely be computed that, in a lease of three years, from six to nine months are either lost or unprofitably spent. I am persuaded that the public good would be consulted by adopting the longest term.

I cannot refrain from suggesting the policy of allowing each lessee to cultivate ground enough to supply him with hay, and perhaps corn. The former article is so difficult to be procured, that none is used, though much wanted.

As to the rent. It should be let to the highest bidder, payable in salt, monthly; (not quarterly, too much would then be on hand at once, and much loss insured,) retaining a right to distrain and oust for a violation of the stipulations of the lease, allowing reasonable time to get his works in operation. This ought to be confided to the discretion of the agent who leases or superintends the saline, who, from a knowledge of the situation of the establishment, and its state of repair, can form an estimate of the time to be allowed.

The stand for a tavern, store, and blacksmith's shop, must also be rented by the United States. They are very useful, I may say essential. Would it not be well to allow the tavern-keeper to make a meadow?

Upon the whole, I do most humbly submit, that the clear profits of the saline ought to be expended in improvements in the Territory to which it belongs, say in roads. The General Government will be well remunerated in the appreciation of its public lands, through which the roads shall pass. Every road would throw into demand all the lands on or near its borders.

I have, &c.

NATHANIEL POPE.

JOSIAH MEIGS, Esq.

14th CONGRESS.]

No. 249.

[2d Session.]

LAND CLAIMS IN TENNESSEE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 28, 1817.

Mr. GASTON made the following report:

The committee, to whom was referred the memorial of the Legislature of North Carolina, remonstrating against the act of Congress passed in the year 1806, entitled "An act to authorize the State of Tennessee to issue grants and perfect titles to certain lands therein described, and to settle the claims to the vacant and unappropriated lands within the same," have taken the subject of the said memorial into their serious consideration, and submit their views thereof in the following report:

The General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, by an act passed at their session begun and held on the second of November, 1789, empowered and required its Senators in Congress to execute a deed on the part and in behalf of the said State, conveying to the United States of America all the right and title which the said State had to the sovereignty and property of a vast tract of western lands, out of which has been since formed the State of Tennessee, but which were then comprehended within the acknowledged limits of North Carolina. In this act the General Assembly declared that the conveyance aforesaid was to take place upon, and subject to, certain conditions therein expressed. Among these conditions were the following: the land laid off, or directed to be laid off, by former laws of North Carolina, for the benefit of the officers and soldiers of the continental line of that State, should enure to their benefit; and if a deficiency should be found of land fit for cultivation within the limits of the district assigned for that purpose, the officer or soldier not getting his allotment should be permitted to take his quota, or so much of it as was deficient, out of any other unappropriated part of the territory ceded.

Moreover, the Governor of North Carolina was to retain the power of completing, by grant, all entries and other imperfect titles; and all such titles, until so perfected, were, after the cession, to have the force and effect which they then had under the laws of that State.

Furthermore, when an entry had been made of any tract of land in the office usually called John Armstrong's office, and located on a spot covered by a previous entry, such location might be removed to any lands on which no entry had been specially located, or to any vacant lands within the ceded territory.

In pursuance of this act, on the 25th of February, 1790, Samuel Johnston and Benjamin Hawkins, being then the Senators of the State of North Carolina in the Congress of the United States, duly executed a deed unto the United States of America, wherein the said act of North Carolina is recited at length; and whereby, in virtue of the authority delegated to them by the said act, the said Senators, in the name and on behalf of the said State, did convey to the United States all the right and title of North Carolina to the sovereignty and territory of the lands described in the aforesaid act, to and for the uses and purposes, and on the conditions, mentioned in the said act. This deed was declared by act of Congress of the 2d of April, 1790, to be accepted by the United States.

The power which, by the aforesaid act and deed of cession, was reserved to North Carolina over the ceded territory, was, for several years, exercised by her without restraint. But from this exercise many inconveniences were found to arise; particularly it was discovered that, in procuring the consummation of imperfect titles, many frauds were attempted to be committed, which the Government of North Carolina could not readily prevent or detect, and which, in their consequences, were productive of great embarrassment and injustice to the land-holders and residents of Tennessee. To remedy these evils, and, at the same time, secure the fulfilment of the yet unsatisfied obligations of justice and gratitude recognised by North Carolina in the alienation of this territory, a provisional compact was formed between the States of North Carolina and Tennessee, which required for its validity the sanction of the Congress of the United States. This compact, as contained in the act of North Carolina of the year 1803, chapter 3d, entitled "An act to authorize the State of Tennessee to perfect titles to lands reserved to this State by the cession act," and in the act of the Legislature of Tennessee of the year 1804, chapter 14th, ratifying and confirming the said act of North Carolina, provides that, upon the assent of Congress being obtained thereto, the State of Tennessee shall have power and authority to issue grants and perfect titles on all claims of land lying within that State; which, by the act of cession, were reserved to be issued and perfected by North Carolina, in as full and ample manner as the latter State possessed the same, but under certain conditions and restrictions. One of these conditions is, that, in entering and obtaining titles to lands, no preference shall be given to the citizens of Tennessee over citizens of any other State claiming under the State of North Carolina; nor shall any occupancy or possession give preference in entering or obtaining titles, so as to injure or take away the right of any person now claiming by entry, grant, or otherwise, under North Carolina. [The other conditions, with the exception of that which reserves to North Carolina the exclusive right of issuing military warrants, seem designed to provide in detail for the fair, complete, and effectual performance, by Tennessee, of such of the obligations acknowledged by North Carolina in her act of cession, as had not been discharged since the cession under the powers then reserved for that purpose. The only assent given by Congress, to any part of the compact between these States, is contained in the act of the 18th April, 1806, against which act the remonstrance of the memorialists is directed.]

This act of Congress makes, on the part of the United States, a compact with the State of Tennessee, by which, in consideration of the State of Tennessee relinquishing to the United States all right and title to the lands in that State lying to the south and west of a certain line therein described, and of the said State agreeing and declaring that the said lands shall be and remain at the sole and entire disposition of the United States, the United States cede and convey to the State of Tennessee the lands within its limits lying to the east and north of this line, and authorize the State of Tennessee to issue grants and perfect titles as to these last mentioned lands, according to the conditions of the original cession act, and of the act of North Carolina of 1803, before mentioned, "to which act the assent of Congress is thereby given, so far as is necessary to carry into effect the objects of the compact" between the United States and Tennessee. Besides this assent, in part, to the act of North Carolina of 1803, is declared to be subject to certain express conditions, not to be found in that act, viz: the appropriation by the State of Tennessee, out of the territory to the north and east of the aforesaid line, of two hundred thousand acres for colleges and academies, and of six hundred and forty acres out of every six miles square in the said territory, where existing claims will permit, for the use of schools. This act of Congress provides that all the entries, warrants, and locations removable under the terms of the cession of North Carolina, which were not actually located before the cession to the west and south of the before described line, shall be located, and the titles thereto perfected within the territory to the north and east of that line; but enacts that if this territory shall not contain a sufficient quantity of land fit for cultivation to satisfy these removable claims according to the true intent of the cession, Congress will hereafter provide by law for perfecting such of them as cannot be there located, out of the territory west and south of that line. The State of Tennessee accepted of the terms, proposed by this act of Congress, and became a party to this compact with the United States. Proceeding in the spirit of this compact, she has set apart, out of the territory north and east of the line described in the act of Congress, two hundred thousand acres for colleges and academies, and six hundred and forty acres out of every six miles square thereof for public schools, and has appropriated the residue only of this territory for the satisfaction of claims under North Carolina. By the regulations of her land laws, which conform to this compact, she permits not entries, which have been especially located on the lands to the south and west of the Congressional line, either to be surveyed there or removed to the lands which are to the east and north of that line; nor does she allow (and, according to this compact, cannot allow) the removal to the Congressional reservation of the unsatisfied warrants of the officers and soldiers of the continental line of North Carolina, or of the entries in John Armstrong's office, which have been located on spots covered by previous entries. The State of North Carolina, contending that the right to perfect titles in the lands to the west and south of the Congressional line, upon claims recognised in the original cession, and therein reserved to be completed by North Carolina, had not been transferred to Tennessee, because of the want of assent on the part of Congress unto so much of the compact between the two States, has proceeded to make surveys and issue grants thereon; and the result has been a conflict between the two States every way adverse to the ascertainment and satisfaction of the claims, for the faithful discharge whereof the honor of North Carolina, of Tennessee, and of the United States, is equally plighted.

The committee have deemed it proper to present this compendious statement to the House, that it may be possessed of the facts necessary for the understanding of the unpleasant controversy referred to in the memorial. If they had deemed it necessary for any practical purposes of justice or policy, to examine into the legal character of the pretensions asserted by the parties to this controversy, and to make an application to these facts of the principles of public law, assuredly they would not have shrunk from the inquiry, however arduous, important, or delicate.

It will readily be perceived that a faithful comparison of the various provisions of the original cession of 1789, and of the act of North Carolina of 1803, with the terms of the act of Congress of 1806, and the ascertainment how far the objects compared exhibit a coincidence of views and a harmony of design; still more the distinguishing (should any variance be found to exist) between those differences, which may be regarded as formal and unessential, and the repugnancies which ought to be viewed as substantial and important, and yet further, between those repugnances that are the result of omission, and readily susceptible of remedy, and such as may operate a nullity either in the whole or in part of the act of 1803, or even, perhaps, of the original cession, would be an undertaking not of easy accomplishment, and connected with questions embarrassing in themselves, and leading to consequences very momentous. The committee are satisfied that such an undertaking would be as superfluous as unpleasant.

There cannot be a doubt but that entries legally made before the cession of North Carolina upon lands which, by the act of 1806, are placed at the sole and entire disposition of the United States, and whereto the Indian title is extinguished, ought to be perfected into grants. Congress have also declared in their act of 1806, that, if the territory thereby conveyed to Tennessee should not contain a sufficient quantity of land fit for cultivation to satisfy the removable entries and locations recognised in the cession of North Carolina, they will provide for the perfecting of them out of the territory in that act reserved to Congress. This fact notoriously exists. There is a deficiency of land fit for cultivation on the north and east of the Congressional line, and without the Indian limits, to satisfy these claims, after the appropriations warranted by the act of 1806. The States of North Carolina and Tennessee can have but one true and substantial interest on this occasion. They are deeply, perhaps equally concerned, that the honest claims of both descriptions, above referred to, belonging to their citizens, respectively, should be satisfied, and that spurious and fraudulent claims, of either kind, should be rejected. The United States alone have the means of completely carrying this object into effect, and they are bound by the principles of justice as well as by their express undertaking, to supply these means, so far as they may be otherwise deficient, out of the Congressional reservation. The committee have, therefore, no hesitation in recommending a substantial compliance with the first alternative in the prayer of the memorialists. Provision ought to be made, by law, for perfecting titles of the kind, referred to by the memorialists, on the south and west, as well as on the east and north of the Congressional line; and it is but fair that, in a case involving the interests of the United States, of North Carolina, and of Tennessee, they should all have a voice in the adjudication of the warrants and entries to be perfected. But the committee believe that North Carolina, having this voice in the appointment of the commissioners empowered to pronounce on the legality of these claims, will, in the spirit of accommodation, acquiesce in the consummation of the titles being made by the State of Tennessee. It is obvious that this form of proceeding, if not inconsistent with the substantial rights of any, is most appropriate in itself, and most convenient to all.

In the hope that it will terminate the unpleasant controversy which has subsisted between two respectable States; that it will prevent the confusion and perplexity of titles which must result from the exercise of conflicting claims of territory; and that it will render effectual justice to claims which the United States are bound to see satisfied, the committee beg leave to report, herewith, a bill entitled "An act supplementary to an act entitled 'An act to authorize the State of Tennessee to issue grants and perfect titles to certain lands therein described, and to settle the claims to the vacant and unappropriated lands within the same.'"

INDIAN GRANTS IN LOUISIANA CONFIRMED.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 29, 1817.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the executors of Alexander Fulton, the executors of Levi Wells, the executors of Hatch Dent, William Miller, William Barrow, Josiah S. Johnston, George Matthews, John and Leonard Compton, Isaac H. Robinet, and Chew and Relf, and others, have had the same under consideration, and report as follows:

The petitioners claim a tract of land on the bayou Bœuf, in the State of Louisiana, by virtue of a purchase from three tribes of Indians, approved by the Spanish Government in the year one thousand eight hundred and two.

It appears that, about forty years ago, the nation of Indians called the Choctaux received a concession or allotment of land on the bayou Bœuf, from the proper officer of the Spanish Government, where they were established, and continued to reside for many years. About twenty-one or two years ago the Choctaux, desirous of settling the Pascagoula and Belluxi Indians near them, gave up a portion of their lands to them, upon which they were established by the agent of Indian affairs, which was approved by the Baron de Carondelet.

Miller and Fulton, under whom the petitioners claim, enjoyed, for some years previous to the change of Government, an exclusive privilege of trading with the Indians in that quarter, and were in the habit of making them considerable advances in merchandise. In the month of May, one thousand eight hundred and two, the Indians, moved by several causes, but principally with a view to discharge these debts, as well as the debts which they had contracted with other persons, and to obtain additional supplies of goods, obtained the consent of Don Valentine Layssard, the agent of Indian affairs, and the sub-delegate of the Intendant, to dispose of their lands. On the 14th day of May, 1802, the Choctaux Indians made a sale of their land from the marked boundary near the bayou Clear, down to the upper boundary of the Pascagoulas. This sale is signed by the chiefs and warriors of the tribe, attested by several witnesses, done by the commandant of the post, and ratified by Don Valentine Layssard. The consideration of this sale is $3,724, to wit, $2,302 due from the Indians to the purchasers, and the sum of $1,422 paid to the different persons by their order. This sale was approved by the Governor General of Louisiana, in the following form: "New Orleans, 20th June, 1802. Let this deed of sale be approved in all its parts. Salcedo." "Pierre Pedesclaux, notary." "Daniel Clarke." On the same day, the 14th of May, 1802, the chiefs and warriors of the Pascagoula and Billoxie tribes made a sale of their land to Miller and Fulton, from the Choctaux line down to the domain of His Majesty, in consideration of a discharge and acquittance of their debts, and the sum of $1,500 to be paid in merchandise, at cost in New Orleans. This sale is made and signed by the chiefs and warriors of the two tribes, in the presence of the witnesses, and authenticated by the Indian agent thus: "I, Don Valentine Layssard, certify that the above named chiefs and warriors have granted this sale to Messrs. Miller and Fulton, of their free will, and in the best requisite form; and the interpreters, not knowing how to write, have made their marks in the presence of my assisting witnesses." This sale was transmitted to the Governor General for his sanction, which was given in the following words: "I approve the preceding sale being made in due form, and made before the commandant, Don Valentine Layssard, by whom it appears to have been authorized and sanctioned, due faith and credit being due to it in court and out of it, and that it may so appear, I sign it in New Orleans, the 19th July, 1802. Manuel Salcedo." "Andre Lopez Armisto, (then Secretary to the Government.) Pierre Pedesclaux, notary." The Surveyor General issued the following order of survey: "I give special power to Mr. Samuel Levi Wells to proceed as my representative, and in my name, to the surveying of a tract of land sold by the Choctaux nation to Messrs. Miller and Fulton, in conformity with the deed passed before the commandant, Don Valentine Layssard, dated 14th May, 1802, and ratified by the Governor General in date the 20th of June, of the same year, &c." 12th October, 1803. A plat of survey was returned in the year 1804. The signatures to the above acts were satisfactorily proven to the commissioners. It appears by the evidence that the accounts of the Indians were liquidated and settled by the Indian agent; that the other sums of money to be paid to other persons were duly paid, and that the merchandise was delivered to them agreeably to the contract. It has been given in the evidence, that the lands in the province of Louisiana, during the Spanish Government, had little value, and it was the policy of the Government to give them to every applicant; that the price paid was higher than other lands could have been had for that were better situated; and that the principal reason for making this purchase was to secure the amount of the debts due by the Indians. This claim was entered with the Board of Commissioners in the year 1805, with all the sales and acts of approval, which, together with the evidence, have been reported, and are now before the committee, to which reference may be had. The commissioners conclude their opinion on this claim in these words: "The ratification of these sales by the Governor of the province, anterior to the change of Government, as established by the documents Nos. 2 and 3, is sufficient, in the opinion of the commissioners, to give validity to the claim: their greatest doubt is respecting the quantity of land. They are induced to recommend a confirmation of forty arpents in depth on each side of the bayou, because it will be found to comport with the general uses of the Spanish Government in cases where occupants resided on one side of the bayou, and cultivated on the opposite side, as seems to have been the case in the claim under consideration. They would also limit the front above by the marked boundary near the bayou Clear, and below by the lower line, marked by Mr. Wells, the surveyor, because it has not been satisfactorily established, as contended by the complainants, that the Indians had a right to the land, and did sell their claim down to the upper boundary of the Alabama lands. This would reduce the claim to about twenty-three thousand four hundred arpents, equal to nineteen thousand eight hundred American acres." Your committee have had before them sundry depositions, the object of which was to prove that the lower boundary was the bayou Sans-façon, which is twenty or thirty arpents front, higher up than the marked boundary recommended to be confirmed by the commissioners, and which would reduce the claim to about two thousand arpents. They have weighed all the evidence and circumstances before them, and report a bill.

[2d Session.]

DIVISION OF QUARTER SECTIONS OF LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 3, 1817.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 3, 1817.

I beg leave, very respectfully, to offer some observations on the bill before the Senate, "providing for the division of certain quarter sections in future sales of public lands," and to transmit to you a copy of a letter written by Mr. Mansfield, Surveyor General, when a similar bill was before Congress in the year 1812.

If quarter sections are divided, all the good land will frequently be on one side of the divisional line; the consequence will be, that the good land will be purchased, and the remainder will serve the purchaser as a wood lot for perhaps half a century.

Probably so soon as this law has passed, capitalists will send explorers upon the lands, and, on the first of September next, purchase all the half quarters that are good land. By paying the first instalment, they will have five years (without any further advance of capital) to sponge upon poor emigrants.

If quarter sections are divided, the trouble to the district land officers, to the clerks in this office, the expense of books, first certificates, final certificates, and patents, will be the same upon eighty acres of land, as at present attends the sale of six hundred and forty acres.

I presume the object of the committee is to accommodate poor persons; I am apprehensive that no accommodation will be produced, but, on the contrary, they will become the prey of speculators. At present a man who has eighty dollars, can have from the public a farm of one hundred and sixty acres for five years; if he cannot then pay the balance he has not paid a heavy rent; if he has improved his farm, and it sells for more than is due to the United States, he receives the surplus money; if he has not improved it so much as to make it sell, it reverts to the United States, and he may for eighty dollars take it for five years longer.

I trust, sir, that my anxiety for the poorer class of citizens, and for the productiveness of the public lands to the Treasury, will be a sufficient apology for obtruding those observations upon you and the committee. Whatever weight my observations have, the remarks of the Surveyor General have more.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

HON. JEREMIAH MORROW, Chairman of the Land Committee, Senate U. S.

SIR:

CINCINNATI, March 16, 1812.

I have seen a report of the committee of the Senate of the United States, respecting alterations of the present landed system. My sentiments, as I conceived it my duty, have been communicated long before this to you on the principal topics of that report. The object of this letter is merely to advert to that part of the report which says, "that the exterior lines being surveyed or established, the expense of surveying an interior line to each tract would be inconsiderable."

Now, the exterior lines of quarter sections are no where established at public expense. In the new surveys (in Indiana Territory, &c.,) quarter section corners are established on all the lines, but the exterior lines of quarter sections are not established; whence it will follow that, even here, where the division into half sections can be made with the least trouble, that the lines for the quarter sections must be run before those of half sections be attempted, and both together will amount to four miles of surveying for each section, or to twice the quantity of surveying which has been already executed, or for a township to one hundred and forty-four miles. In the old surveys, where two quarter section corners only have been marked, the surveying will amount to six miles per section, &c

It is manifest that, if it be intended to prepare all the lands of the United States which remain unsold, by subdivisions into half quarter sections, by surveying them at public expense, very great appropriations, more than all hitherto made for surveying, will be necessary; but if it be intended that the district surveyors perform the work at the expense of individuals, a great difficulty will arise respecting their fees, a difficulty which already exists in degree as to those of quarter section surveys. If a single half quarter in a section be sold, and it be required by the land officers that the contents and boundaries be established by the district surveyor before the purchaser is entitled to a final certificate, from sixteen to twenty-four dollars must be paid to the surveyor (otherwise he must be supposed to do this service without compensation) by a purchaser of a single half quarter. It is certain that the surveys ought to be made, whatever the expense and difficulty may be, before the sales are actually completed, as any other system would be productive of the greatest evils to individuals, not so much from the variation of contents, as of the boundaries. While these are undetermined, the advantages of springs, streams, or a favorable and inviting situation, which lie near the boundaries not ascertained, scarcely ever fail to induce the ignorant and presumptuous purchaser to consider them as his own, and he commences his improvements with those impressions. By and by, when the true division is made, a part, or perhaps the whole of his most valuable improvements are taken from him and assigned to another, or declared to belong to the United States. Such has been the case in many instances which have come to my knowledge, and the sufferers, though such merely in consequence of their own acts, complain loudly of injustice, and cannot be convinced that the Government have it not in their power to relieve them. Many applications have been made to me for relief from the evils produced by establishing the real and true lines of the subdivided tracts. There could be no such evils, if purchasers had not foolishly assumed a position for their lands which their own inclination, or a reliance on their own judgments, had directed. If the lines be not actually run and marked, they might, indeed, have reason to complain that they must be under the necessity of relying on their own discretion and judgment.

I thought it necessary to advert to the mistake of the report respecting the expense of surveying half quarter sections. This might be considered as incumbent on me from my official situation.

I am, with the highest respect, your obedient humble servant,

JARED MANSFIELD.

Hon. ALBERT GALLATIN, Secretary of the Treasury.

INDIAN GRANT IN LOUISIANA CONFIRMED.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, ON THE 10TH FEBRUARY, 1817.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the claim of Joseph Gillard, have had the same under consideration, and report:

That Joseph Gillard claims a tract of land, by virtue of an Indian sale, and confirmation by the Governor of the province of Louisiana.

It appears that the land had been allotted to the Indians by an act signed Joseph De La Pena, then commandant of Natchitoches, the 12th September, 1787, which was formally approved by two successive Governors, to wit: Governor Miro, without date, and of the Governor General, the Baron de Carondelet, in these words: "In virtue of the powers vested in me by His Majesty, I confirm this present concession. New Orleans, June 15, 1792." On the 9th of April, 1795, a sale of the said land was made to Colin Lacom, and duly approved by the Governor, the Baron de Carondelet, who had, on the 9th of March previous, written to the Indian agent to engage the Indians to remove to another place, and to give them more considerable annual presents. All these documents, and the evidence taken in the claim, are on file, and may be referred to. The commissioners who investigated the title, and ascertained the boundaries, have recommended for confirmation nine thousand three hundred American acres.

Your committee, having attentively examined the title of Joseph Gillard, are of opinion that it is a legal and valid title, according to the laws and usages of the Spanish Government, and recommend the same for confirmation for the quantity of nine thousand three hundred acres, and report a bill.

RECOGNITION OF THE CLAIM OF MARQUIS DE MAISON ROUGE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 10, 1817.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Chew and Relf, owners and representatives of the owners of the claim of the Marquis de Maison Rouge, on the Ouachita river, State of Louisiana, have had the same under consideration, and report as follows:

The Marquis de Maison Rouge obtained, in consequence of a contract with the Governor of Louisiana, dated 17th of March, 1795, which was duly approved by the King of Spain, the 14th of July, 1795, a title to a tract of land, of which the following is a copy:

NEW ORLEANS, June 20, 1797.

The Baron de Carondelet, Knight of the Order of St. John, marshal de camp of the royal armies, Governor General, vice patron of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, inspector, &c.: Forasmuch as the Marquis de Maison Rouge is near completing the establishment of the Ouachita, (Washita,) which he was authorized to make for thirty families, by the royal order of July, 1795, and desirous to remove, for the future, all doubt respecting other families or colonists who may come to establish themselves:

We destine and appropriate, exclusively for the establishment of the aforesaid Marquis de Maison Rouge, by virtue of the powers granted to us by the King, the thirty superficial leagues marked in the plan annexed to this instrument, with the limits and boundaries designated, with our approbation, by the Surveyor General, Don Carlos Trudeau, under the terms stipulated and contracted for by the said Marquis de Maison Rouge; and, that it may at all times stand good, we give the present, signed with our hands, sealed with our seal at arms, and countersigned by the underwritten honorary Commissary at War, and Secretary for His Majesty for this commandancy general.

THE BARON DE CARONDELET,
ANDRE LOPES ARMISTO.

NOTE.—That, in conformity with his contract, the Marquis de Maison Rouge is not to admit or establish any American on the land included in this grant.

THE BARON DE CARONDELET.

The committee, having duly examined the above title, are of opinion that it is a legal and formal title, according to the laws and usages of the province of Louisiana, and that the same ought to be confirmed, and report a bill.

CLAIM OF GEORGIA FOR THE CESSION OF THE YAZOO COUNTRY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 11, 1817.

Mr. HALL, from the committee to whom was referred the message of the President of the United States of the 6th instant, calling the attention of Congress to the interference of an act passed on the 31st of March, 1814, providing for the indemnification of certain claimants of public lands in the Mississippi Territory, with the rights and interest of the State of Georgia, reported:

That, by the articles of agreement and cession, entered into on the 24th day of April, 1802, between the State of Georgia and the United States, the State of Georgia cedes to the United States all the right, title, and claim which the said State has to the jurisdiction and soil of the lands situated within the boundaries of the United States south of the State of Tennessee, with the extent and limits therein mentioned, upon the following express conditions, and subject thereto; that is to say, that, out of the first nett proceeds of the sales of the lands thus ceded, which nett proceeds shall be estimated by deducting from the gross amount of sales the expense incurred in surveying, and incident to the sale, the United States shall pay, at their Treasury, one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the State of Georgia. A provision in the same instrument authorizes the United States to appropriate five millions of acres, or the proceeds thereof, to satisfy, quiet, or compensating for any claims other than those before recognised, in such manner as not to interfere with the above mentioned payment to the State of Georgia. The 4th section of the act of the 31st of March, 1814, provides that the stock, or certificates to be issued under the authority thereof, shall be receivable in payment of the public lands in the Mississippi Territory after the date of such certificate. This section, your committee conceive, if carried into full operation, would be a departure from the compact entered into with the State of Georgia, and a violation of her rights and interest secured by the articles of agreement and cession. In order, therefore, that justice may be done, and the faith of the United States remain unimpaired, your committee recommend that provision be made by law for paying to the State of Georgia the amount in money which may be received by the United States in stock for lands sold in the Mississippi Territory, until the balance now due that State shall be discharged, and ask leave to report a bill for that purpose.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

FEBRUARY 6, 1817.

On comparing the fourth section of the act of Congress, passed March 31, 1814, providing for the indemnification of certain claimants of public lands in the Mississippi Territory, with the article of agreement and cession between the United States and State of Georgia, bearing date April 30, 1802, it appears that the engagements entered into with the claimants interfere with the rights and interests secured to that State. I recommend to Congress that provision be made, by law, for payments to the State of Georgia, equal to the amount of Mississippi stock which shall be paid into the Treasury, until the stipulated sum of $1,250,000 shall be completed.

JAMES MADISON.

The following papers, on the same subject, were subsequently laid before the Senate by the Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands:

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 13, 1817.

In answer to the inquiry contained in your letter of the 11th instant, I have the honor to state—

1st. That there has been paid to the State of Georgia, out of the moneys arising from the sale of the public lands in the Mississippi Territory, the sum of $313,441 33, as per statement A, from the Register's office, herewith enclosed.

2d. That the sum remaining in the Treasury of the State of Georgia of the money deposited by the Yazoo purchasers, and amounting, according to the report of the Commissioners of the United States, bearing date November, 1804, to $189,304 85½, has not been carried to the credit of the United States. The fifth section providing for the indemnification of certain claimants of public lands in the Mississippi Territory, directs the commissioners to pay over the money referred to to the State of Georgia in part payment of the one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, after sufficient releases from the claimants to the United States shall have been lodged in the office of the Secretary of State. This payment has not been made, and the money remains in the State treasury, equally useless to the State of Georgia and to the United States. It is believed that most of the claimants have complied with the provisions of the law in question, and that this money might now, with great propriety, be transferred to the State.

3d. By the returns made to this Department, and the report of the persons appointed to examine the books of the Receivers of Public Moneys in the Mississippi Territory, it appears that there has been received about one hundred thousand dollars of Mississippi stock.

On the first day of October, 1815, the whole amount of money due for lands in the Mississippi Territory is ascertained to have been $643,448 74½. As the Mississippi stock was issued principally in the months of July and August of that year, a small portion of the amount above stated may be discharged in that stock.

The papers, marked B, show the receipts from the public lands in that Territory from the 30th September, 1815, to the 30th November, 1816, to the amount of $464,850 28, which, after deducting the amount of Mississippi stock received, may be stated in round numbers at $350,000. As the expenses of surveying and of sale are to be deducted, this sum will be subject to a further reduction, so that the amount now payable to the State cannot be safely estimated at more than $300,000. This sum, added to that which has been already paid, and to the amount now in the treasury of Georgia, form together the sum of $802,746 18½; which, being deducted from $1,250,000, leaves $447,253 81½ yet to be paid to Georgia. Of the sum due on the 30th September, 1815, and receivable into the Treasury in cash, to the exclusion of Mississippi stock, it is not probable that more than $150,000 will be paid during the present year, whilst the amount of Mississippi stock will probably exceed one million of dollars. An appropriation of $300,000, or of $350,000, payable as the stock shall be received, will probably be sufficient to carry into effect the recommendation of the President.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient and very humble servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

RECOGNITION OF A FRENCH GRANT IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 18, 1817.

Mr. SHARP made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Madame Renaut Maynoud de Pancement, heiress of Philip Renaut, and of her husband, Jean Baptiste François Maynoud de Pancement, by their agent, Philip Mercier, have had the subject under consideration, and beg leave to report:

That, in the year 1717, the King of France granted to the company of the "West" all the country watered by the Mississippi, under the name of Louisiana; that, in the year 1723, the agent of the company, and the officer of the Crown granted, in free allodial tenure, to the said Philip Renaut, "one league in front at the Pemeteau village, on the river of the Illinois, looking to the east, and bounding on the lake which bears the same name as the village, and on the other side by the bluffs opposite the village, half a league above, by five leagues in depth, the point of the compass following the river of the Illinois down the same upon one side, and ascending by the river Arcoury, which forms the middle through the rest of the depth." The committee are fully satisfied that the grant to Renaut is genuine, and made by competent authority. It is not thought necessary to trace Renaut and his heirs to this period. The company of the west failed in 1730, and, in the following year, the country was re-annexed to the Crown of France, without prejudice to grants made in the mean time by the company. Other land was granted in 1723 to Renaut, by the same authority, which he disposed of about twenty years thereafter.

In 1763, that part of Louisiana, east of the Mississippi, and north of the thirty-third degree of north latitude, passed under the dominion of Great Britain, and, by the treaty of 1783, was acquired by the United States.

By the act of Congress of the 26th of March, 1804, any person claiming land "by virtue of any legal grant made by the French Government, prior to the treaty of Paris of the 10th of February, 1763, is authorized to file, with the Register of the Land Office of the district, a notice of his claim." By this act, full power is given to the Register and Receiver of Public Moneys to determine, according to justice and equity, upon all claims that shall be so filed. Under this act the representatives of Renaut exhibited to the Register and Receiver this claim; a special report was made by them on this claim, on the 24th of February, 1810, in which they detailed the facts, but declined giving a decision. Mr. Gallatin, then Secretary of the Treasury, addressed a letter to them, requiring them to make up a decision. In answer, they express doubts of their power at that time to act; but they say, if we have such power, we declare our opinion to be in favor of the claim. Their letter is not to be found, but its existence is positively proved by the honorable Jeremiah Morrow and Samuel McKee, who were formerly members of the Committee on Public Lands.

Upon the whole, the members of the committee are unanimously of opinion that the claim ought to be confirmed, and report a bill for that purpose.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN TENNESSEE, UNDER GRANTS FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 16, 1817.

To the honorable the Congress of the United States:

NOVEMBER 25, 1817.

The General Assembly of the State of Tennessee would be unmindful of one of the first duties which they owe, not only to the State, but to many individuals whose interest they represent, should they omit to bring to your recollection the subject upon which they cannot but feel great solicitude. In the year 1783, while the State of North Carolina was a sovereign and independent State, when she had an acknowledged right to make what disposition she deemed most proper of any vacant land within her limits, and while Tennessee was a part of that State, she passed "an act for opening the land office for the redemption of specie and other certificates, and discharging the arrears due to the army;" and, in and by the provisions of that act, offered for sale a large quantity of her western lands, at the price of ten pounds per hundred acres. Shortly afterwards many of her citizens, as they were well authorized to do, repaired to the office thus opened, made entries of land, and paid the consideration money required of them, for the quantities by them respectively purchased.

That State, through the agency of her officers, procured to have surveys made and grants issued to many of these individuals, as by her laws she had promised. Upon some of those entries, no surveys have ever yet been made or patents issued.

Had the citizens who made these purchases chose immediately afterwards to have taken possession of their respective tracts, no power could have made any legal objection thereto. The State of North Carolina, afterwards, by her act of cession, in the year 1789, and her deed in pursuance thereof, granted to the United States all her lands which lay within the limits of what is now the State of Tennessee; but to this grant she attached several conditions, among which is one saving the right which individuals had acquired to lands under her authority.

In the constitution of the United States it is expressly provided, that private property shall not be taken for public purposes, without making just compensation therefor.

Although individuals had made purchases, paid the consideration money, and many of them had procured grants, the highest evidence of title, and others were entitled to grants upon their entries, yet the United States, after those rights had been thus acquired, made treaties with that tribe of Indians called Chickasaws, by virtue of which they have guarantied to them the possession and enjoyment of large quantities of those lands which now lie within the limits of this State, and have, as far as their statutory provisions can make it so, rendered it unlawful for those individuals to occupy or even to visit their lands.

Of those treaties and statutes, this General Assembly believe they have much cause to complain. By virtue of them, as well their citizens as those of North Carolina, have long been prohibited from the use and occupation of land for which they had paid an adequate consideration from thirty to forty years ago, and this without any thing like compensation having been either made or offered, at the same time that this prohibition is in force, of a people who have not either a hut or a habitation upon lands within the limits of this State. The consequences of these regulations are most injurious to the State of Tennessee; she is by them deprived of that strength and influence to which her limits entitle her, and of those resources and improvements which settlements upon these lands would naturally afford.

But if these regulations have been and are injurious to the State, the evils have not stopped here. They have, without doubt, heretofore been, in a great degree, and, if these restrictions are not speedily removed, must soon be entirely destructive of most if not all those private rights so fairly acquired.

Time must soon (if it has not already done so) so deface or obliterate the marks by which claims can either be identified, or the boundaries ascertained, that, although our citizens may have the highest evidence of title, with which men can be furnished, to the enjoyment of landed property, yet, because they have been deprived of the possession of this property, they will be forever unable to ascertain the spot covered by those evidences.

This General Assembly have too much confidence in the justice of your honorable body to believe that you will suffer this state of things much longer to continue. They must, therefore, respectfully but earnestly urge that such steps may be taken as will remove those obstructions which the treaties and acts of Congress have thrown in the way of the possession and occupation of these lands, purchased by individuals under the laws of the State of North Carolina.

LAND TITLES IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 19, 1817.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, the memorial of the Legislature of the State of Louisiana:

Your memorialists beg leave to address you on a subject of great importance to the interests and happiness of a portion of their constituents, the situation of the land titles in Florida, and to pray from your honorable body the enactment of such laws upon the subject as justice and sound policy may dictate.

With regard to the land titles of that portion of our State, they are of a nature so peculiar to themselves, and they have been created by a state of things, in relation to the different Governments of that country, so extraordinary and unexampled, that no right understanding can be attained, with regard to them, without taking a retrospect of its history, of the different nations who have owned it, the period of time they remained in possession, and the conduct and policy of each, as it regarded the settlement of the country, and the disposal of the public lands.

The following concise, but, it is believed, correct view, is submitted to Congress:

At an early period, France possessed and exercised sovereignty over Florida, as far east from the Mississippi as the river Perdido. While in possession of that country, her first and continued policy was to accomplish its settlement. For this purpose, land was granted freely to individuals, and on the most easy conditions. From every information which can be acquired on the subject, it appears that this Government endeavored, by every possible inducement, to establish a population in that part of her American provinces. Encouragement, therefore, of the most liberal kind was given to settlers, agreeably to this policy, during the possession of France, up to 1763.

At this last mentioned epoch, France, by treaty, transfers to Great Britain the sovereignty of the country, and the policy of that Government, while in possession of it, seems to have been little different from that which governed its first owners. Although the form and mode of obtaining titles for land may have been, in some measure, different, the same feelings and same necessity produced the same results, and grants for different quantities of land were liberally conceded. In effect, without such a policy, that country could have been of little or no value to either of the before mentioned Powers. Settlement alone could give to the colony security, permanency, or value; and, without great inducements from the mother country, men could not be expected to establish themselves in a remote province, whose advantages were as yet merely speculative, where the proximity of Indian nations rendered their lives and properties insecure, and where the apprehension of a deleterious and unhealthy climate all tended to check and repulse that emigration which might have flowed into it under more favorable auspices.

During the wars of the American revolution, the Government of Spain fitted out an expedition against West Florida, and conquered the whole of the province, together with the establishment of Natchez, Baton Rouge, and Mobile.

Your memorialists feel that it is scarcely necessary for them to state to your honorable body the kind and beneficent policy which the Spanish Government pursued with regard to her public lands in that province. Ample evidence of her generous conduct in that respect has been furnished by the land titles of Louisiana; and Congress have given their assent to that evidence, and their conviction of the extent of the liberality of the former sovereign, by the various acts passed in relation to the land titles of the former Territory of Orleans. But your memorialists cannot refrain from observing that, to every motive which induced Spain to grant freely her lands in that part of her possessions, there was superadded, with respect to Florida, the necessity of making it a barrier between them and the surrounding neighbors. On the western side Louisiana was bounded by Spanish provinces, and contained within it but small tribes of Indians, whose submission was ascertained, and their fidelity assured; on the eastern, however, a quite different state of things existed. Hence we find a more than usual degree of liberal policy pursued, with regard to her public lands in that section of country, and temptations of every kind held out to settlers. It is true that, in some instances, the lands were sold, but more generally they were granted as pure donations, which exhibit themselves in complete grants, warrants, orders of survey, and settlement rights.

From this short retrospect, it will be seen that, under every successive Government that has had dominion in West Florida, the same policy, with little variation, has been pursued, the same anxiety to people the province, the same liberality in conceding lands, the same indulgent spirit from the Government to those who settled or acquired property under it, has marked them all. French, British, and Spanish, up to the moment when the United States took possession, and it now remains for the national Government to decide whether this policy, so invariably pursued, will receive its sanction or not; whether the inhabitants of that country who rejoiced at the event that placed them under the American Government, and hailed the approach of its public functionaries as their deliverers and friends, shall find, in place of protection of already acquired rights, and security for future ones, a system introduced which shakes both the foundation, and refuses them the enjoyment of that which even a monarch bestowed on them.

But your memorialists beg leave to represent to your honorable body that, in their opinion, the giving effect to the policy of the former Government of Florida, with regard to land titles, is no longer a question of expediency with the United States: it is one of strict justice, flowing from the principles of good faith, and depending on the solemn stipulation of treaty. If Florida is considered as making a part of Louisiana, and as such transferred to the United States by the treaty with France, (and your memorialists know of no other title by which the American Government claims it,) that treaty secures to the people residing in it, among other things, the full enjoyment of their property. To ascertain what that propriety is as it respects lands, recourse must be had not to any rules which may now be arbitrarily established, but to those which formed the principles by which the Spanish Government was regulated. To every tract of soil, therefore, that is now claimed in that country, which, according to the laws, usages, and customs existing, and in force there while Spain was in possession, the claimant would have had a good title, your memorialists think an undoubted right now exists.

This construction of the treaty, by which the United States hold this country, is perfectly consonant with reason and justice, and has already the sanction of precedent to support it—a precedent established by no less authority than Congress, who, in various acts passed in relation to the land titles in the former Territory of Orleans, have uniformly taken this as the basis of every legislative provision they have passed on the subject, and in conformity to which they have confirmed every claim and title which was good under the former Government, or which would have been considered good by that Government had it still remained in possession of the colony.

Your memorialists ask for their constituents the enactment of the same wise and beneficent regulations which have already produced such happy effect in the other portion of the State of Louisiana. There is nothing in the character of the inhabitants of that division which does not entitle them to the same favor; the treaty by which the United States hold both is the same, and your memorialists trust that the same even-handed justice will be extended to each.

Your memorialists submit the following statement of the various claims which exist for land in Florida, and which they respectfully conceive Congress should confirm:

1. The patent or complete grant from the Spanish Government; also, British and French patents, when accompanied with a Spanish confirmation, and bearing date anterior to the change of sovereignty in 1813, where no evidence of fraud exists; provided, however, that no such confirmation is required to be made to the prejudice of an actual settlement made previous to the actual survey or location of such title.

2. All incomplete titles bearing date previous to the change of sovereignty in 1813, where actual survey or settlement has been made on the same to the extent of one league square. No more than one claim of this description is required to be confirmed to any one individual, unless they can show they are the representatives of another; and no confirmation of this description is requested to the prejudice of an actual settlement formed previous to the survey of such incomplete title.

3. Claims held under a settlement right within the limits of a mile square, and inhabited and cultivated anterior to the change of possession in 1813, and a right of preference in favor of such as may have settled since possession, up to the date of the law which Congress may pass regulating land titles in that country; that those settlers who have since settled may be enabled to purchase their improvements without competition from others bidding on their labor.

On these claims your memorialists do not feel it necessary to trouble your honorable body at length, as all of the same description have been confirmed in the old Territory of Orleans. If the mass of incomplete titles form a large portion of the claims, Congress in their wisdom cannot fail to ascribe it to the true cause, the negligence of the settlers. Where men enjoyed all the advantages, under an order of survey or requête, or settlement right which they had under a complete grant, it is not extraordinary if they took no pains to clothe the title with forms; and that, too, more especially when living under a Government where little or no attention was paid to these things, and where great indulgence in this respect on one hand was repaid by unbounded confidence on the other.

But your memorialists, in presenting the claims of their fellow-citizens, and in asking for them nothing more than they conceive strict justice requires, would fail to discharge their duty if they did not express to your honorable body their great anxiety and alarm at a bill introduced into the Senate of the United States at the last session of Congress, entitled "An act for adjusting the claims to land, and establishing a land office for the district of lands lying east of the Mississippi river and island of Orleans." The first section of that bill provides, among other things, that all British grants, which were valid agreeable to the laws, usages, and customs of that Government, shall be valid, and are recognised as complete titles against the United States, or against any title derived from the United States. Your memorialists beg leave to call the attention of Congress to the provisions of the treaty of 1783 between Great Britain and Spain, wherein the right of Spain is acknowledged to Florida. In that treaty it is provided that Spain shall allow, to such as do not choose to take the oath of allegiance, and become the subjects of Spain, a certain time to dispose of their property, and leave the country. In obedience to this treaty, the Spanish Government issued a proclamation requiring the inhabitants to come forward and enregister their claims, and, such as choose to reside in the country, to take the oath of allegiance, and receive a Spanish patent for the amount claimed in the original British concession, while those who did not intend to become subjects were advised, in the proclamation, of the time they were allowed in the treaty to dispose of their lands.

In a subsequent proclamation a prolongation of the time specified in the first was given, in which it was declared that those who did not, within the time then stated, comply with the conditions of the proclamation, should forever forfeit their claim to such lands, and that the same would be annexed to the royal domain. The British proprietors, by moving off in mass, yielded their assent to it. The land thus reannexed to the domain has since been granted out to different individuals, or is now held by settlement right under the Spanish Government, and it would produce the most disastrous consequences to the inhabitants of that portion of country, if a mass of titles which, for such a length of time, have been regarded as obsolete and extinct, should now be recalled into vigor by any law of the United States. The injury which is apprehended from Congress acknowledging this description of claims as good against the United States, is not confined to the injury it inflicts on all those claiming by donation from the United States, and conflicting with the British claims—some of which are settlements made by permission of the Spanish Government, and peaceably possessed for more than twenty years—but, armed with such an acknowledgment, it is apprehended they might successfully contend with an incomplete Spanish grant subsequently acquired, although predicated on the forfeiture of such British grant, under the Spanish Government, which, your memorialists are well persuaded, Congress never can intend. But your memorialists conceive, as they have once been rendered null by the former sovereign authority of that country, and as a considerable part of Florida has been settled under that conviction, that it is wholly impolitic and unwise for the Government of the United States (coming in possession of the country under Spain) to revive them; and by thus giving them additional force and authority, to render less secure those who claim the land under Spanish concessions, and who have their property, as it existed under the former Government, secured to them by the solemn stipulation of treaty.

Your memorialists have in vain sought for the cause of those distinctions, so unfriendly to the interests of Florida, which are found to exist between this bill and the laws regulating the land titles in the old Territory of Orleans; whilst the period fixed on for the confirmation of complete titles in the old Territory of Orleans is made the date of possession, we find the period fixed on in this bill, for the confirmation of complete titles in Florida, is not only anterior to the ratification, but even before the signing of the treaty, by which the United States profess to have acquired the country, and nearly thirteen years anterior to possession.

The distinction between incomplete titles in those two sections of the State, as established by this bill, is yet more wide and prejudicial to the interests of Florida; for, while the incomplete title in the old Territory of Orleans is confirmed to the extent of one league, up to the date of possession, the incomplete title of Florida, with the same qualifications, is made to depend on a gratuitous donation, confined to twelve hundred and eighty acres, for nearly thirteen years previous to possession.

Your memorialists are at a loss to conceive why this period of the 1st of October, 1800, is fixed in the bill as the time beyond which an incomplete title cannot be confirmed. If Congress, in legislating on the subject, has established that epoch as one at which the right of Spain ceased to that country, and that, consequently, all her acts afterwards were invalid, although she was supposed to remain in possession, and appear to all mankind as the sovereign; if such has been the ground of this claim in the bill, your memorialists trust they can convince your honorable body that it is as incorrect in principle as it would be cruel and unjust in operation.

It is universally known that Spain was permitted to remain in possession of Florida for a long time subsequent to the 1st of October, 1800. Her authority was not disputed by any official act or public declaration of the United States. Laws passed, from time to time, by Congress, considered it as a foreign country. The proclamation of the Spanish Commissioners, on transferring Louisiana to the French republic, expressly declared that this portion of country remained of right in the possession of Spain, and was not transferred to France. No public declaration of the Government of France, or of the United States, contradicted this for a long time subsequent, and if, as it were to establish the idea of the right of Spain, the Government of the Union paid duties on public goods in American vessels passing the Mobile.

From these facts, and the state of things growing out of them, there was no person that was not justified in believing that Spain was the true owner of West Florida. The real limits of the country, acquired by the United States by the treaty of Ildefonso, are not publicly ascertained to this day; it is possible that this portion made a part of Louisiana, and ought to have been transferred with the rest of the United States; but how could the world know this, when the American Government did, to all appearance, acquiesce in the boundaries established by Spain? or how, at least, could the Spanish subjects know that their Government, which, under such circumstances, was suffered to remain in possession of the country, had no right to the same? There is a maxim of public law pervading the system of every civilized country on earth, which makes a distinction between the acts of Government de facto and de jure, which recognises the authority of the first, and refuses it to the latter. Your memorialists ask the application of it here, on behalf of their constituents, and, if it is refused them, then they beg leave to say that every act done by Spain in that country, since the treaty of Ildefonso, is null, all her fiscal, all her judicial acts are void; and, by the magic of secret treaty, the inhabitants must have owed allegiance to the new Government before they even received an intimation that the sovereignty of the country was transferred.

There is scarcely any one prepared to go to this length; yet who can mark the distinction between acts of the one or the other description? between judgments given for the price of these lands in suits by individuals, and the act of the Government conceding them? between taxes regularly paid on property, and the right of the public to grant the object taxed? between the principal, which makes the subject, at the peril of his life, owe allegiance to the Government which is in possession of the country where he resides, and yet prohibits him from receiving that favor and protection which is the recompense of the fidelity he is sworn to preserve?

But if any other or third party could urge, as an objection to the claimants of lands in Florida, that the Government existing there from the year 1800 up to 1813, (the time when the American nation first unequivocally asserted their right to it,) had no authority to concede the soil, surely, at least, such an argument cannot come from the United States, by whose act alone this confusion and difficulty has been created. If their right was clear, why did they not assert it? If Spain was an usurper, why did they not evict her, or, at least, publicly assert their claim? And will the National Councils of a great and magnanimous people now say, that, after leaving this country for such a length of time in the possession of another Government, they will take advantage of an error created by themselves, and punish in this way an ignorance which flows from their own act? Your memorialists trust not; the wise and generous policy which Congress has pursued, with regard to the land titles of the former Territory of Orleans, teach them to expect the same liberality for the other portion of the State, and to confidently hope that the claims for land in Florida, as already mentioned in this memorial, may receive the sanction of the National Government.

In legislating on this subject, it is hoped and expected that the situation of many of those who are now settled in that portion of country will not escape the attention of Congress, nor fail to call forth their liberality in their behalf. For a considerable time, antecedent to the change of Government, great irregularity prevailed in the land office of Florida, an irregularity which was in no small degree heightened by its removal to Pensacola. The confusion, which was the natural consequence of this state of things, was so great, that, in many cases, a very erroneous knowledge existed of the land already conceded, so that, in many instances, it is apprehended, settlements have been located, and improvements made on land already granted. If, therefore, it should hereafter appear that any of the actual settlers shall be evicted from the land now held by them, by reason of titles existing for the tract, it is earnestly expected that Congress will issue them a warrant for the same quantity, with liberty to locate the same on any public land within the limits of the State of Louisiana. If the former Government remained in possession of the country, there is no doubt but, on the discovery of the error, that this course would be pursued; and justice requires that the United States should imitate their example. They have taken the place of Spain, and should extend to the actual settlers, at the change of possession, every right which they enjoyed when that change took place.

Your memorialists beg leave to represent to Congress, that a number of those claiming land in Florida have not enregistered their claims with the commissioner appointed for that purpose; some, for want of a knowledge that it was required; others, from the circumstance of the office of the commissioner having been closed before they expected it; and others, from absence, or being engaged in the service of the country during the dangers which threatened us previous to the close of the war. In this situation are many complete patents, and other claims of the fairest and most equitable nature. It is, therefore, hoped and solicited that Congress will appoint a commissioner, authorized to receive and enregister such claims as have not been yet entered, and receive additional testimony in confirmation of claims already entered.

Thus your memorialists have endeavored to trace the situation of Florida, and to show what the interest of that section of the State requires. The many privations and sufferings that portion of the State has sustained, give them strong claims on the indulgent generosity of the General Government; and on the justice of the Congress of the United States your memorialists rely with the most unqualified confidence.

LAND TITLES IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 23, 1817.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress convened:

Possessing the necessary and constitutional right of remonstrance, the undersigned, members of the Legislature of Louisiana from the district of Florida, are compelled, by the most imperious motives of public duty, solemnly to protest against a certain memorial yesterday addressed by the said Legislature to the National Congress.

The grounds of their protest are as follows:

1st. They cannot discover any obligation, either legal or moral, on the part of the Government of the United States, to pursue the same policy, as to the confirmation of land titles in Florida, that was pursued in the old Territory of Orleans, the two sections of country being, in fact and in principle, widely different.

2d. Nearly the whole mass of titles, and particularly those of the large claims existing in Florida, having originated since the treaty of 1803, by no possible construction can the stipulations of that treaty have any effect in countenancing or favoring such claims.

3d. Agreeably to the strict principles of national law, connected with the solemn stipulations of treaty, we cannot conceive that any authority or power existed in the Spanish Government to sell and dispose of any part of Louisiana, subsequent to the treaty of St. Ildefonso, (October, 1800;) and that, if the Congress of the United States have, in the disposition of claims in the Territory of Orleans, sanctioned any originating since, (October, 1800,) they must have been governed by motives of a liberal and generous nature, and not from convictions of a positive legal right.

4th. From the statement of facts on the face of the memorial, it would seem that the Government of the United States, as well by their conduct as solemn declarations, have acknowledged Florida to be unconnected with the purchase of Louisiana, and that they have consequently taken possession of it alone by the strong arm of power—a statement, if true, (but which the undersigned, in perfect good faith, do most solemnly deny,) vitally affects the interest of the people of Florida, and the honor and fair fame of the Government.

5th. It seems to be a circumstance well understood that the granting of lands in Florida, after the purchase of the country by the United States, was chiefly to the emoluments of the local functionary granting them, and that a scene of the most illegal, iniquitous, and destructive speculation in the vacant lands of the nation was carried on with little interruption, until the United States, finding that longer forbearance could only be productive of additional fraud and injury, took formal possession of it. This remark we believe to be applicable to most of the titles originating since 1803.

6th. The confirmation of the claims, sought for by the memorial, would arrest forever the population of West Florida, by securing a monopoly of all the valuable lands in it to a few great speculators, and in destruction of the rights of honest and valuable settlers.

7th. Although the United States suffered the local authorities of Spain to continue in possession of the country some years after its purchase, it is known to the world that it originated alone from mild, pacific, and conciliatory views, and not from any doubt or mistrust of their title. The sovereignty of Spain could only have extended to the government of her own subjects, and to the regulation of her municipal concerns, but surely not to the alienating and disposing of the vacant lands of the country that had been long before, by plenary authority, by solemn treaty, and for a fair equivalent, conveyed and disposed of.

Wherefore, for the foregoing premises and considerations, we, seven out of nine of the Representatives of Florida, in the Legislature of Louisiana, appealing to the integrity and good sense of the Government, for the correctness of our views, as well as to the Searcher of hearts, for the purity of our motives, do most solemnly protest against the aforesaid memorial.

APPLICATION TO CHANGE THE MODE OF SURVEYING ISLANDS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 23, 1817.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury on the subject of changing the laws regulating surveys in regard to the islands of the Tennessee and other rivers, have had the same under consideration, and report:

That the manner of surveying the public lands, as regulated by the several acts on that subject, has heretofore answered all the purposes of individuals, as well as of the Government; that it has not been complained of, to the knowledge of the committee, in its application to the islands situated in the numerous rivers of the Western country; that, although it will occasionally happen that certain islands may be cut up and divided into small fractions of sections and quarter sections, yet this inconvenience as frequently and as necessarily happens in the peninsulas and points of land formed by the sinuosities of rivers.

The committee, therefore, respectfully report, that it is inexpedient, in this particular, to alter the laws regulating the surveys of the public lands.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 10, 1817.

The enclosed communication, from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, recommending special provision for surveying the islands in the Tennessee river, is respectfully submitted to the committee over whose deliberations you preside.

As there may be islands of considerable magnitude in other rivers flowing through the public lands, to which the provisions recommended in relation to those in the Tennessee will be equally applicable, it is respectfully suggested that the consideration of the question may lead to the adoption of general, instead of special provision, if the committee shall be of opinion that any change in the existing laws is necessary.

I have the honor to be your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Hon. T. B. ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 22, 1817.

I have the honor to enclose an extract from a letter dated 24th ultimo, from Mr. Coffee, Surveyor General, &c., relative to the best mode of surveying the islands in the river Tennessee. I apprehend that the mode he has suggested cannot be adopted without authority from Congress.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

Hon. WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Extract of a letter dated 24th October, 1817, from John Coffee, Surveyor General, &c., to the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

I have not surveyed the islands of Tennessee river. I omitted extending the sectional lines through them, as it was discovered that it cut them in pieces, so as to destroy the value of them to purchasers, if surveyed in that way. They are generally narrow, but several miles in length. If provision could be made to survey them, where small, entire, and where large, divide them by lines crossing the island at right angles, they would sell to much better advantage. It is fair to presume that the islands will be bought by men of wealth, and owners of slaves; the fertility of the soil will induce such to cultivate them; but, owing to the unhealthy situation of the islands, the poor cannot live on them, or cultivate them. I am, therefore, of opinion, if they are offered in compact bodies, they will sell much higher. I will await your instructions before I touch them.

I am, &c.

JOHN COFFEE.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN TENNESSEE, UNDER GRANTS FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 29, 1817.

To the Congress of the United States:

The General Assembly of the State of Tennessee beg leave to address your honorable body on the subject of the unsatisfied claims for the land in this State, derived under the authority of the State of North Carolina.

In presenting to your view the wishes of the Legislature of this State, we will consider at the same time the memorial of the Legislature of North Carolina, presented to your body at the last session, relative to the same subject. [See No. 249.]

We unite with North Carolina in calling to your attention the situation of this country at the time when the respective laws of that State were passed for the sale of the western lands. To discharge the debts created during the revolutionary war, she opened an office for the sale of her lands as far as the banks of the Mississippi; and, as a reward for the services of her officers and soldiers, she issued to each person a warrant for such quantity of land as his grade entitled him to receive. These warrants were directed to be surveyed in a district set apart for that purpose. Officers were appointed to survey those lands, and different periods fixed, within which the same should be completed and grants issued, which were enlarged from time to time, until the year 1792. At the date of the act of cession, in 1789, all the land within the State of Tennessee was subject to satisfy those different entries and warrants, except the country south of French Broad and Holston rivers, which was reserved for the use of the Cherokee Indians, by the 5th section of an act passed in the year 1783.

In the year 1789, North Carolina ceded to the United States all the vacant territory in what is now the State of Tennessee; which cession was subject to certain conditions, one of which is as follows:

"And where entries have been made agreeable to law, and titles under them not perfected by grant or otherwise, then, in that case, the Governor for the time being shall, and he is hereby required to perfect, from time to time, such titles in such manner as if this act had never been passed."

At the time this act was passed by North Carolina, and accepted by the United States, the time limited by the laws of that State, within which all the claimants of land were required to have their surveys finished, and to procure grants, expired in the year 1792; and there was no reservation in said act of cession that North Carolina might enlarge the time of making surveys and issuing grants; and it would seem as if North Carolina had no other right to perfect titles on unsatisfied claims, except such as she could exercise within the time limited by her laws, which expired in the year 1792.

The State of North Carolina, after the year 1792, discovered that, from the Indian wars, and the unsettled state of the country, but small progress had been made towards completing and returning the surveys by her officers; and, being unwilling that her citizens should lose their claims, extended the time by different acts for making and returning surveys, until about the year 1800.

In the mean time the State of Tennessee was admitted into the Union, in the year 1796, as an independent State, and her constitution was accepted by the United States. Upon the admittance of this State into the Union, and the acceptance of her constitution, no condition was imposed which would deprive her of the right to the ungranted land within her limits. Tennessee, accordingly, in the year 1799, asserted her right to the ungranted land, as a consequence of her possessing an independent and sovereign Government. The holders of warrants issued by North Carolina, she insisted had no right to survey and obtain grants for land, unless those grants had been issued within the time limited by the laws of North Carolina, when the cession from that State was made, in 1789; and that the United States had ceased to possess any right to the vacant land, by not reserving her claim when Tennessee was admitted into the Union as an independent State.

In consequence of this claim, and of the laws passed on that subject, the issuance of grants was suspended by North Carolina. The State of Tennessee afterwards became desirous that the warrants issued by North Carolina should be ripened into grants, and proposed to that State that the right to perfect titles on those warrants should be transferred to her; and, accordingly, in the year 1803, North Carolina passed an act authorizing the State of Tennessee to issue grants and perfect titles to all claims of land lying in the State of Tennessee, which remained, and were, by the act of cession of 1789, reserved to be issued and perfected by North Carolina, the assent of the Congress of the United States being obtained thereto. In the year 1804 this act was ratified by the State of Tennessee, and the compact, as between the two States, was closed.

It then remained that the assent of Congress should be obtained, and, accordingly, in the year 1806, the Congress of the United States passed an act entitled "An act to authorize the State of Tennessee to issue grants and perfect titles to certain lands therein described, and to settle the claims to the vacant and unappropriated lands within the same."

We represent that the said act of 1806 did not comply, in extent, with the wishes of this State. We would have preferred that the assent of the United States would have been given by Congress to the full extent of the compact between the two States; but that honorable body, composed in part of the Representatives and Senators from each of those States, declined at that time giving their assent, except so far as is expressed in said act of 1806.

The Indian title having been extinguished about that time to a considerable territory in this State, and there being numerous claimants under North Carolina residing in that State and Tennessee, who were anxious to procure grants, this State, in the year 1806, enacted laws to carry into effect the provisions of the act of 1803, as far as was permitted by the United States. Offices were established for entering lands, and for obtaining grants. Commissioners were appointed for adjudicating the warrants. In exercising this power, the Legislature of this State authorized all the vacant land to be entered east of the Elk river line, except the land reserved for the use of the Cherokee Indians, by the act of 1783. Those offices have been kept open until this time, and all, or nearly all, of the vacant land fit for cultivation, has been entered and granted. In entering and obtaining titles, the citizens of North Carolina and Tennessee have enjoyed equal advantages. There are yet remaining many warrants unsatisfied, and there is not land, east and north of said line, out of which to satisfy those claims. All of those warrants, as well as the entries originally located south and west of the line, were, by the laws of North Carolina, subject to be located in that section.

We further represent that the Indian title is now extinguished to a part of the country south and west of the said Elk river line, and many persons are residing on the same without any means of obtaining titles. Many other citizens of North Carolina and this State are possessed of entries and warrants for land in the same section, who are desirous of having the same perfected into grants, but are at present deprived of that privilege.

Your honorable body have been informed, by the memorial of the Legislature of North Carolina, that the right to issue grants in that section of the State is claimed by North Carolina, and has been exercised under a law by that State passed in 1811. In pursuance of that act, a surveyor proceeded to receive warrants and make surveys, and grants were issued to citizens of this State and Carolina for about fifty thousand acres of the best land south and west of that line, previous to the passage of the prohibitory act of this State, passed in the year 1812. It is believed that on principle, as well as in good policy, it was improper for Carolina to exercise this act of sovereignty at that time, in the manner pursued under her act of 1811. By her act of 1803 she had ceded to Tennessee this right absolutely, upon the assent of Congress being obtained thereto. This State, by her act of 1804, had ratified and accepted of that authority and transfer, and held herself ready to comply so soon as the United States would give her consent. There was no time prescribed by the act of 1803 within which that assent should be given by the United States. Congress by the act of 1806 had ratified this compact between the two States, so far as to assent to the exercise of this power by Tennessee east and north of the Elk river line, without making any arrangement for issuing grants to the west and south. Tennessee appointed commissioners to examine the claims, and separate the genuine from the spurious warrants. We were enabled to do this by the record and checks furnished by North Carolina: the citizens of both States availed themselves of this regulation. Offices were opened, and grants issued for the land, as far as that line.

North Carolina and Tennessee were equally interested that the same power should be exercised to the south and west of that line, and that the warrants should be examined to prevent spurious claims from being granted, and that the grants should be issued and recorded in this State, near the same place where the lands were situated. We have no apprehension but that if the two States had made application to Congress, their assent would have been given that this State should perfect the remaining titles south and west, whenever it was made to appear that justice to the holders of claims required it; but without asking this State to unite in a request to that effect, or without requesting this State to permit North Carolina to reassume the power which she had vested in this State by the act of 1803, the act of 1811 was passed, and the first notice given to this State was the appearance of a surveyor to do the duties of his office. There was no process provided by that act to separate the good from the bad warrants; all could be surveyed and granted indiscriminately, which might be done to the great injury of the holders of good warrants. The exercise of that power was considered as calculated to encourage the adventurous, who were willing to hazard obtaining grants from North Carolina, while others whose claims were equally good, would hesitate to obtain titles under a law where the question of right would be controverted, and was very doubtful. Therefore, the law of 1812 was passed: the intention of this State was to prohibit the exercise of this authority until the question should be settled by the States, and to prevent the interest of individuals from being involved in that question. A complaint is also made in the same memorial against the condition of the act of 1806, authorizing Tennessee to appropriate two hundred thousand acres of land for the use of colleges and academies within the limits of the lands reserved by North Carolina to the Cherokee Indians. By examining the laws of North Carolina, it will appear that there never was any law passed by that State, either before or after the cession act, authorizing surveys to be made, or grants to issue, in that tract of country; and if any grants had been issued by her officers, the same would be void. And it is believed by us, that, by virtue of the act of 1803, passed by North Carolina, that this State was prohibited from issuing grants on warrants in the same tract. The following is a part of that act: "That no grant shall be issued by the State of Tennessee for any lands which, by the aforesaid act, (meaning the cession act of 1789,) and the laws of this State then in force, or made in pursuance thereof since the passing of said act, might not have been issued by this State; nor shall any grant be valid but those issued on bona fide claims, and within the provisions and reservations of the before recited act, and such as would have been valid if the same had been issued by this State under the act aforesaid and the laws then in force, and such as have been since made in pursuance of said act of cession." If Tennessee was prohibited from issuing grants on warrants in that tract, why should North Carolina complain of this provision in the act of 1806? It could not be any injury to the citizens of North Carolina that the liberality of the United States should permit Tennessee to make an appropriation for the support of seminaries for the education of youth in the country where their warrants could not be granted.

The country south and west of the Elk river line was at all times subject to the satisfaction of the warrants issued by North Carolina: her laws authorized them to be surveyed and granted there. Grants have already been issued by that State previous to 1806, for the best lands in that section, according to the entries made or the surveys returned by her officers; but there are yet many other entries on warrants located in the same section, in addition to the removed warrants issued by that State, and military warrants which have not been granted east and north of that line, which the holders of them are desirous of procuring grants on; and, since there is not land east and north to satisfy those claims, we unite with North Carolina in representing that such warrants ought to be surveyed and granted wherever there is vacant land west and south of said line.

It will remain for your honorable body to decide whether those grants ought to be perfected by North Carolina or by this State. Some provision ought to be made for ascertaining such warrants and evidences of claim as are genuine and ought to be granted, and which are located west and south of said line. All the warrants and other evidences of claim which had not been thus located have been adjudged, recorded, and sanctioned, by a board established by this State for that purpose, in pursuance of the several acts authorizing Tennessee to perfect titles. This was done under the restriction of the records and checks furnished by North Carolina; those are held indiscriminately by citizens of Carolina and this State, and we are not willing to agree that the same should be re-examined: such a course would produce much inconvenience and unnecessary trouble and expense. In adjudicating the claims not examined, we are willing to adopt any course which may be thought conducive to the interest of the bona fide claimants.

It would produce much confusion in the situation of land titles in this State to repeal any part of the act of 1806, in the manner requested by North Carolina. Citizens of both States have acquired titles under the provisions of this act: they ought not now to be disturbed. We, therefore, protest against that part of the request of the memorial of North Carolina, but we solicit your honorable body to pass an act in addition or supplemental to the act of 1806, giving your assent that the State of Tennessee shall proceed to perfect titles west of the Elk river line upon all unsatisfied claims which exist against North Carolina, and which are good and valid; and that, in perfecting such titles in that tract, the provisions of the acts of 1803 and 1804 shall be adhered to, and that some correct mode shall be adopted, either by a board of commissioners or otherwise, for ascertaining the validity of such ungranted claims as have not been already adjudged by the respective boards in this State.

Resolved, That a copy of the preceding memorial be forwarded to each of the Senators and Representatives from this State in the Congress of the United States, and that a copy of the same be laid by them before that body.

CLAIM OF GABRIEL WINTER AND OTHERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, ON THE 30TH DAY OF DECEMBER, 1817.

Mr. HERRICK made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition of Gabriel Winter and others, unanimously report:

That, on the 27th day of June, 1797, the Governor General of the province of Louisiana and East Florida, then in the possession of Spain, conceded to Elisha Winter one thousand arpents square of land, in the district of Arkansas, and to William Winter and Gabriel Winter, sons of Elisha Winter, each five hundred arpents square in the same district, by a deed of concession of that date; that the same was made upon the application of Elisha Winter, who was a citizen of the United States, and who, previous to that time, erected at New Orleans, upon land granted to him by the Provincial Government, an extensive rope-walk. The petitioners were required, by the terms of the concession, as a condition precedent to the completion of their titles to the lands thus conceded, to make settlements upon their respective tracts within the period of one year from the date of their concession; upon failing to comply with this condition the concession was declared void. The petitioners were put in possession of their respective tracts in a short time after the concession was made, by the commandant of the district of Arkansas, who was charged by the Governor General with the execution of the designs of the Spanish Government in this respect. It has been proved to the committee that the condition of settlement has been complied with by Elisha Winter and William Winter, who made an actual settlement on their respective tracts agreeably to the terms of the concession, and erected a dwelling-house and cleared land, at great expense, on the tract granted to William Winter.

They continued to occupy and cultivate the land thus settled from the time of the settlement until the country was taken possession of by the United States. The provisions of the law respecting land titles in that section of the country have been complied with by the petitioners, and their title papers, and other process of their claims, recorded in the proper office.

The encouragement of agriculture, and the population of the district, are the reasons assigned upon the face of the concession for its execution. In addition to these, it is proved that the Messrs. Winter were favorites with the Governor General of the province, and that Elisha Winter, the father, had experienced great losses in the destruction of his rope-walk by fire. This, it may be well presumed, was a strong inducement with the Governor for making so large a concession.

It is as well proved, as any fact of that kind can be, that, if the Spanish Government had retained the title of this country, the claims thus conceded would have been perfected by a complete grant.

Your committee, in the investigation of the claims of the petitioner, have particularly examined into the powers of the Governor General of Louisiana, while the same was a Spanish province, to grant lands for agricultural pur-should be ripened into grants, and proposed to that State that the right to perfect titles on those warrants should be transferred to her; and, accordingly, in the year 1803, North Carolina passed an act authorizing the State of Tennessee to issue grants and perfect titles to all claims of land lying in the State of Tennessee, which remained, and were, by the act of cession of 1789, reserved to be issued and perfected by North Carolina, the assent of the Congress of the United States being obtained thereto. In the year 1804 this act was ratified by the State of Tennessee, and the compact, as between the two States, was closed.

It then remained that the assent of Congress should be obtained, and, accordingly, in the year 1806, the Congress of the United States passed an act entitled "An act to authorize the State of Tennessee to issue grants and perfect titles to certain lands therein described, and to settle the claims to the vacant and unappropriated lands within the same."

We represent that the said act of 1806 did not comply, in extent, with the wishes of this State. We would have preferred that the assent of the United States would have been given by Congress to the full extent of the compact between the two States; but that honorable body, composed in part of the Representatives and Senators from each of those States, declined at that time giving their assent, except so far as is expressed in said act of 1806.

The Indian title having been extinguished about that time to a considerable territory in this State, and there being numerous claimants under North Carolina residing in that State and Tennessee, who were anxious to procure grants, this State, in the year 1806, enacted laws to carry into effect the provisions of the act of 1803, as far as was permitted by the United States. CLAIM OF GABRIEL WINTER AND OTHERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, ON THE 30TH DAY OF DECEMBER, 1817.

Mr. HERRICK made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition of Gabriel Winter and others, unanimously report:

That, on the 27th day of June, 1797, the Governor General of the province of Louisiana and East Florida, then in the possession of Spain, conceded to Elisha Winter one thousand arpents square of land, in the district of Arkansas, and to William Winter and Gabriel Winter, sons of Elisha Winter, each five hundred arpents square in the same district, by a deed of concession of that date; that the same was made upon the application of Elisha Winter, who was a citizen of the United States, and who, previous to that time, erected at New Orleans, upon land granted to him by the Provincial Government, an extensive rope-walk. The petitioners were required, by the terms of the concession, as a condition precedent to the completion of their titles to the lands thus conceded, to make settlements upon their respective tracts within the period of one year from the date of their concession; upon failing to comply with this condition the concession was declared void. The petitioners were put in possession of their respective tracts in a short time after the concession was made, by the commandant of the district of Arkansas, who was charged by the Governor General with the execution of the designs of the Spanish Government in this respect. It has been proved to the committee that the condition of settlement has been complied with by Elisha Winter and William Winter, who made an actual settlement on their respective tracts agreeably to the terms of the concession, and erected a dwelling-house and cleared land, at great expense, on the tract granted to William Winter.

They continued to occupy and cultivate the land thus settled from the time of the settlement until the country was taken possession of by the United States. The provisions of the law respecting land titles in that section of the country have been complied with by the petitioners, and their title papers, and other process of their claims, recorded in the proper office.

The encouragement of agriculture, and the population of the district, are the reasons assigned upon the face of the concession for its execution. In addition to these, it is proved that the Messrs. Winter were favorites with the Governor General of the province, and that Elisha Winter, the father, had experienced great losses in the destruction of his rope-walk by fire. This, it may be well presumed, was a strong inducement with the Governor for making so large a concession.

It is as well proved, as any fact of that kind can be, that, if the Spanish Government had retained the title of this country, the claims thus conceded would have been perfected by a complete grant.

Your committee, in the investigation of the claims of the petitioner, have particularly examined into the powers of the Governor General of Louisiana, while the same was a Spanish province, to grant lands for agricultural purposes, and with a view to the population of the country; and there does not appear to your committee any ground on which to rest a doubt of his power in this respect. The known laws, as well as the invariable usage of the country, establish the right of the Governor, in the case of the petitioner, to make the grant. Having satisfied themselves on this subject, your committee proceeded to examine the evidence produced by the petitioner to show how far the precise conditions of the grant have been fulfilled, so as to vest in the grantees a fee simple estate in the tract or tracts of land granted to them. The result of this examination is a clear and satisfactory demonstration of the actual settlement of the tracts granted to Elisha and William Winter, after the most formal possession had been given to them by the commandant of the district, agreeably to the power with which he was invested by the deed of concession from the Baron de Carondelet.

Thus it appears to your committee that every thing was done essential to the validity of the grant, and to vest in the grantees, William and Elisha Winter, a perfect title to the tracts of land now claimed by their legal representatives, by virtue of the concession above referred to. It follows, therefore, as a necessary conclusion, that, according to the third article of the treaty between the United States and France, of the 30th April, 1803, which secures to the inhabitants of Louisiana the "free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and the religion which they profess," the heirs of Elisha Winter and the heirs of William Winter cannot be deprived of these lands belonging to their ancestors, without a violation of the treaty which is declared by the constitution to be the supreme law of the land.

With respect to the claim of Gabriel Winter, it appears to your committee that the tract of land granted to him by the above mentioned concession, has never been inhabited and cultivated; that the grantee was a minor, and lived with his father, who settled on the land granted to his son William. Although equitable considerations are believed to exist in favor of this claim, on the ground of the minority of the claimant, who was at that time incapable of fulfilling, according to its letter, the condition of settlement required in the grant, your committee deem it their duty to report against it. The principle which has been adopted by your committee, extends no farther than to a confirmation of those claims in which the absolute property is vested in the grantees, prior to the treaty by which the United States acquired a title to Louisiana. They, therefore, report a bill confirming to the legal representatives of Elisha Winter, and to the legal representatives of William Winter, the tracts of land granted to the said Elisha Winter and William Winter by the Spanish Government.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: The memorial of the undersigned respectfully sheweth:

That his father, Elisha Winter, late of the State of Louisiana, now deceased, in his lifetime, in the year 1789, removed with his family from Baltimore to the State of Kentucky, and became a trader from that State to New Orleans; that, in or about the year 1790, he obtained a grant of land on the commons of New Orleans, on which he erected an extensive rope-walk, which was consumed by the great fire. New Orleans being at that time very sickly, the loss of the rope-walk, the cost of rebuilding, sickness and death in the family, caused him to sell out, and turn his attention to an agricultural establishment in the district of Arkansas. Accordingly, under these oppressive circumstances, he made application to the Governor General of the province of Louisiana, and obtained from him a grant of lands for himself, sons, and associates, of which the following is a translation, viz:

The Baron de Carondelet, knight of the order of St. John, field marshal of the royal armies, Governor General and vice patron of the provinces of Louisiana and Florida, inspector of the troops, &c., desiring to encourage the population and agriculture, by every means that the political circumstances of the times will admit, and hearing the proposals made to the Government by Elisha Winter, to form an establishment at the post of Arkansas for the agriculture of flax, wheat, and hemp, I do grant from henceforth (that he may put in execution his desires) to the said Elisha Winter, one thousand arpents square of land; to William Winter, five hundred arpents square; to Gabriel Winter, five hundred arpents square; to Samuel Price, Richard Price, William Hubble, John Price, William Russell, Joseph Stillwell, and Walter Carr, fifteen arpents of land in front, to each of them, with the usual depth of forty back; and this, in consideration of the excellent character I have received of his good conduct and principles, under the express condition that they shall forthwith be established, and their lands surveyed; that the commandant of the post shall dispose himself to give to each of them his title in form, and to see that the establishment shall be formed as nearly adjoining and as compact as possible, not admitting any more American families than the aforementioned, and those the Government may permit; but the commandant may admit good colonists, such as Spaniards, French, Germans, and Dutch, but by no means to admit vagabonds; because, in observance of this clause, the commandant will take charge: Provided, always, that if, in the term of one year, the lands described in this document for the said families, are not established by them, then this concession shall be void. That it shall be complied with in all its parts, the commandant of the district is charged with the strict observance of, as well as giving good and humane treatment, proper to be given under the Spanish Government. I give the present in New Orleans, on the 27th day of June, 1797.

EL BARON CARONDELET.

That, in the month of April or May of the year 1798 the land was located by Don Carlos de Villemont, the Spanish commandant of the post of Arkansas; corner stones were carried to the country from the State of Kentucky, expressly for the purpose, and were placed, by the direction of the commandant, to indentify the corner boundaries of the said tracts of land; that the family of the said Elisha Winter removed from Kentucky on to the said granted lands, and remained in possession of the same when possession was taken of the country by the Government of the United States, under the treaty with the French Government, of the year 1803; that Joseph Stillwell, one of the grantees, was also at the same time put in possession of the tract granted to him, and still continues to reside on it, his claim being confirmed, as your memorialist believes, by the Board of Commissioners; that the said tracts of land mentioned in the said grant, have been surveyed, and the same have been, according to the provisions of the act of Congress made and provided, claimed before the recorder of land titles of the late district of Louisiana, and the testimony in relation to the same, recorded before the recorder of land titles for the Territory of Missouri, acting as commissioner for adjusting the titles and claims to land for the said Territory, which your petitioner is unable to produce to your honorable body, by reason that the said recorder refused to give a copy of the same. Your memorialist further states that, by the laws of Congress, he is entitled to retain possession of the said land until the same shall be finally decided on by Congress; that the Legislature of the Missouri Territory have caused the said lands to be taxed, and, as your memorialist is informed, and believes true, that the officers of the Government of the United States have directed the said lands to be laid out and surveyed, for the purpose of satisfying the warrants which may be issued to the soldiers who have served during the late war; and that surveyors, on behalf of the Government, are now engaged in surveying the same, and unless Congress shall immediately take under wise consideration the petition of your memorialist, and finally decide on the claims mentioned and contained in said grant, he will be greatly damaged and injured. Your memorialist, therefore, throws himself upon the justice of Congress, and most respectfully prays that they may be pleased to take his case under consideration, to speedily confirm to your memorialist, and to the heirs of the said Elisha Winter, deceased, and also to the heirs of the said William Winter, also deceased, their respective claims to the lands granted as above mentioned, and to provide for patents to issue for the same in due form of law. As in duty bound, your memorialist will ever pray.

GABRIEL WINTER.

WASHINGTON CITY, December 19, 1815.

Extract from the records of the Board of Commissioners for the Territory of Louisiana.

A certificate of Charles Trudeau, recorder of the city of Orleans, dated 2d March, 1808, accompanied by a plat of survey of one million of arpents, said to have been found deposited in his archives under the date of the 12th of October, 1798. A plat of survey of one million of arpents, certified by Henry Cassady, 10th November, 1805, stating that said tract was surveyed in 1798, and re-surveyed, in part, by said Cassady in 1802.

JUNE 18, 1808. Board met on application of a claimant: Present, John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose.

In the case of Elisha Winter and William Winter, the first claiming one million of arpents of land, the latter two hundred and fifty thousand arpents; Joshua G. Clark, agent for said Elisha and William, on his affidavit filed, motions the Board for a dedimus to take the deposition of Don Charles de Villemont, now said to be residing in West Florida; motion overruled.

JULY 19, 1811. Present, full Board. It is the opinion of the Board that this claim ought not to be confirmed.

William Winter claiming two hundred and fifty thousand acres of land, situate on White river, district of Arkansas, produces to the Board the above concession in the claim of Elisha Winter, and a plat of survey, dated 28th of February, 1806, certified 28th of April, 1806: testimony taken by Frederick Bates, commissioner, at Camp Esperance, June 20, 1808.

Joseph Stillwell, sworn, says that he has no interest in this claim. (Sworn in chief) says that, in 1798, witness was on this tract of land in month of April, had a cabin built, and, in the course of that year, enclosed fifteen or twenty acres of land, and cultivated a part thereof. Claimant continued to inhabit and cultivate the first improvement, and to enlarge the same till the year 1806. Silvanus Philips, sworn, says that the claimant arrived at Arkansas early in March, 1798, and very soon afterwards commenced his improvements on the tract of land now claimed; and witness repeats the same facts mentioned in the foregoing testimony of Joseph Stillwell. William Basset, sworn, says that William Winter was in possession of this tract when witness arrived in this country in the year 1799; had a cabin, and perhaps more than one in that year; a considerable plantation enclosed, the number of acres not known, or not recollected by witness; several acres that year in cultivation. Claimant inhabited and cultivated this tract constantly from the year 1799 till 1805 or 1806: testimony taken as aforesaid, at Arkansas village, July 5, 1808. Andrew Fagot, sworn, says that claimant came to Arkansas in 1798, bringing with him a stock of cattle, to wit, a stallion, a mare and some horned cattle, and sheep. In the same year claimant took possession of the lands claimed, in the month of March, built a dwelling-house, and several out-houses; cleared, enclosed, and cultivated about thirty acres; remained inhabiting and cultivating for five or six of the following years. Francis Vaugine, sworn, says that William Winter arrived at Arkansas in the year 1798 or 1799; in the fall of the same year (as well as witness recollects) took possession of these lands, built a dwelling-house and cabins for his slaves; he also erected a cotton-gin, about forty-five or perhaps fifty acres cleared, enclosed, and cultivated; in the course of a few years after the first establishment, continued to inhabit and cultivate the premises for four or five years. Francis Vaugine, sworn, says that William Winter arrived at Arkansas in the year 1798 or 1799, and left this country in April, 1806. During this intermediate time, premises were constantly inhabited and cultivated: when claimant left this part of the country a tenant was left by him on these premises, to wit, his brother-in-law.

JUNE 18, 1808. Present, Lucas and Penrose, commissioners.

In the case of Elisha Winter and William Winter, the first claiming one million of arpents of land, the latter two hundred and fifty thousand arpents; Joshua G. Clark, agent for the said Elisha and William, on his affidavit filed, motions the Board for a dedimus to take the deposition of Don Charles de Villemont, now said to be residing in West Florida; motion overruled.

JULY 19, 1811. Present, full Board. It is the opinion of the Board that this claim ought not to be confirmed.

Gabriel Winter claiming two hundred and fifty thousand arpents of land, situate on fork of bayou, middle district of Arkansas, produces to the Board the foregoing concession, as in the claim of Elisha Winter. A certificate of Charles Trudeau, recorder of the city of Orleans, dated 2d March, 1808, accompanied by a plat of survey of two hundred and fifty thousand arpents, said to have been found deposited in his archives, under date of the 12th of October, 1798. A plat and certificate of survey of two hundred and fifty thousand arpents, signed Henry Cassady, dated 24th November, 1802, stated to be made in pursuance of an order from Charles Trudeau.

JULY 19, 1811. Present, full Board. It is the opinion of the Board that this claim ought not to be confirmed.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 8, 1816.

Agreeably to your request of the 6th instant, I have the honor to transmit a copy of the records of the Board of Commissioners for the Territory of Louisiana, so far as relates to the claims of Elisha Winter, William Winter, and Gabriel Winter.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

HON. T. B. ROBERTSON,

Chairman of Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives.

Extract from the report of the Recorder of land titles for Missouri Territory.

Testimony as to the claim of Elisha Winter for one million arpents of land, and of Gabriel Winter for two hundred and fifty thousand arpents of land. For translation of original papers, see Sp. Rept. p. 299.

Don Carlos de Villemont duly sworn, says that, as commandant of the district of Arkansas, he did, about the year 1798, in the spring, put Elisha Winter into possession of one million of acres of land, and Gabriel Winter into possession of two hundred and fifty thousand arpents of land, by virtue of the concession which has been made the basis of these claims, accompanied by official letters from the Baron. Elisha Winter, the father, designated the tract allotted to him, by planting a large stone which he brought from Kentucky for the purpose. The sons, William and Gabriel Winter, designated their parts by marking each tree. There was no public surveyor in the district of Arkansas at that time, nor afterwards, during the command of the deponent, down to the year 1802; on which account these tracts were not surveyed, nor platted in the ordinary manner. This witness attended as commandant of the district, when these designations were made, to wit, when the stone was placed or planted, and the trees marked. Witness knows that, in 1794, Elisha Winter had established at Orleans an extensive rope manufactory on land furnished him by the Government. After the official letters above spoken of, deponent received other private letters recommending the family of Messrs. Winter to his attention. Elisha Winter, the father, built a large house on the lands of his son William, who had settled thereon immediately on the delivery of the possession. The father, two years thereafter, settled his family on said William's premises; said family, with negroes, remained on William's tract, cultivating the same till witness left that part of the country in 1802. The claimants brought on to this tract, from Kentucky, cattle of various kinds, cows, horses, sheep, &c. and about one hundred sheep, of which previously there had been none in the district during the command of this witness. They brought, also, negroes and hired white men, a boat load of corn, wagons, farming implements, household and kitchen furniture, and a variety of other articles necessary for making a large establishment.

When witness speaks of William Winter's claim, he means the tract of two hundred and fifty thousand arpents allowed to said William as his part of the general concession, under the father, Elisha, and two sons, William and Gabriel's claim. In reply to questions of the agent of the claimants, the witness further says, that he was forty-three years an officer under the Spanish Government in America; and that, from the knowledge which he possesses of the conduct and policy of the Spanish provincial Government, the attachment of its principal officers to the family of Messrs. Winter, he does believe that if either Elisha, William, or Gabriel Winter had, before the cession of the country, demanded, at New Orleans, a completion of this grant, a title in form would have been accorded to them.

Testimony as to the claim of William Winter, of two hundred and fifty thousand arpents of land on White river, taken in order to perpetuate the same, to be used if the Government should remand the claim for adjudication here, or to be transmitted to the Commissioners of the General Land Office, if circumstances permit. The claim having been decided by the late Board of Commissioners, on testimony, the recorder of land titles, acting as commissioner, has no regular jurisdiction of it.

Don Carlos de Villemont, duly sworn, says that, as commandant of the late Spanish district of Arkansas, he put William Winter into possession of this tract in June or July, 1797, under concession from Baron de Carondelet; that the said William Winter immediately thereafter built houses, made various improvements thereon, and continued to inhabit and cultivate the same, as witness well knows, for the eight following years, when witness left Arkansas for Pensacola. In addition to the concession, by authority, of which witness put claimant into possession, he received letters from the Baron de Carondelet, containing orders to the same effect, to put the claimant into possession, and private letters recommending him to his consideration. The claimant, before witness left Arkansas, had about thirty-five arpents in cultivation, a number of horned cattle, eight or ten mares, and a stud horse; also, about one hundred sheep, which he brought down the river in a boat; but in one year he lost all his horses and cattle. There were no sheep in the country until they were brought by the claimants, and by William Winter in particular. The deponent further says that, immediately after he put claimant into possession, he reported it to the Baron de Carondelet. There was a stone put up by Elisha Winter, on his part of the tract, which he had brought for the purpose from Kentucky. An oak tree was marked by William Winter as a designation of the two hundred and fifty thousand arpents here claimed. Both these designations were made in the presence of the witness as the commandant of the district of Arkansas. In 1794, Elisha Williams had a rope manufactory at New Orleans, but knows not whether the other claimants were partners.

I certify that these depositions were made before the undersigned, recorder of land titles, in the office at St. Louis, in the Territory of Missouri, (where the originals are recorded and preserved,) on the 7th day of October, 1813.

Elisha Winter, 1,000,000 arpents, }
William Winter, 250,000 arpents, } City of Arkansas.
Gabriel Winter, 250,000 arpents, }

Don Andres Lopez de Armesto, Commissary of War, Honorary Secretary for His Catholic Majesty of the commission of the limits of the province of Louisiana.

I certify that, among the papers of the office of the Secretary of the Spanish Government committed to my charge, and those relative to the post of Arkansas, there exists the original document, of which the following is the tenor:

The Baron de Carondelet, knight of the religious order of St. John's, field marshal of the royal armies, governor general and vice patron of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, inspector of the troops of the same, &c., being desirous to promote the population and the agriculture, by all the means adapted to the political circumstances of the present times, and adverting to the proposals made to Government by Elisha Winter, to the end of forming a settlement in the post of Arkansas for the cultivation of flax, wheat, and hemp; therefore, in order to realize said object, I presently concede to said Elisha Winter one thousand arpents of land square, (mil arpanes de tierra quadrados;) to William Winter, five hundred square, (quinientos quadrados;) to Gabriel Winter, five hundred square; and to Samuel Price, Richard Price, William Hubble, John Price, William Russell, Joseph Stillwell, and Walter Carr, fifteen arpents of land in front, by forty in depth, to each of them respectively, in consideration of the good information given to me of their excellent deportment and good principles, under the express conditions that as soon as they shall have settled themselves on their respective surveys, which the commandant of the post will cause to be executed, there shall be delivered to each one his title deed in form; but the settlement is to be made as united and as closely connected as possible, nor any other American families to be admitted than those above named, and such as Government may permit to settle, which permission may be given in the mean time, by the commandant to the good colonists, Spanish, French, German, and Irish, who shall make application, but no manner of admission shall be granted to vagabonds; and for any contravention of this clause the commandant is held responsible: Provided, that, if in the term of one year the lands appropriated in this document to the families above named, respectively, are not occupied, this concession shall be void; which shall be attended to in all its parts by the commandant of the district, who is charged with the strict execution of the whole, consistent with the beneficence and humanity of the Spanish Government. The present, given at New Orleans, the 27th of June, 1797.

THE BARON DE CARONDELET.
ANDRES LOPEZ ARMESTO.

And to authenticate the above, I give the present, at New Orleans, the 19th April, 1805.

ANDRES LOPEZ ARMESTO.

Don Sebastian Calvo de la Puerta, and O'Farrill Marquis de Casa Calvo, knight of the order of Santiago, brigadier of the royal armies, colonel of the Havana regiment of infantry, commissioned by His Majesty for the demarcation of the limits, and for other affairs relative to the province of Louisiana, &c.: I certify that the honorary commissary of war, Don Andres Lopez de Armesto, by whom the foregoing certificate was signed, has been Secretary of the Government of these provinces for His Majesty, during the time of the Spanish domination, and especially so of the commission of the limits; and that entire faith and credit are due and had unto him in both capacities; and to certify the same, I gave the present. Signed with my hand, and sealed with the seal of my arms. Countersigned by the same Secretary, at New Orleans, the 19th of April, 1805.

THE MARQUIS DE CASA CALVO.
ANDRES LOPEZ ARMESTO.

Elisha Winter's certificate of survey.

The above is a true plan or draught [Plat omitted,] of a tract of land granted to Elisha Winter, by the Baron de Carondelet, Governor General of the province of Louisiana, on the 27th of June, 1797, containing one million of arpents, as appears by the original grant, filed in the land office in the city of Orleans, reference being thereunto had, it will more fully appear. This tract of land was surveyed by Don Carlos Villemont, captain commandant, civil and military, of the district of Arkansas, in the year 1798, and resurveyed, in part, by me, in the year 1802. This tract of land was actually inhabited, improved, and cultivated, according to law, and agreeably to the tenor of said grant. Given under my hand, at Arkansas, the 10th day of November, 1805.

HENRY CASSADY, Dep. Surveyor.

William Winter's certificate of survey.

I do certify that the above plat represents two hundred and fifty thousand arpents of land, French measure, situate on the east side of the Great prairie of Arkansas, including a part of said prairie, and extending eastward to include a part of White river, and resurveyed by me on a Spanish grant, dated the 27th of June, 1797, at the request of William Winter, who claims the same, under an act of Congress passed respecting such claims, on — day of March, 1805.

Given under my hand, this 28th of February, A. D. 1806.

GODFREY JONES, Dep. Surveyor.

250,000 arpents, or 213,707 acres 100 poles, received for record. St. Louis, 28th of April, 1806.

ANTOINE SOULARD, Surv'r Genl. Ter. Louisiana.

Gabriel Winter's certificate of survey.

I do certify that, pursuant to the order of Don Carlos Trudeau, Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, dated 24th July, 1802, I have carefully surveyed the above described tract of land, situated on the waters of White river, and extending to the Mississippi, at the mouth of St. Francis; surveyed on a grant of lands granted to Gabriel Winter by the Baron de Carondelet, gentleman of the order of St. John, &c., and Governor General of the province of Louisiana, dated the 27th of June, in the year 1797; surveyed the 24th day of November, 1802.

HENRY CASSADY, Dep. Surveyor.

WASHINGTON CITY, February 13, 1813.

The above papers are copied from the report about to be made to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, by the undersigned recorder of land titles from the Territory of Missouri, acting as commissioner of lands for said Territory.

FREDERICK BATES.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, } City of New Orleans.
STATE OF LOUISIANA. }

By this public instrument, be it known to all whom the same may concern, that I, John Lynd, Esq., public notary in and for the city of New Orleans, by letters patent under the great seal of the Territory of Orleans, duly commissioned and sworn, and by law invested with power and authority to attest deeds, wills, agreements, and other instruments in writing, and to administer oaths, do hereby certify that, on the fourth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixteen, James B. Many personally appeared before me, and, being duly sworn according to law, depose and saith, in the spring of the year 1804 he took possession of the fort and district of Arkansas, in the province of Louisiana, it being then surrendered by the American Government to the Spanish commandant. On his arrival there, he found the families of Mr. Elisha Winter and William Winter, established as agricultural residents in the district. It was then well understood, that large grants of land had been made by the Spanish Government to Mr. Elisha Winter and sons, who had removed to the country in consequence thereof, and had been put in possession of their lands by the proper Spanish officer; that a corner stone was pointed out to him, which he saw, and understood to be the corner of Mr. Winter's tract, established by Don Carlos de Villemont, formerly the commandant of the post. Land was estimated there at that time at little value, it being a remote and wilderness country. In fact land was held at so little value, that it was scarcely thought worth accepting of, on paying the fees of the commandant for writing the concession or requête.

In faith whereof, I grant the present, under my signature, and the impress of my seal of office, at New Orleans, this fifth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and sixteen.

Don Luis de Onis Gonzalez Lopez y Vara, Lord of the towns of Royales, Macadina, and Largartera, knight commander of the royal and distinguished Spanish order of Charles the 3d, and with the decoration of the Lis of Lavandes of the council of His Catholic Majesty of Ferdinand the 7th, his secretary, with the exercise of decrees, and his envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary near the United States—I do hereby certify that the captain general or governor of the provinces of his Catholic Majesty, on the continent of America, are vested with full power to make grants of uncultivated lands in the respective provinces under their command, to individuals who may choose to settle and cultivate them; nor do I know that they are restricted as to limited quantity, but in proportion of the extent of the provinces subject to their command; that the Baron of Carondelet was a person of distinguished merit, and highly appreciated by his sovereign; and, as captain general of the provinces of Louisiana, he was authorized to make such grants in the same manner as all the Governors of the possessions of the King. It is not to be believed, that, in a remote part of his provinces, he had not the right to make a grant of a thousand arpents square, nor that any such grant emanating from him would not have been held sacred by the crown of Spain.

In testimony whereof, I have given the present certificate, signed with my hand, and sealed with my seal, the 6th February, 1816.

JUNE 29, 1816.

I certify that I have been a resident of New Orleans about twenty-three years; a great part of the time I have acted as surveyor and engineer for the district, and have become acquainted with the French and Spanish languages, and customs of the Spanish Government. The terms "mil arpanes de tierra quadrados," as expressed in the grant made to Mr. Elisha Winter by the Spanish Government in the year 1797, means, in English, one thousand arpents square of land; and the terms "quinientos quadrados," expressed in the same grant, means five hundred arpents square. It is a fact, well known, that the word arpent was used in the province of Louisiana to express linear measure, as is proved by the small tracts granted to Samuel Price and others in the same concession, which fact being admitted, it follows, of course, that the large grant to Mr. Winter is a square figure, with one thousand arpents on each side, and the tracts granted to William and Gabriel Winter are square figures, each having five hundred arpents on each side. Land situated so remote from population and commerce, at the date of said grant, was held in very little estimation, scarcely worth paying the fees of office for the field papers.

LAFON, Engineer.

SIR:

APRIL 18, 1816.

You having called on me for my opinion, in explaining the arpent as linear measure, I have no hesitation in saying, from my long residence in Louisiana, acting as a commissioner for adjusting land claims in that country, that the arpent is considered as linear measure by the French, and so understood by the Americans, as well as the league; and that, in all grants of land, it is expressed by so many arpents front, by so many in depth, or so many square, and often by so many front leagues, and leagues in depth. A league is estimated at eighty arpents in length, and, in computing the quantity, they multiply the length by the depth, or one side by the other, and that it is so understood by the Creoles of Louisiana. I have often heard them, in moments of amusement, express themselves, in horse racing, by one person challenging another to run ten, fifteen, or twenty arpents.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM GARRARD.

Captain GABRIEL WINTER.

SIR:

JANUARY 11, 1817.

I enclosed to you the affidavit of Judge Garrard, which I should have before procured had there not been a delicacy in asking a gentleman of distinction, and an officer of Government, to certify on oath. The gentlemen whose certificates are before you are, I believe, nearly all known to Mr. Robertson, a member of your body, and to him I ask leave to refer you for a knowledge of their standing in society. The fact, relative to the arpent being linear measure, is not only proved by the concession itself, but, in the numerous entries made in the books of the commissioners which are before you, and the same books, as well as the affidavit of Captain Vidal, and the certificate of Captain J. Walker, will prove to you that the largest concession, which was ever made to any individual within the limits of the gates of the old city of Orleans, was made to the same grantee by the previous Governor, Miro, and, on application, confirmed by the court of Spain. Mr. Robertson has also a knowledge of this fact. Permit me, gentlemen, to draw your attention to the date of the grant signed twenty years ago by the captain general of the province, the late viceroy of Mexico. This officer, of the first distinction, after making the grant, recommended the grantees to the particular attention of the commandant of the district where the land lies, in a very remote section of the country, and forthwith the grantees were possessed of their lands; (see testimony of Don Carlos de Villemont and Major Many.) I was at that time under age; but have not the grants to minors been invariably confirmed? This address, gentlemen, might be continued to a great length were I not fearful of being tedious. I appeal to the justice of Congress; I am sure that I have nothing to fear if my case and my right (secured under a former Government, and guaranteed by treaty) shall be thoroughly examined and fully understood. I am not a land speculator; it is my inheritance; and had the claim been only five hundred arpents, as in the case of William Winter, it long since would have been confirmed by the Board of Land Commissioners; the quantity and size of the grant put it beyond their jurisdiction. It must be apparent, to every one, that five hundred arpents of land, at the date of the grant, and in that wilderness country, could not have been worth fifty dollars; and it is questionable that the whole quantity, even now put into market, if it would bring fifty cents per acre; add to this the great trouble, time, and expense, that is incident to the prosecution of a claim like mine. I, therefore, hope that you will give to it a speedy and thorough consideration, and that you will report, as the former committee, the whole facts to enable me to bring my claim fairly before Congress for their decision.

I am, with much respect, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

GAB. WINTER.

Hon. CHAIRMAN,
Committee Private Claims.

I certify that I have resided in the State of Louisiana about eight years, during which time I have acted as a commissioner for adjusting land claims. The word arpent is considered a linear measure by the French people of that country, and so understood by the Americans. The concessions are generally made so many arpents front, by so many in depth, or so many square, and often by so many leagues in front, and leagues in depth. A league is estimated at about eighty arpents in length, and, in computing the quantity, they multiply the length by the depth, or one side by the other.

Justice of the Peace.

I certify that I am a native of Louisiana, and brought up under the Spanish Government; was acquainted with Mr. Elisha Winter and family as early as the year 1791 or '92, at which time Mr. Winter removed to New Orleans, and established a rope-walk on a lot of ground granted to him by the Spanish Government. The said lot was then of little value, but I believe it now to be worth one hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Winter was certainly a great favorite with the Spanish officers, and possessed as much their confidence as any American that traded to New Orleans. The royal interpreter, John Joseph Duforrest, was my relation, and very much the friend of Mr. Winter; and, from the intimate and friendly standing of Mr. Winter with the officers of the Spanish Government, I am fully of opinion that no man would have obtained a more liberal concession of lands. It has been the uniform practice, in the province of Louisiana, to use the word "arpent" to express linear measure—ten French perches in length being an arpent. It is equally proper to say one hundred arpents square of land, or "mil arpanes de tierras quadrados," as to say ten thousand poles square—the quantity is certainly the same. This I well know, being acquainted with the Spanish language, and my father having acted as a surveyor under the Spanish colonial Government.

Given under my hand, at Concordia, this 10th day of September, 1816.

VIDALIA, September 11, 1816.

I certify that I have been an officer in His Catholic Majesty's service, in the province of Louisiana, about thirty years, and particularly acquainted with Captain Joseph Walker from his early youth, and, from my own knowledge of the facts that he relates in the foregoing certificate, I declare them to be true and correct.

JOS. VIDAL.

I certify that I have been an officer in the service of His Catholic Majesty, in the province of Louisiana, about twenty-five years, holding different commissions under the said Government. I recollect that, about the year 1791 or '92, Mr. Elisha Winter established a rope-walk in the city of New Orleans, on a lot of ground granted to him by the Spanish Government. Property at that time was of little value; consequently the said lot, although larger than any concession within the limits of the old city, was considered no great acquisition, but which now is ascertained by many to be worth one hundred thousand dollars. It was the policy of the Spanish Government at that time to encourage emigration, and its generosity and benevolence to settlers surpassed the usual method established in other possessions of the Spanish Government on such applications. Industrious people, well recommended, and with means to carry into effect their plans for cultivation, or any other improvement, could rely on meeting with the encouragement of the Government, and particular attention paid to them by the said Government. Mr. Elisha Winter having proposed the said rope-walk, it was considered of great utility; a lot adequate to this manufacture was granted to him. Governor Miro, as well as the subsequent Governors of the province, the Baron de Carondelet, and Governor Gayoso de Lemos, were particularly the friends of Mr. Winter, and consequently obtained the favors which they were permitted to grant.

It has been the invariable practice to use the word arpent to express linear measure; ten French poles in length being an arpent; hence, it is equally proper to say one thousand arpents square, or, as expressed in Spanish, mil arpanes de tierra quadrados, as to say ten thousand poles square—the quantity is certainly the same, as I understand. Mr. Winter, after the change of Government in the year 1804, removed with his family from the Arkansas to this parish, where I had previously been commandant. I have omitted to mention that, while I was acting as officer in the Spanish Government in Louisiana, I have been constantly employed at Natchez and Concordia, and that the circumstances I relate concerning Mr. Winter, in New Orleans, were so notorious, that I was perfectly acquainted with them.

And, at the request of Captain Gabriel Winter, I sign these presents, at Vidalia, the 15th of October, 1816.

LEWIS EVANS, J. Q.

I certify that I have resided in the State of Louisiana about ten years, during which time I have acted as principal deputy surveyor for the eastern district, under the authority of the United States. I have observed from the land papers generally, and from the common mode of expression of the people of the country, that the word arpent is used as a linear measure. The boundary lines of the claims under the Spanish Government are uniformly expressed in arpents. For example, ten arpents square mean one hundred French perches on each side, equal to one hundred superficial arpents; and, if I was required, in my official capacity, to lay off a tract of land of mil arpanes de tierras quadrados, or, as expressed in English, one thousand arpents square, I would lay off a square figure, measuring on each side one thousand arpents, equal to ten thousand French perches, making one million superficial arpents.

WALKER GILBERT,

Principal Deputy Surveyor S. E. District.

SEPTEMBER 12, 1816.

I certify that I have acted as surveyor under the authority of the United States, in the late province of Louisiana, about seven years; where the word arpent is generally used to express linear measure, eighty-three and one-third arpents make one league. The boundary lines of tracts are usually expressed in arpents; an arpent is invariably, when applied to linear measure, estimated at ten French poles; the pole equal to eighteen French feet, and the proportion of the French foot to the English foot is as sixteen to fifteen. And was I required to lay off a tract of land of one thousand arpents square, I would lay off a square figure, measuring ten thousand French poles on each side, the superficial content would be one million of arpents. This has been the invariable rule of the surveyors in that country.

I certify that I was acquainted with Mr. Elisha Winter and family, in New Orleans, as early as the year 1791, or 1792; about which time the Spanish Government conceded to Mr. Winter a large lot of ground in the city of New Orleans, for the purpose of erecting a rope-walk; the concession, I believe, was larger than any made to an individual within the limits of the old city. Mr. Winter, after conducting the rope-walk for several years, during which time he carried on an extensive trade from the up-country; being a highly favored American citizen, he obtained, as I understood, a large grant of land in the district of Arkansas, to which I believe he removed his family. The word arpent, at that time, in Louisiana, was considered linear measure, as much so as the mile or league.

S. BROOKS, J. P.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Briggs, Surveyor General, dated 2d of July, 1805.

As all the former grants have been expressed in "arpents," which, though the word "arpent" be like "acre," applicable only to superficial measure, seems, in Louisiana, to mean also a measure of length, it will be necessary that you should ascertain with precision the content of an arpent in English superficial perches and feet, and also the measure in English perches and feet, which is understood by an arpent in front. I have supposed it to be the side of a square which contains an arpent.

Answer, dated the 31st of the 8th month, 1805.

The word "arpent" is strictly applicable to a superficial measure only; yet, the improper use of it, as a measure of length, is almost universal among the Spanish surveyors; when used in this sense, it means the side of a square containing an arpent; equal to $11\frac{1}{11}$ English perches, or one hundred and ninety-two English feet; the arpent is to the acre as six hundred and five to five hundred and twelve.

SIR:

WASHINGTON, July 20, 1817.

In compliance with your request, I give you all the information I am in possession of on the subject of the term arpent as a linear measure.

The word arpent is strictly applicable to superficial measure; yet, the improper use of it as measure of length, has been universal among Spanish surveyors. When used in this sense, it means the length of the side of a square containing an arpent. This term arpent is as universally made use of by the inhabitants of Louisiana, to express distance, as we make use of the term mile. Ask a citizen of Louisiana how far it is to any place in the country, or how far it is from one place to another, he will answer you, so many arpents. The Americans, who have become residents of Louisiana, have adopted the same idea, but make use of the term acre in place of arpent. Then, arpent, as a unit of long measure, is as familiar to the Louisianians as the term mile is to us. They say a tract of country contains so many arpents square; we say so many miles square, &c.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

THOMAS FREEMAN,
Surveyor General south of Tennessee.

GABRIEL WINTER, Esq.

P. S.—The side of a square containing an arpent is equal in length to $11\frac{7}{11}$ English or American perches, or one hundred and ninety-two feet. The arpent is to the acre as six hundred and five to five hundred and twelve.

T. F.

SIR:

WASHINGTON CITY, April 19, 1816.

I take the liberty of enclosing to you letters from scientific men, explaining the application of the arpent to linear measure, which has given rise to a question growing out of my claim to lands which is now before the House. I enclose, also, a copy of a protest, which I felt it my duty to make against the surveying of said lands for military purposes, which documents you will please to lay before the House, in order that they may accompany the bill relative to the claim above mentioned.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

GABRIEL WINTER.

The Hon. HENRY CLAY,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SIR:

WASHINGTON CITY, April 15, 1816.

From the information which you must have derived, when acting as Surveyor General of the Mississippi Territory, I presume that you can easily answer the following inquiries, which, I hope, will tend to elucidate a case in which I am much interested.

1st. Had you been required to lay off a tract of land, fifteen arpents in front, by forty back, how many French perches would you have measured on each side, and how many superficial arpents would the tract contain?

2d. Had you been required to lay off a tract forty arpents square, how many French perches would you have measured on each side, and how many superficial arpents would the tract contain?

3d. Had you been required to lay off a tract of five hundred arpents square, how many French perches would you have measured on each side, and what would have been the superficial number of arpents?

4th. Had you been required to lay off one thousand arpents square, how many French perches would you have surveyed on each side, and how many superficial arpents would it have contained?

Your answer to the foregoing questions will much oblige your obedient servant,

GABRIEL WINTER.

SETH PEASE, Esq.

SIR:

WASHINGTON CITY, April 16, 1816.

It is not in my power, at this time, to say how I should have laid off the Spanish grants specified in your letter of yesterday, for these reasons: first, I have not a knowledge of the language in which the grants are written; and, second, I never had to act on any similar cases. But taking the cases as rendered by you in English, I should conclude that the word arpent was used to express linear measure as well as superficial measure, particularly in the first case stated, and that the tract should contain fifteen times forty arpents, that is, six hundred arpents, and, without this supposition, can make no sense of it. If established that the arpent meant linear measure as well as superficial, then, in the second case, the tract would contain forty times forty arpents, that is, sixteen hundred superficial arpents. And, also, it follows that, if that word has the double signification in the third case stated, the tract ought to contain five hundred times five hundred arpents, that is, twenty-five thousand superficial arpents. Though I cannot speak very positively, I am inclined to believe that the word arpent is used frequently in the Louisiana country to express linear as well as superficial measure.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

SETH PEASE.

GABRIEL WINTER, Esq.

GENTLEMEN:

FEBRUARY 19, 1816.

I herewith enclose you a map [map omitted] showing the relative position and proportion of the lands granted under the general concession. I am pleased with the quantity that you propose to confirm, and, as it will make no difference to the public interest, I hope that you will permit the tracts to remain separate and distinct, as they were originally located, viz: confirm the quantity proposed of the large grant in the southeast corner; the quantity for my brother's heirs in the southwest corner of his tracts; and confirm the proportion allotted to me either at the north end, (which I would prefer,) the south end, or in the middle of the tract located for me. Should this arrangement not be made, I shall be subject to great difficulty, as a variety of separate interests are involved. I disclaim any advantage that might arise in consequence of a part of each tract being confirmed; and, if you please, a clause of exception may be inserted in the law to confirm the titles.

I am, gentlemen, with the most sincere respect,

GABRIEL WINTER.

SIR:

FORT ADAMS, April 30, 1806.

The ordering of the settlers from the land claimed by Mr. Winter may have been improper, whatever be the merits of the claim; and, therefore, you will be pleased to permit them to return and continue their occupancy until Congress has decided finally in regard to Mr. Winter's pretensions.

SIR:

WASHINGTON CITY, April 17, 1816.

Having observed, in October last, a publication signed by the Surveyor General, stating that certain lands, lying between the rivers St. Francis and Arkansas, were about to be surveyed, by order of the Government of the United States, for the purpose of satisfying military land warrants, granted to soldiers who served during the late war, and having this day received authentic information that the survey of the said lands was now going into execution, I do hereby protest against such survey, for the following reasons, viz: that, on the 27th day of June, in the year 1797, the Baron de Carondelet, Governor General of the province of Louisiana, then under the sovereignty of Spain, granted to Elisha Winter one thousand arpents square; to Gabriel Winter, his son, five hundred arpents square of land; to William Winter, his son, five hundred arpents square, and to six other persons fifteen arpents in front, and forty arpents in depth; the whole quantity amounting to one million five hundred and three thousand six hundred arpents of land, lying in the district of Arkansas; and that the said Elisha Winter and sons were put into regular possession of the lands granted to them as aforesaid, by the commandant of the post of Arkansas, and that they resided thereon when the province of Louisiana was surrendered to the United States; all of which will appear from the grant and other documents now before the House of Representatives of the United States. As these lands are a part of those ordered to be surveyed by the Government for the purposes above mentioned, I do, for myself and the other heirs, some of whom are orphans, protest against the surveying thereof.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GABRIEL WINTER.

The Baron Carondelet, knight of the order of St. John, major general of the royal armies, governor and commandant general, vice patron of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, inspector of their troops, &c.

Desiring to promote population and agriculture, by all the means which the political circumstances of the times allow, and attending to the propositions made to the Government by Elisha Winter, to form an establishment at the post of Arkansas for the cultivation of wheat, flax, and hemp; I grant henceforth, that it may be carried into effect, to the said Elisha Winter, a thousand arpents of land* square, (or squared,) to Gabriel Winter five hundred* square, (or squared,) and to Samuel Price, Richard Price, William Hubble, John Price, William Russell, Joseph Stillwell, and Walter Carr, fifteen arpents of land of front to each one, with the respective depth of forty, in consideration of the good accounts which have been given to me of their excellent conduct and good principles, under the express condition that, as soon as the boundaries of the surveys shall have been established in the manner which shall be designated by the commandant of the post, the corresponding title, in form, shall be provided for each one. That the establishment must be formed united, and as much together as may be possible; no more American families to be admitted in it than those named, and those which the Government shall permit; although the commandant may admit good colonists who may present themselves, Spaniards, Frenchmen, Germans, and Hollanders; but vagrants are by no means to be admitted. Hence, it is made the duty of the commandant of the district to take notice of the non-observance of this clause; provided always, that if, in the term of one year, the lands designated in this document to the families named are not occupied, this concession is void; which, in all its parts, the commandant of the district will comply with, on whom is enjoined a strict observance of the whole, as, also, of the good treatment and humanity belonging to the Spanish Government.

The present given in New Orleans, 27th of June, 1797.

THE BARON DE CARONDELET.
ANDRES LOPEZ ARMESTO.

DEAR SIR:

WASHINGTON, 24th January, 1817.

I return you the paper you sent me, with two translations, the one made by Mr. Stoughton, of the Spanish legation, and the other by myself.

From the note added to mine, you will see that I am in doubt as to the true meaning of the most material part of the grant. The doubt is in what sense the word "arpanes" is used. If it is used to designate a given quantity of land, then I would say that a thousand arpents were granted in a square; if, on the other hand, it is used to designate linear measure, (viz: that equal to its square,) as it frequently is in Louisiana, then I would say that a tract equal to the square of one thousand arpents, when laid off upon one line, was granted. The difference is immense, and the decision ought not, and will not, I presume, rest upon a mere translation.

With great respect and regard, I remain, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN GRAHAM.

THOS. DOUGHERTY, Esq.

P. S. Among the papers now sent you will find a copy of the grant to Winters, in the hand-writing of the former Secretary of the Spanish Government at New Orleans, Andre Lopez Armesto. It may, therefore, I presume, be depended on as a correct copy. It was left with me by Mr. Winter, who requested that I should send it to you. I also send a copy of the paper you handed to me, as corrected by Mr. Stoughton.

[TRANSLATION.]

The Baron of Carondelet, knight of the religion of St. John, major general of the royal armies, governor general, vice patron of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, and inspector of his troops, &c.

Being desirous of promoting the population and agriculture by all the means which the political circumstances of these times offer, and taking into consideration the proposals made to the Government by Elisha Winter to form a settlement to the southeast of Arkansas, for the cultivation of wheat, flax, and hemp, I do hereby grant unto the aforesaid Elisha Winter, with a view that the same may be effected, one thousand square arpents of land; to Gabriel Winter, five hundred square arpents; and to Samuel Price, Richard Price, William Hubble, John Price, William Russell, Joseph Stillwell, and Walter Carr, fifteen arpents of land in front to each, with its respective depth of forty arpents, in consideration of the favorable accounts which have been communicated to me of their excellent conduct and good principles, under the express consideration that, as soon as they shall have settled themselves with the survey which the commandant of the post shall have directed to be made, there shall be furnished to each the necessary title in form, and the settlement shall be made close to one another, and as near as possible, not admitting therein more American families than those above named, and such as may be permitted by the Government; but the commandant may admit such Spanish, French, German, or Dutch, good colonists as may present themselves; but in no instance shall vagrants be admitted, as the commandant shall be answerable for the observance of this clause. It being understood that, if, in the space of one year, the lands destined in this document for the families herein mentioned, should not be settled, this concession shall be void, which shall be punctually fulfilled, in all its parts, by the commandant of the district, to whom the strict observance of every thing herein contained is enjoined, as also that good treatment and humanity peculiar to the Spanish Government.

* As the word "cuadrados," in the original, may have been used either as an adjective or a participle, it has been rendered accordingly without transposition. The expression is probably technical, and the true meaning of it, in this instance, is, therefore, to be collected rather by reference to the usage of the country than to grammatical construction.

Given at New Orleans, the 27th June, 1797,

EL BARON DE CARONDELET.
ANDRES LOPEZ ARMESTO.

SIR:

WASHINGTON, 4th February, 1817.

Having revised the translation which I had formerly given of the grant of land by the Baron de Carondelet, in the year 1797, to Elisha Winter and others, and compared it with the original, I find that the word square, which I have placed before the word arpents, is, in the original, after it, (arpanes de tierra quadrados,) I therefore correct it so far as to place the word square after the word arpents; but, at the same time, I declare myself unacquainted with the true meaning of the original in this instance, to decide which of these two positions of the word square should be preferred.

I am, sir, respectfully, your most obedient servant,

FRANCIS STOUGHTON.

THOMAS DOUGHERTY, Esq.

MEMORANDUM.

In the investigation of my claim before the House, some doubts may arise as to the meaning and application of the French word arpent or arpanes. The translation made by Mr. Graham is correct, and does not differ from the translation made by the royal interpreter in the year 1797, each having reference to linear measure. In the other translation the word square is transposed, and would seem to have reference to each particular arpent, when the boundaries and figure of each of the grants in the same concession are only alluded to, as will appear by a reference to that document. It is an undeniable fact, that the word arpent or arpanes was used as a linear measure; and it is denied that square acres were ever granted in any concession, in which case the word superficial would have been used, and then the arpent might be considered either square, round, or triangular, the quantity would not be varied; and were the grants for square arpents, each square arpent might be detached, and as many tracts formed as there were superficial arpents. With respect to the grammatical construction of the sentence, I would ask how twelve leagues square should be translated? Answer. Doce leagues quadrados. And the same with respect to arpanes, when considered as linear measure. I would ask, is the concession consistent in itself? Could the variety of colonists be placed on five hundred or one thousand superficial arpents? Is the arpent made linear in any of the grants in the same concession? (See the six small grants.) In the six small grants the superficial quantity is not given, the boundaries and form alone is given; and why not apply the same consistent rule to the other three grants which were made to the prime movers of the establishment?

Report of the Committee on the Public Lands on the petition of Chew and Relf, owners, and representatives of the owners of the claim of the Marquis de Maison Rouge, made February 10, 1817. Accompanied with a "bill confirming the title of the Marquis de Maison Rouge."

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Chew and Relf, owners, and representatives of the owners, of the claim of the Marquis de Maison Rouge, on the Ouachita river, State of Louisiana, have had the same under consideration, and report as follows:

The Marquis de Maison Rouge obtained, in consequence of a contract with the Governor of Louisiana, dated 17th of March, 1795, which was duly approved by the King of Spain, the 14th July 1795, a title to a tract of land, of which the following is a copy:

"The Baron de Carondelet, knight of the order of St. John, marshal de camp of the royal armies, governor general, vice patron of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, inspector, &c. Forasmuch as the Marquis de Maison Rouge is near completing the establishment of the Ouachita, (Washita,) which he was authorized to make for thirty families, by the royal order of July, 1795; and desirous to remove, for the future, all doubt respecting other families or colonists who may come to establish themselves, we destine and appropriate, exclusively, for the establishment of the aforesaid Marquis de Maison Rouge, by virtue of the powers granted to us by the King, the thirty superficial leagues marked in the plan annexed to this instrument, with the limits and boundaries designated with our approbation by the Surveyor General, Don Carlos Trudeau, under the terms stipulated and contracted for by the said Marquis de Maison Rouge; and, that it may at all times stand good, we give the present, signed with our hands, sealed with our seal at arms, and countersigned by the underwritten honorary commissary at war, and secretary for His Majesty for this commandancy general.

"THE BARON DE CARONDELET.
"ANDRES LOPEZ ARMESTO.

"NOTE.—That, in conformity with his contract, the Marquis de Maison Rouge is not to admit or establish any American on the land included in this grant.

"THE BARON DE CARONDELET."

The committee have duly examined the above title, and are of opinion that it is a legal and formal title, according to the laws and usages of the province of Louisiana, and that the same ought to be confirmed, and report a bill for that purpose.

FRAUDS BY PURCHASERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 31, 1817.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the resolution instructing them "to inquire what further provisions are necessary in the existing laws for the more effectual prevention of frauds by purchasers of public lands," reported:

That they have examined the subject with an earnest solicitude to render as perfect as possible the public code in relation to the sale of lands; that they have examined every statute from the institution of the present system of vending the public lands, and have inquired, as far as their situation and attention to other duties permitted, into the practical operation of those laws. At a very early period of legislation on this subject, Congress provided all the usual and ordinary safeguards against fraud and imposition; however, it is believed that, in a few instances, the ingenuity of speculation did elude the vigilance of the Legislature; but Congress, by a succession of salutary provisions, have been gradually improving the system, and reducing the means of imposition, and by the act of the 14th January, 1812, annihilated the possibility of fraud. Under the operation of the laws antecedent to the enactment of the last, the prospect of unlawful gain to the pretended purchaser, though possible, was remote and contingent; but now no fraud can be practised. The system is simple, its provisions well known, and its operation (believed to be) eminently beneficial. The same solicitude, which would have been felt by the committee to give their assistance to correct any defect in the laws, impels them to cherish the present system in its simplicity, and restrains them from recommending the introduction of any new principle which is not manifestly necessary.

The committee, therefore, report that, ignorant of frauds in the purchases of public land, they deem it unnecessary to recommend, in this particular, any alteration of the existing laws.

APPLICATION FOR LAND TO ESTABLISH A FERRY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1818.

Mr. MORROW, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Joel Rivers, reported:

That it appears from the statement made by the petitioner that he has, within the last year, commenced an improvement near Fort Claiborne, on the Alabama river, where public convenience required a ferry; that he has expended five hundred dollars in making a ferry, and five hundred dollars more will be necessary to complete it; that the improvement thus made, is on land belonging to the United States. The petitioner, not being able to purchase the tracts on each side of the river which embrace his ferry, and doubting that speculators may become the purchasers, and avail themselves of the advantages of his labor, prays that Congress would authorize him to purchase four acres on each side of the river, to secure his improvement, at a price they may deem reasonable.

The committee can discover no principle which would warrant a favorable report on this case. The improvement made by the petitioner was unauthorized, and his expenditures voluntary; of right he alone should be liable to the consequences of a failure in his enterprise. His possession was taken, and improvements made contrary to law, and cannot be made the ground of a claim to peculiar privileges or an exclusive grant.

The principle usually assumed by adventurers on the public lands, that their improvements, though unauthorized, give additional value to tracts improved and the adjoining lands, and that, on principles of equity, the Government are bound to give them a pre-emption as a remuneration for the value thus imparted to the public property. Should the principle thus assumed, receive the unqualified sanction of Government, then might individuals at any time lay the United States under contribution to an amount unlimited, except by the calculations of private interest, contrary to the public will, as expressed by prohibitory penal laws. The following resolution is respectfully submitted:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

PROPOSITION TO INCREASE THE PRICE OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred a resolution instructing them to inquire into the expediency of increasing the price at which the public lands shall be sold hereafter, have had the same under consideration, and respectfully report:

That the lands of the United States are carefully surveyed and divided into sections of six hundred and forty acres, quarter sections, and, in certain cases, eighths of sections; that they are advertised for, and set up at public sale, and disposed of to the highest bidder, at any price above two dollars per acre. If they are not sold, they are returned to the Register's office, and may be entered for, in the office, at two dollars per acre, with a credit, after the payment of one-fourth, of two, three, and four years; the effect of this part of the system has been heretofore deemed beneficial both to the public and to individuals. It is beneficial to individuals, because the price is so moderate, that the poorest citizen may place himself in the most useful and honorable situation in society, by becoming a cultivator of his own land, and the fixed value is so high, connected with the abundance of our vacant territory, as to prevent individuals from purchasing, with a hope of advantage, unreasonably extensive and numerous tracts, to be held for purposes of speculation. That this is the case, that lands sold by the United States are not held by speculators, may be fairly inferred by a consideration of the following facts:

From the opening of the land offices in the Northwest Territory, as it was then called, to the 30th September, 1810, three million one hundred and sixty-seven thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine acres of land were sold; this amount, compared with the population in 1810, is in the ratio of something less than twelve acres for each individual. The free white inhabitants of Virginia, in 1800, amounted to five hundred and eighteen thousand six hundred and seventy-four; the lands of the State, valued in 1798, amounted to forty million four hundred and fifty-eight thousand six hundred and forty-four acres; this, divided among the inhabitants, gives to each individual upwards of seventy-six acres of land, but it will not be contended that the lands of Virginia are held by speculators; and with much less truth, can it be so said of the lands northwest of the Ohio. Again, to show by inference that the public lands are not disposed of at too low a price, the committee have thought proper to inquire into the estimated value of the lands in several of the States, and they find that, in the year 1798, the lands of New Hampshire, amounting to three million seven hundred and forty-nine thousand and sixty-one acres, were valued at $19,028,108, or five dollars and seven cents per acre.

In Pennsylvania, 11,959,865 acres were valued at $72,824,852, or $6 09 per acre.

In Maryland, 5,444,272 acres were valued at $21,634,004, or $3 77 per acre.

In Virginia, 40,458,644 acres were valued at $59,976,860, or $1 48 cents per acre; and, finally, in the sixteen States at that time composing the United States, the land amounted to 163,746,686 acres, valued at $479,293,263, or $2 92 per acre. Now, if the lands of the United States, settled and peopled as they were, have been thus valued, it may safely be concluded that the uninhabited wilds of our forests are not disposed of at too low a price.

Indeed, the committee feel somewhat apprehensive that the United States, so far from being enabled to increase, will find themselves compelled to lessen the price of the public lands, or to forego the golden dreams they indulge in, of enormous revenue to arise from their sale. It will be recollected by the House, that heretofore the public has been the monopolist of land; that, notwithstanding this advantage, not more than eight or nine millions of acres have been disposed of for a sum less than 19,000,000 of dollars, and that too, during a space of eighteen or twenty years.

They will now take into consideration the fact, that five or six millions of acres have been given as bounty to the soldiers of the late war, and now are, or soon will be, in the market, to meet the demand which the United States alone could heretofore supply. The committee will not obtrude upon the House the deductions or reflections which grow out of this state of things; they content themselves with the justification it affords of the resolution which they respectfully submit:

Resolved, That it is inexpedient, at the present time, to increase the price at which the public lands are required to be sold.

APPLICATION FOR AN EXTENSION OF CREDIT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Edmund Dana, in behalf of himself and others, have had the same under consideration, and submit to the House the following report:

The petitioners, amounting to some hundreds, after stating a variety of facts which, for the most part, apply to all the citizens of the Atlantic States, conclude with a prayer that they may be authorized to purchase two hundred and seven thousand five hundred acres of land, for which the first payment shall not be exacted prior to the month of February, 1819. They further ask to be permitted to purchase ninety-five thousand three hundred acres, on which the first payment shall not be exacted prior to the 1st December, 1820. The committee, however well disposed towards the petitioners, cannot recommend to the House a compliance with their request; it involves the expediency of altering the whole system regulating the disposal of the public lands so far as it regards the credit now allowed. Should the present applicants succeed in their demand, similar favors would be asked from all parts of the country, and the necessity for an entire change of the laws, as they now stand, would be at once apparent and irresistible. A citizen of industry and economy can encounter no difficulties in obtaining the lands of the public. Every facility has been extended to them; the poor man, if he be not enabled to pay in advance, after the first payment, has a credit allowed him of two, three, and four years for the residue of the sum; if he be not enabled to purchase a section for his convenience, certain quarter sections have been subdivided into eighths of sections, or tracts of eighty acres each. Surely, then, when we take into consideration the smallness of the quantity which may be bought, and the long credit which is given, there can be no cause of complaint, and no sufficient reason assigned either for a general change in the system, or a particular exception to it in favor of the petitioner.

The committee respectfully submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted, and that the petitioner, Edmund Dana, have leave to withdraw the petition.

APPLICATION TO SELL SCHOOL LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 7, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of sundry inhabitants of Missouri Territory, reported:

That this is an application on the part of the memorialists to be permitted to sell a moiety of the sections of land within certain limits, which have been reserved for the use of public schools, and to vest the money arising from such sale in trustees, for the use of an academy to be hereafter established at Marthasville, in the county of St. Charles.

The committee feel no disposition to divert the lands reserved for the use of public schools in the Missouri Territory, or any where else, from the purposes for which they were originally intended. They are of opinion that many schools are to be preferred to one academy, and that it is better that the citizens of the United States should all have it in their power to read and write, than that a favored few should be accommodated with globes, and charts, and maps, and philosophical apparatus, as seems to be contemplated by the memorialists. It is deemed unnecessary to urge other objections growing out of the sparse population of that part of the world; it is obvious that this donation of each sixteenth section in every township can only be considered as of value and utility in connexion with the density of the settlements.

The committee submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the memorialists ought not to be granted.

APPLICATION TO SELL SCHOOL LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 12, 1818.

Mr. MORROW, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the trustees for the Vincennes University, reported:

That, by an act of Congress, passed on the 26th of March, 1804, "for the disposal of the public lands in the Indiana Territory," an entire township of six miles square was reserved in the district of Vincennes "for the use of a seminary of learning;" and that, by an act of the Legislature of the Indiana Territory, passed on the 29th of November, 1806, for establishing a university at Vincennes, the trustees appointed for the seminary were authorized to sell four thousand acres of the said township, for the purpose of putting the institution into immediate operation. The proceeds of this sale were applied to the erection of a building suitable for a public school. The trustees were also authorized to rent out or lease the remaining part of the township, for the use of the said university. It appears, however, that, from causes incidental to a new country, where the price of land is low, and the quantity for settlement disproportioned to the population, that the trustees have not been able to make any advantageous disposition of the lands by granting leases, nor to derive effective resource from rents for the support of the seminary, and that the unfavorable prospect of their unproductiveness for years to come, when disposed of in that way, has induced the trustees for the present to abandon the measure.

But, in order to derive from these lands an active fund for rendering the institution respectable, and immediately advantageous to the country, the trustees have, by their petition, recommended to Congress the propriety of authorizing the sale of the lands, and vesting the proceeds of the sale in the stock of such bank or banks as may be designated for the purpose, and of vesting the dividends arising in the trustees, for the use of the Vincennes university.

The committee cannot doubt that the sale of the lands, and investment of the proceeds in the manner proposed, would produce immediate aid, and, for several years to come, a more effective fund for the support of the institution, than what can be derived from the lands when let on rent or by lease; nor would they express an opinion that it would be improper, when these lands shall have acquired their real value, from the increase of population and advanced improvement on the adjacent country, to dispose of them in the manner proposed by the trustees.

Indeed, several considerations would appear to recommend the eventual adoption of such a measure. A moneyed capital, as it is the most manageable fund, must have a preference for the endowment of a seminary over that of rents drawn from land, which is too precarious in its nature to be depended on for the purpose.

It is also a consideration of some importance, in a political point of view, whether the reservation of title in Government to such considerable tracts of land to be let on rent by the agents of a corporation, and to be settled and cultivated by tenants in some measure dependent on those agents, would, in practice, operate to the advantage of civil liberty. To assure the agricultural class of the community the independent and free exercise of the privileges of citizens, it is necessary they should hold, in absolute right, the soil which they cultivate. But, on a view of the whole case, it would appear to the committee that, to authorize a sale of the lands at present, before they have acquired their proper value, would be to sacrifice to present advantage the future prospects of the institution. It is worthy of inquiry whether the object in view would justify the sacrifice, or, indeed, whether it be at all attainable at present. The object is to render the institution immediately "respectable and advantageous." Did this depend alone on the appropriation of funds, it might in some measure be realized; but it is conceived that all establishments of the kind, formed for the higher branches of literature, must depend for their advances and maturity on the progress of society, the state of common schools for preparatory education, and the population, wealth, and state of improvement in the country in which they are situated. And it is not probable that in a country so recently settled, the means would be afforded to keep in respectable standing an institution such as is contemplated, even after, by an anticipation of its fund, it had been forced into a premature existence. The following resolution is respectfully submitted:

Resolved, That the petitioners have leave to withdraw their petition.

APPLICATION FOR AN EXTENSION OF CREDIT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 13, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of sundry emigrants from Switzerland, have had the same under consideration, and report:

That the petitioners ask permission of the Government to become the purchasers of twelve townships of land, at the price of two dollars per acre, payable in fourteen years after the grant. The committee are entirely disposed to consider the Swiss emigrants, and all others, when they become citizens, as entitled to all the rights of the native-born citizens of the United States; but they can go no further; they cannot view them as authorized to expect peculiar favors and indulgences. The committee, within a few days past, recommended the rejection of a similar application, signed by many hundreds of the inhabitants of several States of the Union; they cannot, in justice, recommend a different course on the present occasion. They, therefore, respectfully submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

CLAIM OF THE HEIRS OF DON J. CLAMORGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 15, 1818.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The petition of Risdon H. Price and Charles Frimon Delouriere, both inhabitants of the town of St. Louis, and citizens of the United States, respectfully shows:

That, in consideration of great and eminent services rendered to the crown of Spain, by the late Don Jacque Clamorgan, there was granted to him a large tract of land in the then province of Upper Louisiana, now Territory of Missouri; the nature and importance of which services were fully set forth by the said Don Jacque Clamorgan, in a petition to His Excellency Don Zenon Trudeau, Lieutenant Governor of the province, drawn up in the French language, and of which the following is an exact translation:

PETITION.

To DON ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Nothing was more glorious to the petitioner than the encouragement you were pleased to give to his industrious exertions for exploring the Indian nations, as far as the Pacific ocean, when he was charged with that mission by the General Government. You did him the honor to authorize a hope of your protection and support. You did more; you solicited from the General Government the auxiliary means claimed by the petitioner, for the active prosecution of an undertaking on which His Majesty seemed to have bestowed a thought. In fact, His Majesty granted to the petitioner the exclusive privilege of trade, for the space of ten years, with the nations of the Upper Missouri, with a view not only to open a new branch in the fur trade, but also to acquire information, and procure a local knowledge of the immense tracts of country which were to be explored; objects which could not be attained without great sacrifices, amidst the nations of Indians whose favorable disposition it was necessary to conciliate towards us. Through your recommendation His Excellency the Baron de Carondelet laid before His Majesty a statement of the excessive expenses which the petitioner had to sustain in that arduous enterprise in order to facilitate a remote communication, whereby His Majesty was induced to allow the annual payment of $10,000 towards defraying the expenses of the nations and territories of the Upper Missouri; and, at the same time, keeping off the foreign traders of Hudson's bay and lake Superior, who introduce their commerce into those parts, and estrange the affections of the native tribes.

His Excellency the Baron de Carondelet, as well as yourself, did forthwith communicate, by official letters, the generosity of His Majesty in behalf of the petitioner; but the result proved ineffectual, owing to the difficulties interposed by the Intendant, Mr. Morales, who pretended to have at that time, in the Royal Treasury, no funds appropriated to that use.

Thus placed between two conflicting authorities, the petitioner remained the victim of his zeal and endeavors to promote the wishes of the General Government, and the instructions of His Majesty.

Under these unfortunate circumstances, the petitioner has recourse to your goodness, and prays that you will please to grant to him, on the west side of the Mississippi, at the distance of a few leagues above the mouth of the Missouri river, the tract of land which lies, and is bounded on one side by the creek named Charette or Dardenne, and on the other by the little river named Rivière au Cuivre, (Copper river,) both of which empty into the Mississippi, which is to be the eastern boundary of the tract applied for; the two streams above named, Charette or Dardenne, and Cuivre, one to the south and the other to the north, are to be the lateral boundaries.

The petitioner prays, moreover, that you will be pleased to grant him sixty arpents of land in front, on the Mississippi, beginning at the mouth of the little river first above named, Charette or Dardenne, and descending the Mississippi.

Also, sixty arpents in front, on the Mississippi, beginning above the mouth of the second river above named, Rivière au Cuivre, and running up the Mississippi.

The depth of the three several tracts of land aforesaid to be extended and determined by two lines, which are to begin on the margin of the Mississippi, one at the southern, the other at the northern extremity, and to run parallel on each side, progressing towards the west until they have both reached the inland hills, continuing in a straight line, still westwardly, to the distance of about two hundred arpents from the foot of the said hills; and the two extreme points of said side lines, thus established, are to be joined by another straight line to be run as the fourth side of the three contiguous tracts as aforesaid, so as to include within the compass of the said extended lines, all the waters of the said rivers, Charette and Cuivre; to the end that the petitioner may, in the end, erect saw-mills and grist-mills thereon, and also keep there a stock of cattle and other animals, out of which he may export salt provisions to the capital. And the petitioner will render thanks to your goodness.

JACQUE CLAMORGAN.

St. Louis, March 1, 1797.

Which petition was duly presented to His Excellency Don Zenon Trudeau, who examined the same, and on the third day of March, in the year 1797, made his decree thereupon, which was signed by himself, and is in the following words:

DECREE OF CONCESSION.

Don Zenon Trudeau, captain in the Louisiana regiment, lieutenant colonel by brevet, and lieutenant governor of the western part of the Illinois.

Having seen the foregoing statement of Don Jacque Clamorgan, and adverting to the special recommendation made to me by the Governor General, the Baron de Carondelet, to facilitate and protect the discovery and trade of the Upper Missouri, in which, at my solicitation, the said Don Jacque Clamorgan has been actively employed; taking into consideration the laborious exertions which such undertakings have necessitated, the additional expenses which he has incurred in pursuit of those objects, and the importance of encouraging and favoring the discoveries aforesaid, consistent with the fiscal interest of His Majesty, and the prosperity of these settlements, which will be promoted by an increase of population. For these considerations, and that of said Clamorgan having well deserved of the Government, and rendered himself worthy of its favor, the surveyor of this jurisdiction, when the occupation of his office will permit, will survey for the applicant aforesaid the tract of land which he solicits, in the same mode and manner by him designated in the present memorial; which, together with the certificate (procès-verbal) of the survey, and of the boundaries established, will form the title of concession, which he is, in due time, to present to the Governor General of the province for his approbation and record.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

St. Louis of the Illinois, March 3, 1797.

Your petitioners show to your honorable body, that the said Lieutenant Governor, Don Zenon Trudeau, in consequence of the largeness of the grant which he had just made to the said Don Jacque Clamorgan, deemed it his duty to communicate the circumstance and his reasons, in detail, to his military and civil superior at New Orleans, His Excellency the Governor General, the Baron de Carondelet; to which effect he addressed to the said Governor General, an official letter, bearing date the 11th day of March, in the year 1797, that is to say, within eight days after the date of the concession which was the subject of communication. To which letter the Baron de Carondelet replied on the 5th day of April following, approving and confirming the grant which the Lieutenant Governor had made to Clamorgan; and, on the 3d day of July following, the decree of confirmation was communicated to Don Jacque Clamorgan by the Lieutenant Governor, Don Zenon Trudeau, by an official letter of that date, of which the following is a translation:

DECREE OF CONFIRMATION.

Governor Trudeau to Don Jacque Clamorgan.

SIR:

St. Louis, July 3, 1797.

Under date the 5th of April, of the present year, Governor General the Baron de Carondelet writes to me as follows:

"I have received your letter of office of the 11th of March last, in which you state the motives which have induced you to concede to Don Santiago Clamorgan the tract of land, situated between the two rivers Charette and Au Cuivre, emptying into the Mississippi, together with sixty arpents to the north, and sixty arpents further to the south of said two rivers, which are to be assumed for the points of departure, and the Mississippi for the front side; two lines to be drawn parallel, extending in depth as far as two hundred arpents beyond the foot of the first hills, and in the manner which you say the applicant has required. All which meets my approbation, as Clamorgan has merited that favor from Government."

The which I transcribe to you for your intelligence and government. God preserve you many years.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

Your petitioners now show to your honorable body that the said petition of Don Jacque Clamorgan, and the said decree of concession made by Don Zenon Trudeau, and the said decree of confirmation made by His Excellency the Baron de Carondelet, have been duly recorded by the recorder of land titles for upper Louisiana, on the 27th day of June, in the year 1808, in book D, pages 314 and 315, in conformity with the provisions of an act of Congress of 28th February, 1806, requiring to be filed and recorded the evidence of land claims which had been conceded but not surveyed, during the continuance of the Spanish Government in Upper Louisiana.

Your petitioners further show, that the claim of Don J. Clamorgan was laid before the commissioners appointed for the adjustment of land titles in upper Louisiana, and the confirmation thereof was solicited by him under the laws of the United States during his lifetime. But no decision or report was made upon the claim to the knowledge of the said Don James Clamorgan, or of your petitioners.

Under these circumstances, your petitioners have been induced to bring the claim before your honorable body for examination and final adjustment by you.

In doing so, they deem it requisite to satisfy your honorable body of the authenticity of the claim, and of the just ground upon which it is founded; and, for that purpose, they will undertake to establish, by proof, the following points:

1. That the petition above set forth is the genuine petition of Don Jacque Clamorgan.
2. That the decree of concession is the genuine act of the Lieutenant Governor, Don Z. Trudeau.
3. That the decree of confirmation is the genuine act of the Governor General, the Baron de Carondelet.
4. That the grant was made in consideration of valuable services, and of a large debt due from the Crown of Spain to Mr. Clamorgan.

PROOF.

1. That the petition is the genuine petition of Don J. Clamorgan, they exhibit—

First. The original petition.

Second. The affidavit of Antoine Soulard, late Surveyor General of Upper Louisiana.

Third. The affidavit of Colonel Auguste Chouteau, of the town of St. Louis, and late commissioner in the service of the United States.

Fourth. The affidavit of Captain James Mackay, formerly a deputy surgeon, and local commandant under the Spanish Government in Upper Louisiana.

2. That the decree of concession is the genuine act of Lieutenant Governor Trudeau, they present—

First. The original decree.

Second. The affidavits of Mr. Soulard, Colonel Chouteau, and Captain Mackay, which prove the decree of concession to be signed by the true signature of the said Lieutenant Governor Trudeau.

3. That the decree of confirmation is the genuine act of the Governor General, the Baron de Carondelet, they exhibit—

First. The original official letter of Don Zenon Trudeau, dated 3d July, 1797, addressed to Don J. Clamorgan, in which is transcribed the letter of the Baron de Carondelet of the 5th of April, 1797, approving and confirming the grant to Clamorgan.

Second. The affidavits of Mr. Soulard, Colonel Chouteau, and Captain James Mackay, which prove the said letter to be the genuine hand-writing and signature of Lieutenant Governor Trudeau.

Finally, your petitioners appeal to the knowledge of all persons who may be acquainted with the hand-writing of the said Lieutenant Governor Trudeau and Don James Clamorgan, to verify and prove the same fact.

Upon which it is respectfully submitted, that the authenticity of Mr. Clamorgan's petition, of Governor Trudeau's decree of concession, and of the Baron de Carondelet's confirmation, is established by judicial and convincing proofs.

4. That the grant was made to Mr. Clamorgan, in consideration of valuable services, and of a large debt due to him from the Crown of Spain, your petitioners will present—

First. An original letter in the Spanish language from His Excellency the Baron de Carondelet, dated from New Orleans, 18th September, 1796, addressed to Don J. Clamorgan. This letter will show that a Spanish company was formed under the auspices of the Baron de Carondelet, and approved by the King of Spain, to explore the Missouri to its source, and to make discoveries to the South sea, to conciliate the good-will of the Indians, expel the British traders, to build forts, and to man them at the expense of the King; and that Don Jacque Clamorgan was placed at the head of this company.

Here follows a translation of the said letter:

Letter from the Baron de Carondelet to Don J. Clamorgan.

SIR:

NEW ORLEANS, September 13, 1796.

I have just now received the agreeable intelligence of the approbation, by the King, of the Spanish company, (these are the very words of the cedule royale issued in the Council of State, held the 27th May last,) as formed in 1794, to make discoveries to the west of the Missouri, together with regulations and instructions according to which you have permitted the same, and granted to it the exclusive privilege of the trade with all the Indian nations of said river Missouri, residing beyond the Poncas nation, offering a recompense of three thousand dollars to the first person who shall arrive at the South sea. Secondly, the permission granted to said company of equipping and maintaining, in the forts which it has and may have hereafter, the one hundred armed men which are judged necessary, at the expense of His Majesty, all under your orders, and for the purposes contemplated, which you will attend to with the greatest care, &c.

I hope, sir, that, after these favors and privileges, the company will resume a new vigor, and use the greatest exertions to answer the intention of His Majesty, and exclude the British from these parts. The house of Todd is likewise approved by His Majesty, who has added to all these favors the reduction of the imposts from fifteen to six per centum throughout the colony.

We shall see whether L'Eglise will get the three thousand dollars.

I have the honor to be, with the most perfect consideration, sir, your very humble and very obedient servant,
EL BARON DE CARONDELET.

DON J. CLAMORGAN.

Second. Your petitioners present another letter of the Baron de Carondelet to Don J. Clamorgan, dated the 8th November, 1796, acknowledging the justice of his claim for ten thousand dollars due from the Crown of Spain. The original in the Spanish language, of which an English translation here follows:

Second letter from the Baron de Carondelet to Don J. Clamorgan.

SIR:

NEW ORLEANS, November 8, 1796.

There appears to me no objection to your raising, in the country of the Illinois, the one hundred militia-men allowed by His Majesty for the forts of the company of Missouri; but I cannot answer for the reimbursement of the ten thousand dollars, which rests on the decision of His Majesty, although I am firmly of opinion that he will ordain it, in consequence of my representations in support of your claim.

This is what I ought to answer to your official letter of this date on the subject.

God preserve you many years.

EL BARON DE CARONDELET.

DON SANTIAGO CLAMORGAN.

Third. Your petitioners present, for the same purpose, a letter of Don John Ventura Morales, Intendant of the Finances, addressed to Mr. Clamorgan in answer to the demand made by him upon the Royal Treasury. The said letter written in the Spanish language, and of which the following is a translation into the English language:

Letter from the Intendant Morales to Clamorgan.

SIR:

NEW ORLEANS, May 24, 1797.

I have received your letter directed to me under date of the 15th ultimo. The claim which you set forth is supported by the best reasons, and would meet with no objections were it not from the obligation I am under, from the responsibility of my situation, to take all requisite sureties in order to justify, in the most explicit manner, any extraordinary appropriation of the funds confided to me by His Majesty. I have, therefore, written on the subject to Mr. Delassus, and on the categorical answer he will give me, I will ordain what will appear to me the most advisable.

I have the honor to be, perfectly, sir, your very humble servant,

JUAN VENTURA MORALES.

MORRIS CLAMORGAN.

ST. LOUIS, November 10, 1817.

Your petitioners respectfully submit, that the meritorious services set forth by Don J. Clamorgan in his petition and the debt due to him from the Crown of Spain, are fully and explicitly acknowledged in these letters; and they believe it only remains to prove the authenticity of these letters, to give to their contents the weight and character of judicial proof. This they are ready to do by the most satisfactory evidence, and, for that purpose, they, herewith, present and show to your honorable body—

1st. The original letters.

2d. Affidavits of Colonel Choteau, Antoine Soulard, and Captain Mackay, in which they make oath that the said letters are in the hand-writing of the Baron de Carondelet, and the Intendant Morales, and that the signatures attached to them are the true and genuine signatures of those officers.

Your petitioners further show that the said three letters have been duly recorded by the recorder of land titles for Upper Louisiana, in book D, pages 314 and 315, as evidences of the claim of said Clamorgan, in virtue of the law of Congress for recording the evidences of land claims in Upper Louisiana.

Your petitioners believe that they might now safely conclude the proofs intended to support the consideration on which the grant to Clamorgan was founded. They will adduce but one piece of evidence further, the affidavit of Captain James Mackay, which may be confirmed by a multitude of others, as the matters stated therein were subjects of general notoriety throughout the province.

Here follows the affidavit:

"I, James Mackay, do hereby certify that I have perused deliberately certain documents in the hands of the trustees of the late Jacque Clamorgan, and compared them with the extracts or copies of the same, from the commissioners of land titles in the hands of Messrs. Risdon H. Price and Frimon Delourier, concerning a grant of land granted by the late Spanish authorities to a certain Jacque Clamorgan, of the town of St. Louis, in Upper Louisiana, comprising a distance of sixty arpents below the river Charette, or Dardenne, the ancient name of said water course, and sixty arpents above the river Cuivre, the Mississippi being the front of said land; the said instrument bearing date the 1st of March, 1797, and the decree thereto affixed, dated the 3d of March, same year, the signatures to each of which I am well acquainted with, and declare them to be the genuine signatures of the said Clamorgan and Governor Trudeau. Also, a copy of a letter from the Baron de Carondelet to Governor Trudeau, and transmitted by the said Trudeau, under his signature, to the aforesaid Jacque Clamorgan, dated the 3d of July, 1797, which signatures are genuine.

"Also two signatures of the Baron de Carondelet to two communications to the said Clamorgan, dated 18th of September and 8th of November, 1796, are the hand-writing of the said Baron de Carondelet.

"Also a communication from the Intendant, Don Juan Ventura Morales, dated the 24th of May, 1797, is the true signature and hand-writing of the said Morales.

"Having been myself for many years a Spanish officer, also a member of the Missouri Fur Company, at the period alluded to, as well as in the habit of corresponding with the said officers, and personally and intimately acquainted with them and their signatures, do, therefore, feel myself, in point of knowledge of the facts contained in said instruments, competent to say the whole of the said signatures are in the hand-writing of those persons whose act they purport to be.

"Mr. Clamorgan was the principal director and representative of the Missouri Fur Company as recognised in the King's royal schedule, and the services and expenditures, as stated in his petition, were truly and faithfully performed by himself and said association, being myself the principal explorer and director of said company's affairs in the Indian country, and through my hands were distributed, principally, the presents of merchandise necessary to secure the friendship of the Indians, and to estrange them from the influence and traffic of the British, Northwest, and Hudson's Bay Companies; to effect which, very considerable sums were expended by, and out of the funds of, said company.

"According to the stipulations contained in the Baron de Carondelet's letter of the 18th of September, 1796, those militiamen were actually raised and distributed in the forts and establishments of said company, under a full expectation of receiving the promised compensation of ten thousand dollars therefor yearly; but the said sum, although demanded, was never paid by His Majesty, or his representatives, to the said company; in consequence of which, the company was unable to support the aforesaid heavy annual expenditure, and was compelled to abandon their privilege before the term of ten years had expired. Mr. Jacque Clamorgan was, on the dissolution of the Missouri Fur Company, fully authorized to solicit and obtain any remuneration which might be granted him by His Majesty, for the aforesaid services and expenditures, and as such, it was always conceived he had obtained the aforesaid grant, which was supposed by the parties themselves, and others, to contain four hundred and forty-seven thousand arpents, or thereabouts, according to the exhibited conjectural plot.

"JAMES MACKAY."

"ST. LOUIS, March 7, 1817."

Your petitioners having now stated to your honorable body the facts and the proofs in support of Clamorgan's grant, they would most respectfully remark, that it has been the misfortune of Louisiana to be transferred by secret treaties.

The treaty made at Fontainebleau, the 3d of November, 1762, by which the province was transferred from France to Spain, has never been published. The only official document promulgated upon that subject, is the letter of Louis XV. to Monsieur D'Abadie, his Director General in Louisiana, instructing him to deliver the province to the commissioners of His Catholic Majesty the King of Spain. That letter contains a declaration in favor of the rights of the inhabitants. It directs that—

"They be maintained in their possessions; that they be confirmed in their estates according to the grants which have been made by the Governor and directors of the colony; and that all the grants be holden and taken as confirmed by His Catholic Majesty, even though not as yet confirmed by himself."

This declaration was supposed to be bottomed upon an article in the secret treaty. It was considered as a part of the treaty, and that it was thus made known for their benefit. The Spanish authorities respected it. No inquiries were instituted to test the validity of the French concessions, and none were lost for want of formalities.

The treaty of St. Ildefonso, made the 1st of October, 1800, retroceding the province of Louisiana from Spain to the French republic, (or rather promising to retrocede it,) has not been published. The only official act promulgated by the King of Spain, and evidencing the retrocession of the province, is the proclamation of the 18th of May, 1803, made in the name of His Catholic Majesty, by the Governor General, Salcedo, and the Marquis de Casa Calvo, commissioners for delivering the province to the French General of Division, Victor, or such other officer as might be appointed by the First Consul of France, to receive it. The fourth article of that proclamation concerns the rights of the inhabitants of Louisiana. It declares—

“That they shall be maintained and protected in the peaceful possession of their property; that all the concessions or grants, of every description, made by the Governors of these provinces, shall be confirmed to the inhabitants, although they have not been confirmed by His Majesty.”

This declaration may fairly be presumed to be bottomed upon an article of the secret treaty of St. Ildefonso; and, until the treaty shall be published, it will doubtless be received as prima facie evidence of its contents in all our courts. It was intended to secure the property of the inhabitants, and was thus published for their benefit. It was done in the spirit, and almost in the words, of the letter of Louis XV. to Monsieur D'Abadie. Both the letter and the proclamation were evidently intended to effect the same object, that of communicating to the inhabitants so much of the secret treaties as was necessary to be known for the security of their property.

The treaty of Paris of the 30th of April, 1803, has been published. It contains the last transfer of the province of Louisiana, the sale of it from the French republic to the United States. The third article of that treaty stipulates for the rights of the inhabitants. It proceeds, among other things—

“That they shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their property.”

Your petitioners respectfully insist, that by the — and the proclamation in the name of the King of Spain, by the Governor Salcedo and the Marquis de Casa Calvo, the right of property is secured to the inhabitants of Louisiana.

They further insist, that a right of property had vested in Clamorgan to the tract of land conceded to him by the Lieutenant Governor, and confirmed by the Governor General.

The concession was made on the 3d March, 1797, that is to say, it was made three years before Louisiana was ceded to France, and six years before it was ceded to the United States.

It was confirmed to him, by the Governor General, the Baron de Carondelet, on the 5th day of April, 1797, that is, within little more than a month after the date of the concession.

The power of confirmation was vested in the Governor General at that time. It was not until the 17th July, 1799, more than two years after the act of confirmation, that the right to confirm was transferred from the Governor General to the tribunal of finance.

Documents in the General Land Office at Washington city will verify the statement made of these important facts.

In making to Clamorgan a grant of land for the important services, which he had rendered to his country, the Lieutenant Governor and the Governor General acted upon the established principles of their Government.

“The Spanish Government never gave any salaries to its provincial officers, nor any gratuities, in money, to those who, amid dangers and at a great expense, explored unknown regions, and made useful discoveries; but, when compensations were solicited, it was usual to bestow tracts of land instead of money.” See Sketches of Louisiana, page 257, by Major Stoddart, first civil commandant of Upper Louisiana, under the authority of the United States.

Your petitioners will briefly answer the objections which might be suggested against the claim of Clamorgan, and which they believe are reducible to three heads, to wit:

1. The want of a survey.
2. The inadequacy of the consideration.
3. The excessiveness of the grant.

Answer to the first objection:

By the terms of the concession, no time was fixed within which the survey should be made; and by no law of Spain was the survey of conceded land required to be made within any given time. It was left to the convenience of the grantee, who postponed it without apprehension of danger, either from inability to defray the enormous expense of making a survey, or through inadvertence.

When the American Government went into operation, more than half the conceded lands in Upper Louisiana remained unsurveyed.

One object to be effected in making a survey was to identify the land granted; but, in the case of the grant to Clamorgan, the natural boundaries called for sufficiently identified it.

A second object was to lay it before the Governor General, as the foundation for receiving a complete title, but, in the case of large grants, the individuals interested always solicited the confirmation before they hazarded the great expense of a survey. And this was the course followed by Clamorgan. He applied directly to the Governor General, and obtained a confirmation before a survey was made.

It is admitted that lands, in some instances, reverted to the Crown for non-fulfilment of the conditions on which they were granted; but it is believed that there is no instance in which a grant has been forfeited for want of a survey.

The grant to Clamorgan has never been annulled for the non-fulfilment of any conditions, and could not be annulled except by a formal and judicial decree. The annexation to the domain of forfeited estates was regulated by an ordinance of Louis XV. in 1743, and was conducted with the same formality and solemnity which were requisite in making a concession. The cause of forfeiture was judicially examined before a competent tribunal, and the decree entered upon the judicial record for the information of all concerned. This ordinance, issued by Louis XV, continued in force after the province was ceded to Spain. See Sketches of Louisiana, by Major Stoddart, page 247. The survey added nothing to the validity of the claim, which depended upon the concession and the confirmation. The Government took no interest in it, except upon the application of an individual, who wished a concession near the same place; in such cases, the Lieutenant Governor would order the survey to be accelerated, that the vacant adjoining lands might be known with precision. But this rarely happened; because the quantity of vacant land was immense, and the number of applicants very few. Under the Spanish Government, and under the laws of the United States, the unsurveyed claims were considered as the property of the claimant, and subjected to the operation of the laws. They descended by inheritance, were transferred by private contract, and, when requisite, seized by judicial authority, and sold for the payment of debts. See printed documents in the Department of State relative to Louisiana, pages 29 and 30, of the appendix. The laws of Congress have required such claims to be recorded, and the claim of Clamorgan has been accordingly recorded, as hereinbefore set forth. The territorial laws have subjected them to taxation, and the claim of Clamorgan has paid its dues to the Territorial Governments. In the year 1816 it paid the sum of $1,120 50. See the receipt of Uriah I. Devoce, Esq. sheriff and collector of St. Charles county.

Answer to the second objection:

2. That the consideration was inadequate.

Protesting against the right of the American Government to inquire into the consideration, upon which was founded the Spanish grants in Louisiana, the petitioners, nevertheless, will freely lay open the foundations of their claim, and submit its merit to the scrutiny of any examination which your honorable body shall be pleased to institute. The consideration was too honorable to the memory of Clamorgan to need concealment.

To explore the sources of the Missouri, and to arrive at the South sea by crossing the Shining mountains, was a project honorable to those who formed it, and interesting to the human race. It was a scheme of discovery calculated to enlarge the boundaries of human knowledge; to open new sources of national wealth; to carry the light of civilization among unlettered barbarians; and, in time, to revive, upon the western coast of America, the fame of the ancient cities which rose successively upon the different channels of eastern commerce, and fell with its loss. It was an enterprise full of peril, of difficulty, and of glory. It was conceived under the enlightened administration of the Governor General of Louisiana, the Baron de Carondelet, and was executed under the auspicious patronage of our own immortal Jefferson. The names of Lewis and Clarke live in the recollection of this grand event. Their precursor in the path of peril, but not of renown, was Don James Clamorgan. He was the chosen instrument of the Baron de Carondelet. He embarked his fortune to make discoveries, to found a commercial company to conciliate barbarians, to make head against British influence, and to maintain for his King the advantages he had acquired by the establishment of forts and garrisons. He was promised the payment of ten thousand dollars from the Royal Treasury; it was not paid. The Intendant, Morales, was at the head of the treasury, and was independent of the Governor General. He deferred the payment of the money under frivolous pretexts, and the private fortune of Clamorgan was ruined in the support of an enterprise which could no longer be maintained. It was to reward these services, and to pay this debt, that the grant was made to Clamorgan. The officers of the Spanish Government, who had seen his zeal, and knew his losses, conceded to him four hundred and forty-eight thousand arpents of land; a compensation great in name, but small in reality, since it could be sold for nothing, or next to nothing, under the Spanish Government. Who was there to buy from Clamorgan, when the Spanish Government presented to all who asked?

Answer to the third objection:

3. That the quantity granted was excessive.

Protesting, also, that it does not belong to the American Government to condemn the grants of Spain for excess of quantity, your petitioners, nevertheless, respectfully urge to your honorable body that the grant to Clamorgan was much smaller than many grants made by the Spanish authorities to other individuals, upon considerations inferior, or not existing at all. The concessions to the Winters were for a million and a half of arpents. In fact, there was no limitation upon the powers of the Governor General. Small tracts were given gratuitously to those who solicited them; and grants of great extent were bestowed upon those who had rendered important services to the Crown.

But the limits do not embrace the quantity specified; and that the quantity was still further reduced by a few small concessions, not amounting to two thousand arpents, made before the date of Clamorgan's grant, and by a few made afterwards. Some head-rights and pre-emptions have also set up pretensions under the laws of the United States. The amount of all these, and the exact extent of the grant, can be seen on the connected map of the surveys in the Missouri Territory, on file in the General Land Office.

Respectfully weighing the necessity of a decision on Clamorgan's claim, before the opening of the office for the sale of the public lands in the Missouri Territory, your petitioners pray your honorable body to take it into your consideration, and to make an equitable and final adjustment of the claim upon its merits.

To which effect they pray your honorable body to confirm, by law, to the legal representatives of the said Don James Clamorgan the quantity of four hundred and forty-eight thousand arpents of land, in pursuance of, and compliance with, his original petition, and the original concession from the late proper Spanish authorities in Louisiana.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

[TRANSLATION.]

ST. LOUIS, March 1, 1789.

Nothing was more glorious to the petitioner than the encouragement you were pleased to give to his industrious exertions for exploring the Indian nations as far as the Pacific Ocean. When he was charged with that mission by the General Government, you did him the honor to authorize a hope of your protection and support. You did more—you solicited from the General Government the auxiliary means claimed by the petitioner, for the active prosecution of an undertaking on which even His Majesty seemed to have bestowed a thought. In fact, His Majesty granted to the petitioner the exclusive privilege of trade, for the space of ten years, with the nations of the Upper Missouri, with a view not only to open a new branch in the fur trade, but also to acquire information, and procure a local knowledge of the immense tracts of country which were to be explored; which objects could not be obtained without great sacrifices amidst the nations of Indians, in order to conciliate their favorable dispositions towards us.

Through your recommendation, sir, His Excellency the Baron de Carondelet laid before His Majesty a statement of the excessive expenses which the petitioner had to sustain in that arduous enterprise, in order to facilitate a remoter communication; whereby His Majesty was induced to allow the annual payment to him of ten thousand dollars per annum, towards defraying the expenses of the discovery of the nations and territories of the Upper Missouri, and, at the same time, keeping off the foreign traders of Hudson's bay and lake Superior, who introduced their commerce into those parts, and estranged the affections of the native tribes.

His Excellency the Baron de Carondelet, as well as yourself, sir, did forthwith communicate, by official letters, the generosity of His Majesty in behalf of the petitioner, but the result proved ineffectual, owing to the difficulties interposed by the Intendant, Mr. Morales, who pretended to have, at that time, in the Royal Treasury, no funds appropriated to that use. Thus placed between two conflicting authorities, the petitioner remained the victim of his zeal and endeavors to promote the wishes of the General Government and the intentions of His Majesty.

Under these unfortunate circumstances the petitioner has recourse to your goodness, and prays that you will please to grant to him, on the west side of the river Mississippi, at the distance of a few leagues above the mouth of Missouri river, the tract of land which lies and is bounded on one side by the creek named Charette or Dardenne, and on the other side by the little river named river Au Cuivre, (Copper river,) both of which empty into the Mississippi, which is to be the eastern boundary of the tract applied for; the two streams above named, viz: Charette or Dardenne, and Cuivre, one to the south, and the other to the north, are to be the lateral boundaries.

The petitioner prays, moreover, that you be pleased to grant to him six arpents of land in front on the Mississippi, beginning at the mouth of the little river first above mentioned, named Charette, and descending the Mississippi; and sixty other arpents of land in front, likewise on the Mississippi, beginning above the mouth of the second river above named, river Au Cuivre, and running up the Mississippi; the depth of the three several tracts aforesaid to be extended and determined by two lines, which are to begin on the margin of the Mississippi, one at the southern and the other at the northern extremity, and to run parallel on each side, progressing towards the west until they have both reached the inland hills, continuing in a straight line, still westwardly, to the distance of about two hundred arpents from the foot of said hills; and the two extreme points of said side lines, thus established, are to be joined by another straight line, to be run as the fourth side of the three contiguous tracts aforesaid, so as to include, within the compass of the said extended lines, all the waters of the said rivers Charette or Dardenne and Cuivre, to the end that the petitioner may, in the future, erect saw mills and grist mills thereon, and also keep there a stock of cattle and other animals, out of which he may export salt provisions to the capital; and the petitioner will render thanks to your goodness.

ST. LOUIS OF THE ILLINOIS, March 3, 1797.

Don Zenon Trudeau, captain in the Louisiana regiment, lieutenant colonel by brevet, and lieutenant governor of the western part of the Illinois:

Having seen the foregoing statement of Don Jacque Clamorgan, and adverting to the special recommendations made to me by the Governor General, the Baron de Carondelet, to facilitate and protect the discovery and trade of the Upper Missouri, in which, at my solicitation, the said J. Clamorgan has been actively employed. Taking into consideration the laborious exertions which such undertaking have necessitated, the additional expenses which he has incurred in the pursuit of those objects, and the importance of encouraging and favoring the discoveries aforesaid, consistent with the fiscal interests of His Majesty, and the prosperity of these settlements, which will be promoted by an increase of population. From these considerations, and that of said J. Clamorgan having well deserved of Government, and rendered himself worthy of its favors, the surveyor of this jurisdiction (when the occupations of his office will permit) will survey for the applicant aforesaid the tract of land which he solicits, in the same mode and manner by him designated in the present memorial, which, together with the certificate (procès-verbal) of the survey, and the boundaries established, will form the title of concession which he is, in due time, to present to the Governor General of the province, for his approbation, and for record.

CLAIM UNDER A PURCHASE FROM GEORGIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 16, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of George Pearson, respectfully report:

That the petitioner appears to have been entitled to five thousand acres of land, purchased by him from the State of Georgia out of land reserved by the Georgia Company's purchase, for the benefit of the citizens of the said State.

That the petitioner was unable to avail himself of the provisions of the several acts of Congress while they were in force, under which he might have had relief, in consequence of having lost or mislaid his certificate. The committee, therefore, respectfully submit a bill for his relief.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, the petition of George Pearson, of the city of Augusta, State of Georgia, respectfully represents:

That he is a claimant of five thousand acres of land, in the Mississippi Territory, having paid, as a citizen of the State of Georgia, for the portion of land reserved for citizens' rights in the Georgia Company's purchase of unlocated territory of that part of the State of Georgia now composing the Mississippi Territory, as by reference to Treasury receipt, hereto annexed, will more fully appear; that your petitioner was entitled to the benefit of the act passed for the indemnification of certain claimants to land in the Mississippi Territory, passed the 31st day of March, in the year 1814; and also, to the benefit of the act to amend the aforesaid act, passed on the — day of —, in the year —, and intended to comply with the terms and conditions of the acts aforesaid, but was unable to find the certificate hereto annexed, until after the time within which persons were to make known and convey their claims to the United States had expired; that your petitioner having lately unexpectedly recovered the said certificate, is desirous of receiving the benefit of the acts aforesaid, and, in consideration of the inducements therein provided, to convey all his interest in the said land to the United States. He, therefore, prays that an act may be passed to enable him to derive the benefits intended for all persons in his situation, but of which he has been accidentally deprived.

And your petitioner will ever pray, &c.

Personally appeared before me, Benjamin H. Meigs, a justice of the peace for the county and State aforesaid, George Pearson, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that the facts stated in the preceding petition are true, and that the certificate mentioned in the said petition was mislaid among his papers, and, although diligently searched for, was not discovered by him until some time during the month of May last.

STATE OF GEORGIA, Richmond county:

Personally appeared John Forsyth, a member of Congress of the United States from the State of Georgia, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that, after the passing of the act of the 31st of March, 1814, for the indemnification of certain claimants to lands in the Mississippi Territory, George Pearson, of Augusta, in Georgia, applied to this deponent to procure indemnity for a claim to five thousand acres in the Georgia Company's reserve for citizens' rights, being instructed what was required to be done, and within what time the said Pearson proposed to deliver his certificate, and the requisite conveyances and powers of attorney, &c., to this deponent for the purpose of conveying them to Washington, and receiving the amount of indemnity provided by the act aforesaid; and the said Pearson afterwards informed deponent that he could not find his certificate, after a diligent search among his papers. Subsequent to the passage of the act, this deponent informed the said Pearson, that he would have further time to recover his lost paper, and that, if the necessary conveyances were had, he might still receive the indemnity he desired to procure. The said Pearson, a few days afterwards, told this deponent he had searched for the certificate without effect, and should continue to search for it, and when found, he would either deliver it to this deponent, or send it to him in Washington city. Since his return from Congress, at the close of the last session of the fourteenth Congress, the said Pearson informed deponent he had, at last, accidentally discovered his lost certificate, and solicited him to procure the indemnity offered to claimants by the acts of Congress, but was instructed by the deponent that the time limited by the act within which his conveyance ought to have been made had expired, and the property forfeited to the United States; that he could only procure relief by an application to Congress.

APPLICATION OF PURCHASERS, UNDER GEORGIA GRANTS, FOR INDEMNITY AFTER SURRENDERING THEIR CLAIMS TO THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 23, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTS, from the Committee of Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph Cumming, administrator of James Murren and Samuel Parker, executor of George Parker, deceased, report:

The petitioners represent the persons in whose right they claim, as having been purchasers of lands embraced in the grants which issued in conformity to the act, or pretended act, of the Legislature of Georgia, passed the 7th of January, 1795, otherwise called the Yazoo act. Their purchases amounted together to five hundred and ninety-four thousand acres. The purchasers have surrendered their claims to the State of Georgia, and withdrawn the moneys from the State Treasury, which they had paid into it on account of the purchase. The petitioners pray they may have the benefit of the act of Congress, passed the 31st March, 1814, providing indemnity for outstanding claims arising under the aforesaid act of Georgia, upon their paying the moneys redrawn as aforesaid, with interest thereon, into the United States' Treasury. The only documents laid before the committee are the petitions. The petitioners refer to the evidence sent to the General Government, by the State of Georgia, for the ascertainment of their claims. The committee cannot discover the names of the aforesaid purchasers, in the documents printed in the first volume of the last edition of the laws, and they have not felt themselves called upon to search the records of the proper department. The merits of the claims do not appear to rest on documentary evidence. The petitioners admit the persons, to whose estates they act as executors and administrators, released their claims; this with them was matter of option, and it is not alleged any of their property has been withheld. They became purchasers on speculation, and they seem to have withdrawn their money, not more out of respect for the law of the State than from a belief that it was their interest to do so. It seems from the petitions the administrator may be an assignee of the purchaser under whom he claims. If so, the assignment of a released claim is at least a novelty.

The petitioners appear to have mistaken the object of the act of Congress providing indemnity. There existed second purchasers who had paid a much higher consideration than the first adventurers, who had purchased without a knowledge of the corruption of the Georgia Legislature, and who had prosecuted their claims for a long series of years at a great expense before Congress. These, the committee apprehend, were the description of persons whose claims produced the act of indemnity. There were, very possibly, persons benefited by this act of doubtful merit. But it was not the relief of such, it is believed, formed the main object. The exclusion, by the act aforesaid, of those who had released their grants, and withdrawn their money, was not incidental; it was express, and was the result of deliberate investigation. It would be unwise, the committee believe, to enlarge the operation of that act, as it is reasonable to suppose persons, other than those who were entitled to relief either in equity or policy, have been already benefited. The committee are of opinion, that more than has been done cannot be claimed, even of the benevolence of Congress, and, therefore, submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

QUANTITY OF LAND IN EACH LAND DISTRICT, THE QUANTITY SOLD, THE QUANTITY REMAINING UNSOLD, AND THE EMOLUMENTS OF THE OFFICERS ENGAGED IN SURVEYING AND SELLING THE PUBLIC LANDS, FOR FOUR YEARS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 2, 1818.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 29, 1818.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 23d instant, I have the honor to submit two statements from the General Land Office; the first showing the quantity of land in each land district in which the public lands have been exposed to sale, the quantity which has been sold, and the quantity remaining for sale; the second showing the emoluments of the Receivers and Registers of the land offices for four years preceding the 1st day of October, 1817, and the salaries of all the officers engaged in the surveying and selling of the public lands.

From the first statement, it appears that the land districts of Marietta, Zanesville, and Steubenville, have no considerable quantity of land remaining unsold, and that, from their local situation, no addition can be made to them. The emoluments of the Receivers and Registers in those districts may, therefore, be considered as having arrived at their maximum. The other districts northwest of the Ohio have large quantities of lands remaining unsold, or are so situated as to render it probable that other public lands will be added to them. The district of Madison county is estimated only according to the surveys which have been made. The district of Alabama, the office of which has been temporarily established at Milledgeville, is very extensive, containing many millions of acres, of which only six hundred and ninety-one thousand two hundred acres have been surveyed. Should these two districts remain with their present extent, the emoluments of the Receivers and Registers will be very great. Under all the circumstances, it appears to be proper to annex three or more ranges on the east of the Tombigbee river, to the district east of Pearl river, the land offices of which are kept at St. Stephen's.

From statement No. 2, it appears that the Receivers at Cincinnati and at Vincennes have received more than five thousand dollars a year in emoluments and salaries. It is probable that the receipts of those officers will be greater, for a number of successive years, than they have been during the period embraced by the statement. The propriety of a general provision, limiting their emoluments to a sum which, considering the duties they have to perform, and the circumstances under which they are performed, compared with those received by other officers, shall be deemed reasonable and just.

The establishment of banks in every part of the country, in which the money may be deposited as soon as received, has greatly diminished the risk of the Receivers, upon which the discrimination between their emoluments and those of the Registers was made. Judging from experience, the Receivers do not seem to regard the risk of holding public money, as several of them have been in the habit of retaining it against the repeated and positive injunctions of this Department. As the risk of the Receiver is inconsiderable, and as the labor of the Register is believed to be greater than that of the Receiver, the propriety of giving them the same salary and emoluments is respectfully suggested.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient and very humble servant,

WH. H. CRAWFORD.

Statement of the salaries, and estimate of the emoluments of the land officers of the United States.

PRESENT SALARIES.

Five hundred dollars per annum to each Register and Receiver.

Two thousand dollars per annum to the Surveyor General.

Two thousand dollars per annum to the Surveyor General south of Tennessee.

One thousand dollars per annum to the Surveyor General of Illinois and Missouri.

Fifteen hundred dollars per annum to the Surveyor General in the northern part of the Mississippi Territory.

Five hundred dollars per annum to the principal deputy surveyor south of Tennessee, with certain fees on private surveys. The surveyor of Illinois and Missouri has not been allowed fees, the law being imperfect in its designation of them.

WASHINGTON CITY, February 2, 1816.

This third part, containing grants of claims founded on settlement, rejections of claims of the same class, as well as rejections of claims founded on concessions, orders, or warrants of survey, and forming a part of the general report, respectfully submitted.

FREDERICK BATES.

The Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS,
Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington City.

Report of the recorder of land titles for the Territory of Missouri, on three hundred and twelve claims of William Russell, contained in one general notice, in the following words, to wit:

To FREDERICK BATES, Esq., Recorder of land titles in and for the Territory of Missouri:

SIR:

Please to take notice that, under right derived from the Spanish and French Governments, and the provisions of the several acts of Congress, the undersigned, William Russell, of the town of St. Louis, claims title to the following tracts and parcels of lands, the particulars of which will severally, fully, and at large appear, by and from the evidence and testimony which will be adduced in support of the same severally. My chain of titles and conveyances from the several original claimants, I claim the privilege of filing, without being bound to record them at all at the time I adduce the other evidence and testimony in support of the claims severally; and, in case it should be decided that such privilege would be illegal, in that case I claim the said lands to be confirmed or granted to the legal representatives of the several persons who appear, from the evidence and testimony, to be entitled thereto; which claims are described as follows, to wit:

No. 1. A tract of eight hundred arpents of land in the county of New Madrid, on the Mississippi river, opposite the Chickasaw Bluffs, &c. &c.

The claimant then proceeds with his descriptions, in progressive numbers, to No. 312, and then concludes his notice in the following words, to wit:

"The particular locality of each of the foregoing tracts of lands, as well as their relevant connexion with other lands claimed, and the names of the several persons who have inhabited, cultivated, or been in possession or occupancy of each or either of the said tracts, will appear from the evidence which will be adduced in support of the said claims severally. The names of the persons, for whose use the inhabitation, cultivation, possession, and occupancy were done, will also appear from the parole evidence, which will be adduced in support of the said claims, to whom, or their legal representatives, the lands are claimed to be granted or confirmed. In case it should be decided that the undersigned claimant cannot legally, at the time of adducing the parole evidence, file his chain of titles, deeds, and original title papers for his benefit—in that case, the claims to be confirmed or granted to the persons or legal representatives of the persons, who appear from the parole evidence to be lawfully entitled thereto, the undersigned claimant having lawful right to make out his chain of title in a court of law, in all cases where he fails to effect it otherwise. St. Louis, November 30, 1812.

WM. RUSSELL."

NOTE.—The claims Nos. 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, and 76, abandoned by the claimant.

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF LAND TITLES,

MISSOURI TERRITORY, ST. LOUIS, November 1, 1815.

On the delivery of the notice of the foregoing claims I thought it irregular, and perhaps illegal; but, as that was not the time for the exercise of judicial discretion, it was admitted to record. Proofs were afterwards introduced showing by whom some few of the tracts had been inhabited and cultivated. I have thought it my duty to exhibit these claims in detail, prefaced by an exact copy of the notice, that the whole subject may be fairly before you.

FREDERICK BATES.

The Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS, Commissioner of General Land Office.

15th CONGRESS.]

No. 274.

[1st SESSION.]

CLAIM OF THE COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED BY GEORGIA TO EXAMINE CERTAIN LANDS ON THE TENNESSEE RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 9, 1818.

The committee, to whom were referred the petitions of Andrew Jackson, in behalf of himself, in right of his wife, and as agent for the heirs and representatives of Colonel John Donelson, deceased, of Thomas Carr, and of George W. Sevier, for himself, and the other heirs of John Sevier, deceased, reported:

That it appears that the Legislature of Georgia, on the 20th of February, in the year 1784, passed a resolution to appoint commissioners to examine the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the lands lying in what was called the Bend of Tennessee. That, on the following day, the same Legislature proceeded to appoint seven commissioners for the object contemplated by the previous resolutions, to wit: Lachlin McIntosh, Jun., William Downes, Stephen Heard, John Morell, John Donelson, Joseph Martin, and John Sevier, Esquires. It appears to the committee that John Morell failed or refused to act, and that Thomas Napier was appointed by the Executive of said State to fill the vacancy; and that, on the 1st of March, 1786, Thomas Carr was elected to fill the vacancy occasioned by the failure to act, or resignation of said Thomas Napier. It does not appear that Lachlin McIntosh, Jun. ever acted himself, or that any person was appointed in his place. It appears that, on the 22d of December, 1785, a majority of the commissioners made a report of their proceedings to the Legislature, by which, among other things, it appeared that they had made divers appointments, and sold considerable lands, and had granted indulgence for the payments, having taken bonds to a large amount, &c. It further appears that said commissioners found it necessary, in the execution of the duties assigned them, to expend large sums of money, as well to quiet the Indians resident in that neighborhood, as to bear their own necessary expenses while thus employed in a savage wilderness, far removed from all civilized society. The Legislature of Georgia, upon this return being so made, by a resolution of that body, dated the 14th day of August, 1786, declared that each of the commissioners appointed on the Tennessee business, who have actually attended their duty, shall be entitled to five thousand acres of land in the district (by which is understood the district of Tennessee) as a gratuity and full compensation for their trouble therein, and shall and may have a warrant of survey for the same to them respectively, &c. It is alleged by Carr and Heard, two of said commissioners, that warrants of survey were issued for them, and the land actually located, but there is no sufficient evidence of that fact to authorize this committee to make such a report. For all this committee can discover, the business rested in the foregoing state until the year 1795, at which time the celebrated act of the Legislature of Georgia, commonly called the Yazoo act, was passed. That in, and by the 15th section of that act, there was expressly reserved, out of the sale made to the Tennessee company, fifty thousand acres, to be gratuitously divided, share and share alike, between the commissioners appointed to examine the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the Great Bend of Tennessee, to be held by them as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, &c. It appears to the committee that Georgia, in the cession of her western lands to the United States, reserved five millions of acres (for the satisfaction of claims against her) from the United States; and it does appear that the claims of those commissioners constitute as fair a class of cases as could have existed, being wholly unconnected with all those so justly charged as being fraudulent. Upon a review of all the facts, connected with the claims of six of these commissioners, to wit: Thomas Carr, the representatives of John Donelson, the representatives of John Sevier, the representatives of William Downes, the representatives of Joseph Martin and Stephen Heard, it is shown that they proceeded to act, and did perform many and dangerous services, and expended much money; that Colonel Donelson was actually killed while thus employed, and hence that they should be paid seems not only reasonable but just. While the committee feel convinced that these persons ought to be paid, they, at the same time, find much difficulty in proposing the means by which that object should be accomplished. If, as has been alleged by some of the commissioners, the lands originally given to them by the State of Georgia, had been actually located, and fixed to some particular place, it would seem that the good faith this Government has always heretofore observed would bind it to give them patents for it; but that does not appear to be the case; and as the Government has ordered those very lands for sale on the first Monday of the present month, it will not be advisable to give them lands in kind. Seeking, however, the best means of doing justice to all parties concerned, this committee would beg leave to suggest that, in their opinions, it would be well to direct that scrip be issued to the parties for the amount of what is due to them as commissioners, at the rate of two dollars per acre, that being the minimum price in cash for public lands; and this scrip, so to be issued, be made receivable for any lands to be sold in the Alabama Territory. The committee, therefore, report a bill for the benefit of Thomas Carr and others.

The remonstrance of Andrew Jackson, in behalf of himself, in right of his wife, and as agent for the heirs and representatives of Col. John Donelson, deceased, to the honorable the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, humbly sheweth:

That the Legislature of the State of Georgia, on the 20th day of February, 1784, by resolve laid out a county to include all the lands lying north of the Tennessee river, and included within the territorial limits of said State. That, on the 21st day of February, 1784, the said Legislature, for the State of Georgia, proceeded to appoint commissioners for the purpose of examining the quality and quantity of the lands on Tennessee river, pursuant to the resolve of the 20th instant aforesaid, when the following named persons were appointed, viz: Lachlin McIntosh, Jun., William Downes, Stephen Heard, John Morell, John Donelson, Joseph Martin, and John Sevier, Esqrs. That, on the 22d day of February, 1785, the Legislature of Georgia did appoint eight justices of the peace for the said district of Tennessee. That, on the 22d day of December, 1785, a majority of the aforesaid commissioners reported their proceedings to the Legislature of Georgia, showing that they had performed, in part, the duty assigned to them; all which will fully appear, reference being had to the journals of the Legislature of Georgia. A copy of all that can be found is hereto annexed, marked A, and to which your remonstrant begs leave to refer you. Your remonstrant further begs leave to show to your honorable body, that the said John Donelson did enter on the duties (as commissioner) assigned him in the month of March, 1785, and, at the hazard of his life, at great expense and fatigue, penetrated a pathless wilderness, to the mouth of Elk river, on the north bank of the Tennessee river, when, not meeting with any of the other commissioners, he left five men with a note for them, and returned to Nashville; these men returning, and reporting that the commissioners had not arrived, he proceeded to Holston to meet them. On arriving he met a majority of them, and proceeded to the bounds defined, made a board, and opened a land office, when the said John Donelson was appointed surveyor, and as such, appointed and agreed with Isaac Taylor, now deceased, to proceed and ascertain the northern boundary of Georgia where it crossed the Tennessee below, and extend it east to the crossing of the Tennessee above. These necessary arrangements being made, the Board of Commissioners adjourned to meet at the mouth of Elk river on the 1st day of April, 1786. Your remonstrant states, that Isaac Taylor, under the engagement with Colonel Donelson as surveyor and commissioner, did proceed and ascertain the boundary agreeable to his engagement. Your remonstrant begs leave further to state, that Colonel John Donelson, on his return to Nashville on the duty assigned him as commissioner and surveyor aforesaid, was killed by the Indians, and lost all his valuable papers, amongst which, were attested copies of all the acts and resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, a copy of their report to the said Legislature, and the journals of their proceedings. These being lost as aforesaid, your remonstrant has been compelled to resort to oral testimony to show that Colonel Donelson, in his lifetime, did faithfully perform the duty assigned him, and lost his life in the performance thereof, and does therefore refer you to the affidavits of John Peyton, Sen. David Henry, and James M. Lewis, marked B, C, and D, hereto annexed and referred to; from all which it will appear he was justly entitled to his part of the compensation awarded the commissioners by the Legislature of the State of Georgia, as contained in their act passed the 7th day of February, 1795, to the fifteenth section thereof, and hereto annexed, marked E, I beg leave to refer you. Your remonstrant further states, that he has been informed and believes, that there were but five of the seven commissioners who acted under their appointment.

Those who formed the first board, were Stephen Heard, John Donelson, William Downes, and John Sevier; General Joseph Martin being absent performing some duty assigned him by the Government; therefore, your remonstrant claims for the heirs and representatives of Colonel John Donelson, deceased, one-fifth part of fifty thousand acres of land, to be laid out on the north side of the Tennessee river, in what is called the Big Bend thereof. Your remonstrant begs leave to state that, from a memorandum taken by the said John Donelson in his lifetime, and found amongst his papers, he intended his grant to be laid on the north side of the Tennessee river, beginning opposite the head of an island at the commencement of the Big Shoals, running north three miles, thence east, up the river for complement.

Your remonstrant cannot believe that your honorable body will hesitate, the premises considered, (taking into view that the commissioners appointed to investigate and settle the Yazoo claims under the act of cession, and the act of the Legislature of Georgia of the 7th of February, 1795, have investigated the claim of your remonstrant, and declared it just, and that it ought to be satisfied,) to grant to the heirs and representatives of the said John Donelson, deceased, the ten thousand acres of land, and locate it above, or at some other point in the said Big Bend of Tennessee, and to carry into effect, with good faith, that contract which the State of Georgia was willing, and had made with the commissioners, and that justice to the deceased required to be carried into effect, and which, by the act of cession from the State of Georgia, the Congress of the United States are pledged, and, in good faith, bound to fulfil. Your remonstrant, lastly, begs leave to state that the compensation at the time given, was a mere pittance, compared with the services to be performed, in which was encountered danger, expense, labor, risk, and lastly the death of that commissioner for whose heirs and representatives your remonstrant claims his. The growing value of the land may relieve some of the heirs from want, who, had it not have been for the untimely death of the father, would have been in affluence. The premises duly considered, your remonstrant hopes that your honorable body will direct, by law, a grant to be issued for ten thousand acres on the north side of the Tennessee river, in the Big Bend thereof, to the heirs and representatives of the aforesaid John Donelson, deceased, and that, too, before the sales of the land in this section of country are made, otherwise will put it out of the power of your honorable body to do that justice for which your remonstrant prays.

ANDREW JACKSON,

For himself, and as agent for the heirs and representatives of John Donelson, deceased.

A.

LEGISLATURE OF GEORGIA, FRIDAY, February 20, 1784.

The House proceeded to take up the report of the committee to whom was referred the petition of Mr. Blount, and other citizens of North Carolina, which, after some amendments, was agreed to, and is as follows:

The committee, to whom was referred the petition of Mr. Blount, in behalf of himself and other citizens of North Carolina, respecting the expediency of laying out a new county, to include all that tract of land lying on the Tennessee river, which shall be included by a line drawn from the south bank of the said river, where the north-west boundary of this State crosses, and running west till it crosses the said river Tennessee again, to the south bank thereof, then up the said south bank of said river to the place of beginning. After having received all the information they could obtain on that subject, are of opinion it will be necessary, in order to prevent future contests, to take measures, as it may be done with propriety, to settle the said tract of country, and do recommend, for that purpose, that seven commissioners be appointed, and vested with the powers necessary to ascertain the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the aforesaid lands, and report the same, with their proceedings, to the Legislature for their consideration, and to make them such compensation as may be deemed adequate and satisfactory: Provided, notwithstanding, that the said board shall have power, and they are hereby authorized, if they, or a majority of them, may think it necessary, in such manner as to them seems most expedient, to proceed to grant warrants of survey, which shall, when executed, be transmitted, with the plats, to the Surveyor General's office, in order that the same may pass to a grant as the law directs: Provided, that no one person shall be eligible to hold or obtain a grant for more than one thousand acres of land, and that he or they, so obtaining a warrant, shall, at the same time, give bond and security to pay into the Treasury of this State at and after the rate of one-eighth of a dollar per acre, which sum shall be paid before he, she, or they, shall obtain a grant.

SATURDAY, February 21, 1784.

The House proceeded to the appointment of commissioners for examining the quality and quantity of the lands on the Tennessee river, agreeably to a resolve of the 20th instant, when the following persons were appointed, viz: Lachlin McIntosh, Jun., William Downes, Stephen Heard, John Morell, John Donelson, Joseph Martin, and John Sevier, Esquires.

CLERK'S OFFICE OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

LEGISLATURE OF GEORGIA, December 1, 1815.

I do hereby certify, that the foregoing resolution of the Legislature of Georgia, and the appointment of commissioners for examining the quality and quantity of the lands in the Big Bend of the Tennessee river, are truly copied from the Journal of said House of Representatives.

Given under my hand the date before mentioned.

AUGUSTIN S. CLAYTON,

Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Further extract from the Journal of the House of Representatives of the Legislature of Georgia, to wit:

"TUESDAY, February 22, 1785.

"A letter from Col. Stephen Heard, dated 22d day of February instant, being laid before the House,

"Resolved, That the several persons therein named, to wit, William Blount, John Donelson, William Downes, John Sevier, Joseph Martin, Charles Robertson, Valentine Sevier, Jun., and Stephen Heard, Esquires, be appointed justices of the peace for the said district of Tennessee; and that his honor the Governor do qualify the said Stephen Heard before himself in council, and thereafter grant a commission, directed to him, to enable him to qualify the other justices above mentioned, when he shall repair to the said district of Tennessee."

[EXTRACT.]

"TUESDAY, August 1, 1786.

"That on the 22d of December, 1785, a majority of the commissioners *reported their proceedings to the House, by which, among other things, it appears that they had made divers appointments, and had granted an indulgence of three years to the purchasers, and have taken bonds to a large amount," &c. &c.

I, Augustin S. Clayton, Clerk of the House of Representatives of the Legislature of Georgia, do hereby certify that the foregoing extracts from the Journal of said House are truly copied therefrom. Given under my hand, this 2d of December, 1815.

AUGUSTIN S. CLAYTON.

B.

I, John Peyton, Sen., being now in my sixty-third year of age, depose and say, that sometime in the month of March, in the year 1785, as well as this deponent recollects, he went, in company with Col. John Donelson, David Henry, and others, to the mouth of Elk river, then called the Big Bend of Tennessee river, for the purpose of meeting some other commissioners: I understood one or more from the State of Georgia, whose business was to ascertain the north boundary line of the State of Georgia, and to explore the Big Bend of Tennessee, and to fix and truly ascertain some land claims they held in said bend; but when we arrived at the mouth of Elk river the other commissioners had not come. We waited there some time, expecting the other commissioners, but they not coming, and the mouth of Elk river being a very great resort of Indians at that time, the colonel did not think it safe to stay there with so small a company, as he had concluded it would be safer to leave a few men there, and return to Nashville; as a few men might secrete themselves without horses, when his company could not. He wrote a few lines to the other commissioners, and left with me and four other men, who waited there near a week, and the other commissioners not coming, we returned to Nashville, and informed Col. John Donelson that the other commissioners did not meet. This deponent understood, and believes that Col. John Donelson went from Nashville to the Holston country for the purpose of meeting the other commissioners, and this deponent understood, and believes Col. John Donelson, as he was returning home, in the year 1786, was killed by the Indians; and this deponent never saw Col. John Donelson more, from the time he went to Holston to meet the other commissioners. And further this deponent saith not.

JOHN PEYTON, SEN.

STATE OF TENNESSEE, Davidson County:

This day appeared before me, Wilkins Tannehill, a justice of the peace for said county, John Peyton, Sen., and made oath that the facts as set forth in the foregoing deposition are just and true, to the best of his knowledge and belief. Given under my hand and seal, this 17th day of October, 1817.

W. TANNEHILL, JUN., Justice of the Peace.

C.

I, David Henry, being now sixty-four years of age, depose and say, that, in the spring of the year 1785, I was applied to by Col. John Donelson to go with him into the Big Bend of Tennessee to the mouth of Elk river. This deponent agreed to go with him, and started sometime in the month of March from Nashville with Col. John Donelson, and made our way through the wilderness into the Big Bend of Tennessee to the mouth of Elk river; and this deponent understood from Col. John Donelson that he was to meet the commissioners from Georgia at the mouth of Elk river. When this deponent, and Col. John Donelson, and those that were with him, got to the mouth of Elk river, they found no one there; and after waiting some time there, and no one coming, thought it was not safe to stay longer; and this deponent, and Col. John Donelson, and those that were with him, started from the mouth of Elk river, and made their way back to Nashville: and this deponent understood, and believes that Col. John Donelson went from Nashville to the Holston country for the purpose of meeting the other commissioners; and this deponent understood, and believes, as Col. John Donelson was returning home, in the year 1786, he was killed by the Indians, and this deponent has never seen him since. And further this deponent saith not.

DAVID HENRY.

STATE OF TENNESSEE, Robertson county, September 18, 1817:

This day personally appeared David Henry before me, James Appleton, an acting justice for said county, and made oath of the above deposition as being a positive truth. Sworn to before me, and subscribed, the above-mentioned date.

STATE OF TENNESSEE:

Personally appeared J. M. Lewis, of Maury county, before me, William Dooly, one of the acting justices of said county, and made oath, in due form of law, that he fell in with the commissioners appointed by the State of Georgia, or part of them, in Jonesborough, in the year 1785, on their way down the Tennessee river, to open the land office for what was called the Big Bend of Tennessee. Some days afterwards he met with Col. John Donelson (who was one of the said commissioners and surveyors of said lands) at Col. Hutching's, in Hawkins county; and that this deponent went with said Donelson, and a part of the other commissioners, down as low as Chickimoga town, where they held talks with the Indians, and opened the land office for said lands in the Big Bend of Tennessee river, when he (the deponent) got a deputation from said Donelson, as surveyor for said lands; and that the commissioners then (between the 20th and 25th of December, 1785) adjourned to meet at the mouth of Elk river on the 1st day of April, 1786. That, on the said appointed day, this deponent, with two other men, viz: Turner Williams and Argalous Geter, went over the mouth of Elk river on Tennessee river, and staid there a number of days, and the commissioners not meeting, he returned some time in said month to Nashville, and shortly afterwards heard that Col. John Donelson had been killed by the Indians, and, upon the deponent going to Kentucky, in company with others, to know the certainty of his death, found it a fact.

Question. Do you know whether Major Isaac Taylor was employed by Colonel John Donelson, or the commissioners, to find the line between the States of Georgia and North Carolina, at the lower crossing of the Tennessee river, and extend said line east to where it strikes the Tennessee again?

Answer. I went with Taylor the whole of the route from Jonesborough until we reached Nashville, on the 6th day of January, 1786. That a few days afterwards he went to take the latitude, and believes he took the same, and run the line to Latitude Hill, on Elk river, as said Taylor told this deponent, they two being engaged together in business. This deponent is also under the impression that the said Isaac Taylor run the aforementioned line under the orders of Colonel John Donelson. Further this deponent saith not.

The following is a copy of the 15th section of an act of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, passed the 7th of January, 1795, entitled "An act supplementary to an act entitled 'An act for appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State for the payment of the late State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned, declaring the right of this State to the unappropriated territory thereof, for the protection and support of the frontiers of this State, and for other purposes.'"

"SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That the said Tennessee Company shall reserve a further quantity of fifty thousand acres, to be gratuitously divided, share and share alike, between the commissioners appointed by this State for the purpose of examining the quantity, quality, and circumstances, of the Great Bend of Tennessee river, which shall be held by them as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and be represented in like manner as the lands reserved by the other companies for the use of the citizens, as a compensation to the said commissioners for their services rendered the State in that capacity."

F.

GEORGIA.

To the Chairman of the Board of Commissioners for the district of Tennessee:

You are hereby authorized and required to admeasure and lay, or cause to be admeasured and laid out, unto Stephen Heard, five thousand acres of land in the district of Tennessee, agreeably to a resolution of the Legislature, as gratuity and compensation for his services done as commissioner, taking special care that the same has not heretofore been laid out to any other person or persons; and you are hereby also directed and required to record a plat of the same in your office, and transmit copies thereof, together with this warrant, to the Secretary General's office.

Given under my hand, as entry taken for the district of Tennessee, this 22d of September, 1786.

WILLIAM DOWNES, E. T.

The five thousand above alluded to is surveyed on the Tennessee river, opposite the Chickasaw shoals, on the Tennessee river.

Also, ten thousand acres on the Tennessee river, a part of the fifty thousand acres reserved to the commissioners as a full compensation for their services authorized by the law of 1795.

The above, not repealed in the rescinding law of the State of Georgia, is the opinion of the above Stephen Heard, but is repealed in the opinion of A. H. The commissioners were Stephen Heard, John Donelson, William Downes, and General John Sevier. The resolutions and acts of the State of Georgia are recorded in the State, in the Federal Government of the United States, and in Knoxville, under the superintendence of General Sevier, with all proceedings under them.

Received of Joseph Martin, by the hand of Thomas King, my own note for seventy dollars and three-fourths of a dollar, each dollar equal to twelve shillings paper money; my note bore date February 8, 1786. For this sum I engage to account with John G. and Thomas Blount for the said Martin, in part pay to them for the said Martin's part of the Tennessee goods.

WM. BLOUNT.

The Commonwealth of Virginia to Landon Carter and John Sevier, Esqs., gentlemen, greeting:

Know ye, that we, trusting to your faithful and provident circumspection in examining William Blount, Esq., as a witness, as well on behalf of Joseph Martin, defendant, as Mordecai Hord, Esq., plaintiff, command you, or any, or two or more of you, that, at such days and places as you shall appoint, you assemble yourselves and the witness aforesaid before you, or any two or more of you, you call and cause to come, and diligently examine him on the Holy Evangelists of the Almighty God; and his examination into the county court of Henry, distinctly and plainly, without delay, you shall send and certify, enclosed, returning also to us this writ. Witness, John Cox, clerk of our said county court, at the court house, the 9th day of August, 1791, and in the 16th year of the commonwealth.

JOHN COX, Clerk.

Territory of the United States of America south of the river Ohio, Washington county.

The deposition of William Blount, Governor of the said Territory, appeared before us, the subscribers, the said William Blount, and being duly sworn to declare the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, touching and concerning a suit depending in the court of the county of Henry, in the commonwealth of Virginia, in which the executors of Mordecai Hord are plaintiffs, and Joseph Martin is defendant, as far as he knew. He, the deponent, declared and said (neither plaintiff, or defendant, or attorneys for either appearing to examine or cross-examine,) that what he hath heard of the suit was from a letter written to him by the defendant, Joseph Martin, giving him, the deponent, to understand that the suit was respecting a share of some Tennessee lands by him, the defendant, sold to said Mordecai Hord in his lifetime, and that it was suggested on the part of the executors, that he, the defendant, never had obtained any right to such lands, but made pretence that he had to take in the unwary purchaser. The deponent further deposeth and saith, that all he knows respecting the claim of Joseph Martin, the defendant, to any Tennessee lands, is in substance as follows:

That, in the year 1783 or 1784, he, deponent, submitted proposals to the Legislature of the State of Georgia, on the part of the said Joseph Martin and others, he believes seven others, to purchase and settle that tract of land called the Bend of Tennessee: that the Legislature of the State of Georgia thereupon appointed certain commissioners to explore and issue warrants of survey for the said lands to the parties proposing to purchase the same, of whom Joseph Martin was one; the particulars of which will more fully appear by having recourse to the doings of the Legislature of the said State of Georgia, the deponent not being at present in the possession of a copy. The deponent further deposeth and saith, that he has been informed, and verily believes, that the said commissioners did proceed to explore the said tract of country, and to grant warrants of survey for the whole or part: that surveys were made accordingly, and every necessary step taken for obtaining the grants from the State of Georgia, and that the Governor of Georgia declined to sign the same, for reasons unknown to the deponent. The deponent further deposeth and saith, that the said Joseph Martin and associates have been at great trouble and expense in endeavoring to obtain a grant from the State of Georgia for the said Bend of Tennessee, which they had every just reason to expect from the acts and doings of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, upon the proposals before mentioned, being submitted by the deponent as aforesaid on the part of the defendant and others. And further saith not.

WM. BLOUNT.

Sworn before us, at Jonesborough, the 17th day of August, 1791.

L. CARTER, J. P.
JOHN SEVIER, J. P.STATE OF TENNESSEE, Maury county:

Personally appeared James M. Lewis, before me, William Dooly, one of the acting justices of said county, and maketh oath, in due form of law, as follows, to wit: that, in the year 1785, about the months of September or October, he, the said deponent, was on his way from the State of North Carolina to Nashville; and at Jonesborough, in the State of Tennessee, he met with the Georgia commissioners, say John Sevier, John Donelson, William Downes, and Stephen Heard, and was informed by some one of the commissioners, or more, that Colonel Joseph Martin had been there, who was also one of the commissioners, but was then gone to Georgia on some business with the Indians, respecting of holding a treaty with them; and that the other commissioners before mentioned, John Sevier, John Donelson, and William Downes, proceeded down to the Bend of the Tennessee, near Chickimoga, where they opened an office for said lands, agreeable to law passed by the Legislature of the State of Georgia; and that said office was opened in the month of December, 1785, between the 20th and 25th of said month, and issued warrants, and that William Downes was entry-taker, and I believe that John Donelson was surveyor; and the commissioners held a talk with the Cherokee Indians, and the said Indians appeared to be dissatisfied and cross, and, on account of their dissatisfaction, Col. John Sevier delivered them a quantity of goods and salt. And the deponent further deposeth, that, after giving them the goods and salt, that the Indians appeared to be more friendly, and that the said commissioners then broke up, and appointed to meet at the mouth of Elk river on the 1st day of April, 1786, and I believe went to Georgia. And the deponent further says, that he believes the reason Stephen Heard did not go down to the Bend of Tennessee with the rest, was, that he was taken sick, and was in low state of health. And further this deponent states, that, in the month of March, on the 25th day, 1786, that he, the deponent, in company with two other men, went to the mouth of Elk river, say Turner Williams and Argalos Geter, and stayed there until the 4th of April, and finding the commissioners did not meet according to appointment, that he, the deponent, and the others did then return to Nashville, and further, he hath always understood that they, the commissioners, never did attend agreeable to their appointment. And the deponent further states, that the reason the commissioners broke up was, that there was three or four hundred men, and that they intended to make a settlement in said Bend, and a number of farming tools was taken along to raise corn, &c., but was doubtful that we should not be permitted to do the same in safety, as the Indians were still cross and apparently ill-natured, but expected by spring we should be sufficiently strong in number to make a settlement. And in the month of January or February, 1786, that Major Isaac Taylor, with the said quadrant that the commissioners had, that he went on to the north bank of Tennessee, on the northern boundary of the State of Georgia, and that he there took the latitude, and run due east until he struck Richland creek of Elk river, in order to ascertain the extent of said Bend; but this deponent does not know certainly that the said Isaac Taylor was employed by said commissioners. And the deponent being asked if Joseph Martin was considered to be one of the commissioners, says he believes he was, as it was frequently understood, and said he would sanction the business done by the other commissioners. And the deponent further states, that Zachariah Cox went on with some others to ascertain where the northern boundary line of Georgia would strike the Mississippi, and believes that he was employed by the commissioners to do the same, or some one of them. And the deponent further saith not.

JAS. T. SANFORD, [L. s.]
Presiding magistrate, Maury county.

Interrogatories propounded to Zachariah Cox, on the part of the heirs of John Donelson and John Sevier, commissioners appointed under the resolution of the Legislature of Georgia, of February 21, 1784.

1. Who were the commissioners appointed under the resolution of the Legislature of Georgia, of February 21, 1784, and did any, and which of them, act in the said commission?

2. What duties did the said commissioners perform, and to what extent did they discharge the duties imposed upon them by the said commission?

3. Did the said commissioners, or did they not, open a land office in that part of the said State, or issue any land warrants in pursuance of the said resolution of February, 1784, or any subsequent resolution?

4. Where were the land warrants issued by them recorded, and did the said commissioners take bonds from the persons in whose favor the said land warrants were issued?

5. Did or did not the said acting commissioners undergo great hardships, incur great expense, and expose themselves to great danger in the discharge of the duty imposed upon them, and was any remuneration ever made to them for their services and disbursements by the said State except by a promised grant of lands?

6. Were not other persons proposed as commissioners besides those afterwards appointed under the said resolution?

7. Were the fifty thousand acres of land reserved in favor of the commissioners in the fifteenth section of the act of Georgia, of 7th January, 1795, ever located by metes and bounds? If yea, where were the same located?

1. To the first interrogatory, I answer: To the best of my present recollection the commissioners appointed in virtue of the resolution of the State of Georgia, of 21st of February, 1784, were John Donelson, John Sevier, William Downes, Stephen Heard, John Bowin, Lachlin McIntosh, and John Morell, as will more clearly appear by reference to the said resolution.

2. To your 2d, 3d, 4th, and 5th interrogatories, I answer: To the best of my present recollection a majority of the said commissioners, viz: John Donelson, John Sevier, William Downes, and Stephen Heard, in autumn, A. D. 1785, attended west of the Appalachian mountains, and formed a board, and from thence, after making the necessary preparations, proceeded down the Holston and Tennessee rivers, in company with a considerable number of men, myself amongst the latter, who they had, upon the faith of the State of Georgia, employed to accompany and guard them down the river, and assist them in their operations, to what I was informed was the Bend of Tennessee, and which they named the county of Houstoun, lying within the then chartered limits of the State of Georgia, where they proceeded to issue land warrants to be located within the said Bend of Tennessee, or county of Houstoun, and at the same time taking bonds for the payment of one-eighth of a dollar per acre for the said lands, from the persons in whose favor such land warrants were issued. I, myself, received a land warrant, and gave my bond, together with my particular friends, Thomas Gilbert and William Neas. After the said commissioners had transacted their business, they returned, and I was informed made a report of their proceedings to the State of Georgia, which appeared to be so far sanctioned by the Legislature, that it appears they passed a resolution allowing to said commissioners a compensation of five thousand acres of land each for their services, and to Mr. John Cole three thousand acres of land as a compensation for his services, who was employed by said commissioners to take the latitude of the northern boundary line of the State of Georgia, and to accompany the commissioners on their route. I can only judge from experience their expense, fatigue, and risk, in attending them, which was very considerable, for which I do not know that they ever did, or have received any compensation further than the promise of lands as previously stated.

3. To your 6th interrogatory, I reply that I was informed one of the commissioners, who never acted, viz: John Morell, resigned, in whose place Col. Thomas Carr was appointed, as will appear by the subsequent resolutions of the said Legislature, and also took an active part with the aforesaid commissioners, and who was also appointed chairman of their board, for the purpose of keeping a record of their proceedings, and a record of certain land warrants by them issued, and such locations as were made under their authority. In virtue of the said warrants, Col. John Donelson, who was one of the acting commissioners, I was informed was afterwards killed by the Indians in the execution of his duty.

4. To your 7th interrogatory, I answer, At the particular request of William Downes, Stephen Heard, John Sevier, Stokely Donelson, (son of John Donelson,) and Lachlin McIntosh, to the best of my present recollection, I assigned them the land which they claimed under the said act, by making special location, approved by them, in the Tennessee purchase. The precise spots I do not at present recollect for want of my papers.

STATE OF VIRGINIA, Prince William county:

Be it remembered that, on this twentieth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, before us, the subscribers, justices of the peace for the county and State aforesaid, personally appeared Zachariah Cox, the deponent aboved named, who being by us duly sworn according to law, did depose and say, that the replies to the preceding interrogatories by him made, are just and true, to the best of his belief and recollection.

DAVID BOYLE,
JOHN BRONAUGH.

STATE OF VIRGINIA, Prince William county:

I hereby certify that John Bronaugh and David Boyle, whose names are above subscribed, were duly commissioned magistrates on the day and year, and for the county and State aforesaid.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and affixed my seal of office, the day and year first above written.

VIRGINIA, Prince William county, to wit:

I, Philip D. Dawe, clerk of the court of the county aforesaid, do hereby certify that David Boyle and John Bronaugh, gentlemen, whose names are within subscribed, are justices of the peace in and for the county aforesaid, duly commissioned and qualified, and that, to all their acts as such, due faith and credit is and ought to be given as well in courts of justice as thereout.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and affixed the seal of the said county, this 20th day of January, 1818.

PHILIP D. DAWE.

DEAR SIR:

WASHINGTON, July 3, 1817.

Yours of the 28th May came to hand yesterday, and I am sorry I have it not in my power to give you the information you want. I had letters from your father and Colonel Donelson on that subject, with a copy of my brother William's petition on behalf of the company, and the resolution of the Assembly of Georgia, and I think a copy of the report of the commissioners, all of which were sent to Col. Stokely Donelson about the year 1796, when he said there was a prospect of selling the claim of the Bend of the Tennessee Company to advantage: since then I have heard nothing on the subject.

The firm of John and Thomas Blount furnished goods in 1784 to a large amount, to extinguish the Indian title, which were delivered to Col. Joseph Martin, and I understood appropriated to that use. And a letter I have from my brother William, dated December, 1785, then at Hopewell, says: "I have not heard from the Georgia commissioners since their arrival at the Bend of Tennessee. I should suppose their report might be found amongst the Georgia records, or perhaps amongst the papers of the then Governor, or surely the sons of Col. John Donelson must know what was done."

The accounts and claim of John G. & Thomas Blount against the company, of which I was one, were put into the hands of my brother William to settle with your father and others concerned, and I believe a settlement did take place with your father, and probably amongst the papers of one of them that may be found.

I am, with respect, your most obedient,

J. G. BLOUNT.

Colonel WILLIAM MARTIN.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: The petition of Thomas Carr respectfully sheweth:

To your petitioner, previous to any sale or disposition of the land lying in the Bend of the Tennessee, (in the now Mississippi Territory,) by the State of Georgia, to wit, in the year 1786, was duly appointed, in pursuance of a legislative resolution, one of a board of commissioners for examining the quantity and quality of said lands, as will appear by a certificate of said appointment hereto annexed. That your petitioner, together with others of his associates, performed the duties assigned them at the imminent peril of their lives, one of them, indeed, having been killed by the Indians before the termination of the service; and, for the purpose of compensating them therefor, the Legislature of the said State, as will appear by the documents annexed, appropriated to each of them five thousand acres of land in the bend of the said river, then called the district of Tennessee. That, independent of the said five thousand acres, your petitioner held surveys in the said bend, made for various persons, to the amount of fifteen thousand acres more, which were the property of your petitioner, plats whereof, as well as the book of records of plats in the said district, were delivered by your petitioner to Richard Henry Wilde, Esq. in the month of November last, to be brought on to Washington for the purpose of substantiating your petitioner's claims and the claims of others, and the same, while in the care of said R. H. Wilde, were lost by accident.

Your petitioner further sheweth unto your honorable body, that the State of Georgia, by various acts, resolutions, and other proceedings, have recognised the justice and validity of your petitioner and his associates' claims, and of the titles acquired in the said district, as will appear by the various vouchers referred to, accompanying the statement hereto annexed. That, in the sale of said lands to certain companies, in 1795, by the State of Georgia, commonly called the Yazoo sale, fifty thousand acres were expressly reserved in the Tennessee Company's purchase, to be divided between your petitioner and his fellow commissioners, share and share alike, for their services. And that the claims of your petitioner, and his associates, not being derived under the said act, nor having any connexion with the said sale, are not within the provisions of the "act for the indemnification of certain claimants of public lands in the Mississippi Territory," although said claims, as your petitioner humbly conceives, are much less fair and meritorious than his own; to which last, indeed, having been for services actually performed, or for surveys fairly acquired, and actually made in pursuance of existing laws, and when the title of Georgia was perfect, your petitioner is not conscious any valid objection can be urged: he, therefore, humbly prays of your honorable body such relief as the nature of his case may require, and as to you shall seem meet.

THOMAS CARR.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, GEORGIA,

IN COUNCIL, AUGUSTA, March 1, 1786.

"Pursuant to a resolution of the Legislature, passed the 20th of February, 1784, the board proceeded to elect a commissioner on the Tennessee, in the room of Thomas Napier, Esq., he being appointed in the room of John Morell, Esq., by the Executive, bearing date the 26th day of April, 1785, when Thomas Carr, Esq., was duly elected."

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, GEORGIA, MILLEDGEVILLE, December 14, 1815.

I, Anthony Porter, one of the secretaries of this department, do hereby certify and make known that the above extract from the minutes of the Executive Council of this State is truly copied from the record book in this office.

Given under my hand, and the seal of the Executive Department, the date above mentioned.

ANTHONY PORTER, Secretary.

GEORGIA.

To the Chairman of the Board of Commissioners for the District of Tennessee:

You are hereby authorized and required to admeasure and lay out, or cause to be admeasured and laid out, unto Thomas Carr, Esq., five thousand acres of land in the district of Tennessee, agreeably to a resolve of the Legislature, as a gratuity and compensation for his services done as a commissioner, taking especial care that the same has not heretofore been laid out to any other person or persons; and you are hereby also directed and required to record a plat of the same in your office, and transmit a copy thereof, together with this warrant, to the Surveyor General's office of this State.

Given under my hand as entry-taker of the Board of Commissioners, this 22d day of September, 1786.

A true copy, taken from the original.

WM. DOWNES, Entry-taker.

DEAR SIR:

ALEXANDRIA, COLUMBIA COUNTY, January 4, 1816.

This will be accompanied by a packet, enclosing the several resolutions of the former General Assembly of this State, respecting the laying out the lands in that tract of country called the Bend of Tennessee.

You will observe that these proceedings took place under the constitution of 1777, when the Legislature of the State of Georgia was composed of one branch only, called the House of Assembly, and sometimes House of Representatives.

The first resolution upon the subject bears date the 20th February, 1784, and which is the foundation of all the subsequent proceedings thereon. The second resolve, which took place the 21st of February, 1784, was for the appointment of the commissioners, in which resolution you will find the name of John Morell, whose vacancy I afterwards filled, as you will see by the certificate of my appointment.

The third resolution bears date the 22d February, 1785, for the appointment of justices of the peace for said district.

The next proceedings, in order of time, is in February, 1786, when a report in part was made by the commissioners; but it is a misfortune that none of these old papers can be found. It is supposed that, in removing the records from Augusta, first to Louisville and then to Milledgeville, that they were left behind, and lost or destroyed.

Next comes Mr. Porter's report, &c., which bears date in August, 1786, and which is followed by the introduction of a bill by Judge Walton, and its final rejection; but what follows after, in the fourth and fifth resolves, is very material. They confirm the proceedings of the commissioners, and say, in express terms, that each of them shall have five thousand acres of land as a compensation for their services, &c.

All these proceedings were prior to the adoption of the federal constitution, when the State had sovereign power. So far extends the resolves.

The only acts of the General Assembly of Georgia, which recognises these proceedings, are, first, an act for suppressing the violence of Indians, passed 31st October, 1787, (see section ten, in the proviso;) and, as the act mentions the people of Franklin, it may not be thought amiss for me to inform you that, at the time of the passage of the said act, all that part of North Carolina which is now the State of Tennessee, was called the State of Franklin, and John Sevier the Governor thereof. The proviso under consideration sets apart and provides for all the surveys which had been made by the authority of the commissioners, of which surveys you had the book containing the plats recorded by me as chairman of the Board of Commissioners, according to their order.

The next act which recognises the commissioners only, is the one under which the Yazoo Company claims, passed the 7th January, 1795. In section fifteen, of the said act, a reserve is made in the Tennessee Company's part of fifty thousand acres of land, to be divided among the commissioners, share and share alike. This ends all the legislative proceedings that have taken place upon the subject, which I hope will be sufficient to prove the justice of my claim to compensation as a commissioner, and also for the lands which I had surveyed in the Bend of Tennessee, the plats of which I likewise forwarded with you. The other commissioners are all dead, and I fear that I shall not long survive them, as I am getting old.

Colonel John Donelson, one of the commissioners and surveyors, was killed by the Indians, as I was informed, when he was on his way to join me in the Bend of Tennessee, in 1786, in prosecuting the duties of our office. Colonel William Downes removed about sixteen or seventeen years past to the Mississippi, and took with him the commissioners' books, wherein their proceedings were recorded, and he is dead several years. General Martin is dead, as I have understood; the honorable John Sevier died lately in the Creek nation, and Colonel Stephen Heard died in October last. Who their representatives are I know not, but hope that they, or some friend for them, will come forward and join me in our claims.

I shall leave it with yourself, and my other friends in Congress from this State, to make use of my name in such manner and way as you think proper, so as to bring the matter before the commissioners, or before the honorable Congress by petition, or in any other way that may seem right. This letter will answer for a statement to which my friends can have reference. I have no news worth writing. Cotton continues at about twenty-three to twenty-four cents.

If you have heard any thing of your lost trunk and papers, please inform me when you write. May the Heavens bless you. Adieu, my friend.

THOMAS CARR.

Hon. RICHARD H. WILDE.

P. S. I forwarded you a letter, covering my appointments, &c., about ten days ago, which I hope you have received.

STATE OF GEORGIA.

By His Excellency DAVID B. MITCHELL, Governor and commander-in-chief of the army and navy of this State, and the militia thereof. To all whom these presents shall come:

Know ye, that Augustin S. Clayton, Esq., who certifies the annexed extracts from the Journal of the House of Representatives, is clerk of that branch of the General Assembly of this State.

Therefore, all due faith, credit, and authority are, and ought to be had and given to his certificate as such.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the great seal of this State to be put and affixed. Done at the State-house in Milledgeville, this fourteenth day of December, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and fifteen, and of the independence of the United States of America the fortieth.

[L. S.]

By the Governor:

A. HAMMOND, Secretary of State.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY, STATE OF GEORGIA, February 20, 1784.

The committee to whom was referred the petition of Mr. Blount, in behalf of himself, and other citizens of North Carolina, respecting the expediency of laying out a new county, to include all that tract of land lying on the Tennessee river, which shall be included by a line drawn from the south bank of said river, where the northwest boundary of this State crosses, and running west till it crosses the said river Tennessee, again to the south bank thereof, then up the said south bank of said river to the place of beginning, after having received all the information they could obtain on that subject, are of opinion it will be necessary, in order to prevent future contests, to take measures, as soon as it may be done with propriety, to settle the said tract of country, and do recommend for that purpose, that seven commissioners be appointed, and vested with the powers necessary to ascertain the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the aforesaid lands, and report the same, with their proceedings, to the Legislature, for their consideration, and to make them such compensation as may be deemed adequate and satisfactory: provided, notwithstanding, that the said board shall have power, and they are hereby authorized, if they, or a majority of them, may think it necessary in such manner as to them seems most expedient, to proceed to grant warrants of survey, which shall, when executed, be transmitted, with the plats, to the Surveyor General's office, in order that the same may pass to a grant as the law directs: provided, that no one person shall be eligible to hold or obtain a grant for more than one thousand acres of land, and that he or they so obtaining a warrant shall, at the same time, give bond and security to pay into the treasury of this State at and after the rate of one-eighth of a dollar per acre, which sum shall be paid before he, she, or they, shall obtain a grant; that — be, and they are hereby appointed justices for said district; that the said board shall be authorized to nominate militia officers, who shall be commissioned by his excellency the Governor.

February 21. The House proceeded to the appointment of commissioners for examining the quantity and quality of the lands on the Tennessee river, agreeable to a resolve of the 20th instant, when the following persons were appointed, viz: Lachlin McIntosh, Jun., Wm. Downes, Stephen Heard, John Morell, John Donelson, Joseph Martin, and John Sevier, Esquires.

February 22, 1785. A letter from Colonel Stephen Heard, dated the 22d February, instant, being laid before the House, Resolved, That the several persons therein named, to wit: William Blount, John Donelson, William Downes, John Sevier, Joseph Martin, Charles Robertson, Valentine Sevier, Jun., and Stephen Heard, Esquires, be appointed justices of the peace for the said district of Tennessee, and that his honor the Governor do qualify the said Stephen Heard before himself in council, and thereafter grant a commission directed to him, to enable him to qualify the other justices above mentioned, when he shall repair to the said district of Tennessee.

Monday, February 6, 1786. The committee appointed to bring in a bill for laying out a county on the Tennessee, within this State, brought in the same, which was read the first time.

February 10, 1786. A return of the commissioners of the district of Tennessee was read. Ordered, That the same be referred to the committee, and that Mr. Few, Mr. Fort, and Mr. C. Crawford be that committee.

February 14, 1786. The committee, to whom was referred the proceedings of the Tennessee commissioners, reported:

August 1, 1786. The committee, to whom was referred the motion of Mr. Porter, declaring it to be expedient, in order to prevent disputes in future, to settle the country in the Bend of the Tennessee, and for which purposes commissioners were appointed to ascertain the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the land, with powers to grant warrants of surveys not exceeding one thousand acres to an individual, on purchase at one-eighth of a dollar per acre. At the same time a committee was appointed to bring in a bill for enacting the same into a law, but your committee do not find that they ever made a report. It appears, however, that the House, on the next day, proceeded to the appointment of commissioners expressly for the purposes above mentioned: that, on the 22d December, 1785, a majority of the commissioners reported their proceedings to the House, by which, among other things, it appeared they had made divers appointments, and had granted an indulgence of three years to the purchasers, and have taken bonds to a large amount; that, on the 7th of February, 1784, the petition of William Blount, Richard Caswell, and Griffith Rutherford, with sundry other citizens of North Carolina, was presented to the House, setting forth, among other things, that they had made a purchase of lands on the Tennessee, said to be within the limits of this State, and praying that the State will lay out the same into a county, and grant out the same by lawful authority; that the committee aforesaid reported in the same month, which was adopted by the House, and a bill was brought in, but your committee cannot find that it ever progressed to any effect; that your committee recommend that the House review these proceedings, and consider whether it be now proper to lay the said district out into a county. Your committee suggests to the House that, as the northern boundary must be the dividing line between this State and South Carolina, it cannot be ascertained, until the dispute subsisting is determined, but which can be obviated by avoiding the slip of land which lies between the sources of the Keowee and Tugulo, the proximity of which plainly appears by the chart herewith exhibited. By the communications which have been made to your committee, it appears that numbers of persons from the neighboring States are about to make settlements on the land, and, from the idea of the right of occupying vacant territory, which, if founded, calls for the immediate interposition of Government. Upon the whole, therefore, your committee advise that leave be given to bring in a bill for the object of the motion.

Ordered, That leave be given, and that the same committee do prepare and bring in the same.

August 7, 1786. Mr. Watton, from the committee appointed on the motion of Mr. Porter, presented, according to order, a bill to be entitled "An act for laying out a district in the Bend of Tennessee," which was read the first time.

August 8, 1786. A bill to be entitled "An act for laying out a district in the Bend of Tennessee," was read the second time.

Saturday, August 12, 1786. On the third reading of the bill, a motion was made that the bill to be entitled "An act for laying out a district in the Bend of Tennessee," be rejected, and, on the question for the rejection, it passed in the affirmative—yeas 26, nays 23.

Resolved, That the title of any person or persons whatsoever, to any lands in the district of Tennessee, so far as the same is sanctioned or authorized by former resolutions of Assembly, shall not in any respect be weakened or injured by the rejection of this day of the bill for laying out a district; nor shall the power or duty of the commissioners who have acted on that business, be at all revoked or impaired, but every thing in respect to the said Tennessee district shall stand precisely upon the same footing as if the said bill, so rejected as aforesaid, had not been brought in: And it is further resolved, That John Linsey, Esq. stand appointed surveyor for the said district of Tennessee.

August 14, 1786. Resolved, That each of the commissioners appointed on the Tennessee business, who have actually attended their duty, shall be entitled to five thousand acres of land in the district, as a gratuity, and full compensation for their trouble therein, and shall, and may have a warrant of survey for the same to them respectively; that John Call shall also be entitled to three thousand acres as a compensation for his trouble, and may have a warrant of survey for the same. And it is further resolved, That the district surveyor shall not proceed to make, or suffer to be made, any surveys in the bend of Tennessee until the further order of the Legislature.

I, Augustin S. Clayton, clerk of the House of Representatives, and keeper of the public records of that branch of the General Assembly, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing (contained upon four full pages, and part of the fifth) are true extracts from the journals deposited in my office; and I further certify that there is no seal of my office.

Given under my hand, this 13th of December, 1815.

AUGUSTIN S. CLAYTON, Clerk Ho. of Rep., State of Georgia.

DEAR SIR:

ALEXANDRIA, GEORGIA, December 19, 1815.

Your favor of the 2d instant I received by yesterday's mail, in which I am informed of the loss of your trunk and its contents. I regret it as much for the injury that others may feel in the loss of the books and papers which I forwarded by you as for myself, and am truly sorry for your individual loss. Perhaps, if some reward was offered for the papers they might be returned, or so brought to light as that they could be recovered, as they cannot be of use to any but the owners.

With respect to my claims on the Tennessee river, which amounts to twenty thousand acres, fifteen surveys of one thousand acres each, and my commissioner's claim of five thousand, my surveys, which I delivered to you, are in the names following, viz:

In the River island surveys.			In Little river surveys.
No. 1.	Walter Childs,	- - 1,000 acres.	No. 1.	Peter Wruther,	- - 1,000 acres.
2.	Francis Bacon,	- - 1,000	2.	William Stilth, Jun.	- - 1,000
3.	Walter C. Carr,	- - 1,000	3.	Godfrey Zimmerman,	- - 1,000
4.	William Bacon,	- - 1,000	4.	William H. Bacon,	- - 1,000
In the High rocks surveys.			Thomas Carr (myself) 1,000 acres, an island in Tennessee.
No. 3.	Charles Carr,	- - 1,000 acres.	In Elk river surveys, and at the mouth of Elk.
4.	Thomas Carr, Jun.	- - 1,000	No. 1.	Robert Middleton,	- - 1,000 acres.
5.	Thomas Ellis,	- - 1,000	2.	Rice Collins,	- - 1,000
6.	Thomas C. Childs,	- - 1,000

The several distinctions above are laid down in order to show the lying of the land surveyed in the year 1786, by Zachariah Cox, who was at that time a deputy surveyor under Colonel John Donelson, appointed by the Board of Commissioners for that purpose.

With respect to your recommendation of General John Sevier, I think highly of it; but should his representatives (for I know not who they are) not think proper to come forward, perhaps I should, by delaying, be deprived of my right, unless I should go forward, or some one other of the commissioners' representatives (for they are all dead except myself) should bring the matter before Congress.

I have lately understood that the gallant General Jackson is now at the city of Washington; if so, he will, no doubt, feel an interest in Colonel John Donelson's claims, as, I understand, his lady is a daughter of the colonel. If he would come forward in behalf of Colonel Donelson's claims, and his fellow commissioners, I should be much more hopeful upon the business, as, I think, his influence would add great strength thereto; and I will, in a few days from this, forward to you a full and complete copy of all the several resolutions, duly certified, and the acts of the Legislature of this State, which has any bearing thereon, with remarks.

Enclosed I have sent you a copy, in due form, of my appointment as commissioner, and will, for the present, not go more in detail, but must trouble you upon another matter of business, viz: Some time in March or April last, Joel Crawford, Esq. addressed a letter to me from Milledgeville, as he saith, covering an execution in my name vs. Horatio Marbury, which had formerly issued from the inferior court of Richmond county, accompanied with an order made by Judge Harris for the fi. fa. to be amended by the court in Richmond.

This letter has never come to hand, nor can any one of the postmasters in this quarter give any account thereof. I apprehend it has been mis sent to Columbia, in South Carolina, (as I have had some heretofore take that course,) and, from the length of time, that it may have been returned to the General Post Office. Will you be so good as to make the necessary search, and inform me? The execution is levied upon valuable property, and the property claimed, and a first trial had before the wisdom of the judge was discovered, and, if I cannot get the fi. fa., I fear that I shall sustain a considerable loss.

Our Legislature broke up on Saturday last. They have occupied much of their time in trying to disgrace the judges, and finally passed some sort of a vote of censure upon them, which amounts to nothing. They have established a State bank, which seems to be the most important of their acts, and repealed the alleviating law, &c.

News of Augusta: cotton twenty-one to twenty-two cents.

David Pace, in Ballard's boat, with five hundred bales of cotton, was consumed by fire, some eight or ten nights past, and some heavy suits brought against David & Thomas Pace and Ballard for the amount, which is estimated at fifty thousand dollars. This will shake their loose change, if recoveries go against them, of which, it seems, there is but little doubt.

I herewith enclose you a copy of my commissioner's warrant, which I have taken from a copy thereof which I retained in my office, if it should be necessary to be made use of; and the other papers I shall forward as soon as Captain Carr arrives from Milledgeville, where he waited to get them regularly certified. I expect him every day.

I am, dear Wilde, yours, &c.

R. H. WILDE, Esq.

THOMAS CARR.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the undersigned, George W. Sevier, for and in behalf of himself and the other heirs and representatives of the late John Sevier, deceased, respectfully sheweth:

That the said John Sevier, together with Lachlin McIntosh, Jun., William Downes, Stephen Heard, John Donelson, Joseph Martin, and John Morell, were appointed, under a resolution of the State of Georgia, passed on the 21st February, 1784, commissioners to examine the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the Great Bend of the Tennessee river. That, on the resignation, and in lieu of the said John Morell, Thomas Kerr was subsequently appointed on the said commission. That the said commissioners, with the exception, as your memorialists have been informed, of Lachlin McIntosh and Joseph Martin, assumed the discharge of the duties imposed upon them by the said resolution; and in the years 1784 and 1785, under circumstances of great danger and hardship, proceeded to the Great Bend of the Tennessee river, where they ascertained the northern boundary line of the State of Georgia, opened, in pursuance of the said resolution, a land office, and issued sundry warrants. That, while engaged on this perilous commission, John Donelson lost his life from the hostility of the Indians. That, in the month of April, 1786, the surviving commissioners made a report of their proceedings to the Legislature of Georgia; and the said Legislature, by their resolution of April 14th, 1786, expressed their approbation of the conduct of the said commissioners, by directing to be laid off for each commissioner who had actually attended to his duty, five thousand acres, and for a certain John Call three thousand acres of land. That the said Legislature also commissioned the said J. Sevier and others to act as justices of the peace in that part of the State which they had explored. That neither the said J. Sevier, nor any of the said commissioners, were ever paid or received from the said State of Georgia any pecuniary compensation for their toils and services aforesaid, or any reimbursement for the losses they had sustained, or the expenses they had incurred. That, in consequence of the hostility of the Indians, and the unsettled state of the Georgia frontier, the grant above named was never patented by the said State; but the claim of the said commissioners to indemnification, and their right to the said grant, was again recognised by the Legislature of the said State on the 7th of January, 1795, when the act, commonly called the Yazoo act, was passed. That, by the said act, a tract of fifty thousand acres was directed to be reserved for the satisfaction of the commissioners aforesaid; and your memorialist confidently asserts that, whatever may be the doubts and prejudices existing upon the validity of the said act, neither the said John Sevier, nor any of the said acting commissioners, were chargeable with having exercised undue means to obtain the said reservation in their favor, but, on the contrary, the said grant ought to be considered as the voluntary and unbiassed expression of the sense of the said Legislature on the importance of the said commissioners' services. That, independently of the toils and perils they had endured, they sustained a heavy pecuniary loss, from the necessity they were under of supplying themselves with arms, ammunition, and provisions, and of employing a large party of men, as a guard, during the aforesaid excursion. That, under such circumstances, your memorialist conceives that the said commissioners, or their representatives, are justly entitled to a confirmation of the said grant, and that their claim is fairly embraced and protected by the articles of cession executed between the United States and the State of Georgia.

Your memorialist further represents, that the said reservation of fifty thousand acres was duly made and located under the said act, and that a deed was executed to the said John Sevier by Zachariah Cox for his proportion thereof, which deed has been duly recorded in the office of the Secretary of State, at Washington. Your memorialist, therefore, prays that the tract of land so conveyed to the said John Sevier, may be confirmed to his heirs by the act of your honorable body, and that such further or other relief on the premises may be granted to your memorialist, and the other heirs of the said John Sevier, as to your honorable body may seem meet, and the justice of their case may require; and, as in duty bound, he will ever pray, &c.

G. W. SEVIER, for himself, and the other heirs and representatives of John Sevier.

WASHINGTON COUNTY, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, ss:

On this 10th day of December, in the year 1817, before me, the subscriber, a justice of the peace of the said county and district, personally appeared George W. Sevier, the memorialist above named, and made oath that the facts and statements in the above memorial contained are founded on the information he received from his father, John Sevier, in his lifetime, and from others, and that he believes the said facts and statements to be true.

APPLICATION FOR AN EXTENSION OF CREDIT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 17, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Bernard Steiner, reported:

The petitioner states that, at the last session of Congress, he presented a petition, praying to be authorized to purchase public land on terms therein specified; that he was induced to hope it would have been favorably received, but, for want of time, it had not been acted upon. Under the hope of ultimate success, he had left the United States for Switzerland, whence he had lately returned, bringing with him upwards of fifty emigrants, all of them farmers. The petitioner now renews his application, and asks permission to purchase a township of land in the State of Indiana, for which he is willing to pay one-eighth at the time of selecting the township, one-eighth in two years after, and the balance at the expiration of ten years.

The committee have viewed the present petition with stronger wishes to comply with its object than others of a similar nature which they have been called on to consider; but they feel themselves compelled to recommend its rejection. The laws of a country should operate alike on all; exceptions to this general principle should not be permitted on slight grounds. The present petition asks for certain advantages in favor of Swiss emigrants; but it will not be considered that foreigners have a better claim on the indulgence of the Government than citizens of the country. Again, they are said to be poor, and unable to purchase land at the usual price, and on the usual terms in regard to credit. This may be said with as much truth of our own poor; indeed, we have had before us numerous petitions of this description already. They have been rejected; and so, in the opinion of the committee, ought to be the present. They, therefore, recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

SITES FOR TOWNS IN MISSISSIPPI AND ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 24, 1818.

To the Senate of the United States:

WASHINGTON, February 23, 1818.

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, of the 19th January, 1818, requesting information of the measures which have been taken in pursuance of so much of the act to authorize the appointment of a surveyor for the lands in the northern part of the Mississippi Territory, passed the 3d of March, 1817, as relates to the reservation of certain sections for the purpose of laying out and establishing towns thereon, I now transmit a report from the Secretary of the Treasury, which, with the letters and charts referred to in it, contains all the information which is desired.

JAMES MONROE.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 19, 1818.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate, requesting the President of the United States to inform the Senate what measures have been taken, in pursuance of so much of the act entitled "An act to authorize the appointment of a surveyor for the lands in the northern part of the Mississippi Territory, and the sale of certain lands therein described," passed the 3d day of March, 1817, as relates to the reservation of certain sections for the purpose of laying out and establishing towns thereon, the Secretary of the Treasury respectfully reports to the President of the United States the enclosed letters and charts explanatory of the measures which have been adopted within the contemplation of the resolution.

All which are respectfully submitted.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 6, 1817.

To enable the President of the United States to make a proper selection of the sections authorized to be reserved, for the purpose of laying out and establishing towns under the act for appointing a surveyor of the lands in the northern parts of the Mississippi Territory, I have the honor to request that you will instruct the surveyor the said district to furnish all the information necessary for that object.

In performing this duty, his attention will necessarily be directed to the falls of the Sepsy or Black Warrior, to the Cotton-gin port on the Tombigbee, and to the junction of those two rivers, should it be comprised within his land district. Two points upon the Tennessee river will probably be found to unite in their favor considerations sufficiently strong to become the objects of selection under the act in question. One of these will probably be found at or near the foot of the Muscle shoals, or some point at the head of boat navigation or Bear creek, as the one or the other may be nearest to the navigable waters of the Tombigbee river, which is understood to be the Cotton-gin port; the other above the Muscle shoals, at the nearest point from the falls of the Sepsy. These two towns will probably be great thoroughfares between East and West Tennessee and the towns which will, no doubt, be built at the falls of those navigable rivers.

As soon as the information necessary to a selection shall be received, the reservations will be decided upon, and instructions given for laying out the town upon such plan as shall be approved by the President.

Although the act of the 3d of March last does not apply to the Alabama district, it is deemed proper to make reservations there also, for the purpose of laying off and establishing towns when authority shall be given for that purpose; you are, therefore, requested to cause the information necessary, for the making of such selections, to be obtained as soon as practicable by the surveyor of that district, and transmitted, without delay, to this Department.

The falls of the Coosa, Tallapoosa, and Cahawba rivers, and the junction of the latter river with the Alabama, are the points to which his attention will necessarily be directed. It is extremely desirable that this information should be obtained in time to make such reservations at the sale, to be held at Milledgeville on the first Monday in August, as the public interest shall require.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JOSIAH MEIGS, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SIR:

HUNTSVILLE, Mo. T. August 2, 1814.

Agreeably to former advice, I now transmit you plats* of such sections as I think best calculated for laying out towns on the Tennessee river. Below the shoals, no doubt, will be erected a town that will grow into much importance; but to determine on the most suitable spot is somewhat difficult, as several sites present themselves, either of which will do tolerably well, but none possess all the advantages that could be wished for. The first is the south bank of Tennessee river, opposite the mouth of Cypress, the place where the military road that is now opening will cross that river. The situation is high and somewhat broken, the bank of the river is an abrupt precipice of limestone rock, about one hundred and eighty feet high; through this bluff is a hollow leading into the river, where runs a small spring only sufficient for the use of a small family. Along this hollow the road has been made, with some labor, to the water's edge, where the landing is good for a ferry, but rather limited for the purposes of a town, particularly for carriages hauling cargoes to and from boats. From the top of the bluff the land descends as it leaves the river, is waving with several hollows and sinks, and has every appearance of as much health as any other place on the river. The cold water spring, equal to any fountain in the world, lies three miles south of this place, and is sufficiently large for a set of mills on a large scale. Water from this spring, if it could be thrown one hundred feet high, would flow to the spot; but of this I am not a judge if it would be practicable.

At and below the mouth of Cold Water creek is a good situation; the bank of the river is a bluff of limestone rock about one hundred and forty feet high, running back from the river tolerably level, but descends both up and down the river. At the lower end of the bluff is a level bottom about twenty poles wide, extending down the river near a mile, a fine boat-landing the whole way; the bank level and dry. Above the bluff the ground descends into a point between the river and creek, and forms a good boat-landing on the river, or at any point up the creek for half a mile, as the water in the mouth of the creek is always sufficiently deep for boats that distance, forming a most beautiful bank and back ground for wagons, and such carriages as would be used in transporting cargoes to and from boats. This point of land is the spot where General Robertson destroyed a Creek village in the year 1787. The ascent from either landing to the top of the hill is easy. About half a mile back from the river is a fine bold spring of pure limestone water that discharges itself into the Cold Water creek. The water from the Cold Water spring could be carried to this place, by throwing it twenty or thirty feet high, by pursuing the creek bottom. This situation is opposite the centre of an island that is about five miles long, which would oppose a ferry being there.

Neither of those sites are precisely at the head of navigation. About three miles above the mouth of Cypress, on the south side of Tennessee river, is a remarkably fine large spring affording plenty of water for the purposes of a town. This spring rises about eighty poles from the river, and runs nearly due north, with a fine current, into the river. On each side of the branch the ground is very broken, with high hills and deep hollows; the banks of the river above and below are high and very uneven, forming several elegant sites for single buildings; but none suitable for a town. At the head, and to the east of the spring, the ground is high, and lies well for a town sufficiently level, and extending back to a great distance; opposite this situation is an island of the Muscle shoals, of about six miles in length, the lower end of which is at Montgomery's ferry, one mile below this spring, which is the nearest place a ferry can be had, the road to which will be excellent, as there is a broad gravelly hollow leading directly from the site to the ferry.

Above the Muscle shoals it will be difficult to determine the place that is to grow into the most importance, as much will depend upon the local situation of the sub-divisions of the country by the Legislature, as each county on the river will, no doubt, lay out a town to suit the convenience of the inhabitants, and which may very possibly be different from the ones I may select at present; but, having my attention directed to a site most contiguous to the head navigation of the Black Warrior river, I will give you two points the best, in my opinion, to that object.

Milton's bluff is situate on the south side of Tennessee river, and what is generally called the head of the Muscle shoals, yet I do not consider it as such. As I marched a brigade of mounted men to the lower county, in October, 1814, I ordered a boat-load of corn to descend the river from Madison county, and meet me at Milton's bluff, the boat grounded, and I had to send men and drag her to shore, and unload six miles above the bluff. The situation is a beautiful one; the bluff is seventy-five feet high; it is broken with a hollow through the bluff, in which, and near the margin of the river, is an excellent spring of water; there are several other small springs in the vicinity, and which would be in the bounds of a large town; the ground back from the bluff rises gradually for about fifty poles, after which it is broken with several hollows. The river here is two hundred and sixty poles wide, and, during the summer season, when the waters are low, it is forded, both above and below the bluff, with safety on a small horse. The country back for about three miles is poor, after which it becomes better, and when five or six miles back is very good land. The inhabitants of this beautiful spot are at this time very sickly.

The Creek village, so called from a body of Creek Indians being there settled, in a town, at the commencement of the late war. This place is about 15 miles above Milton's bluff, and is a beautiful situation; the bank of the river is perfectly straight and level on its top, and is about fifty feet high; except a small part below, it can be descended to the margin of the river with ease at any place. About midway the bank is an excellent spring of pure limestone water; it breaks out near the edge of the river, and when the waters are low runs very bold. From the top of the bank the ground is level back for about fifty poles, when it descends very gently. The whole country back and around this place lies well, and is interspersed with good land; a ferry is now kept at this place.

The falls of the Black Warrior lie, it is believed, a little west of south from Milton's bluff. From the plats you will observe that the Creek village is about nine miles south of Milton's bluff, which will throw the two places at nearly equal distance from the falls. Several men have spent some time in examining the country, between the Tennessee river and the falls of the Black Warrior, for the most suitable ground to open a road between those waters. The best opinions I can get on that subject are in favor of the Creek village; from which place a road would take the dividing ridge between the heads of Bear creek and Black Warrior; whereas from Milton's bluff it would cross the head branches of Bear creek to go a straight course, but no doubt it is practicable to get a road from either place. From Huntsville, to the falls of the Black Warrior, the best and most convenient route will be to cross at the Creek village; it will also be the most direct route from New Orleans to Lexington, Kentucky.

I do not know if the President will feel authorized to lay out towns on fractional sections, but for his information I transmit plats of the several sites, with their numbers, as they are surveyed, in general, with the other lands of the country.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

JOHN COFFEE.

LAND CLAIMS IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 24, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of sundry inhabitants of the Illinois Territory, praying for the confirmation of certain lands heretofore confirmed by the Governors of the Northwestern and Indiana Territories, report:

That, by the resolutions of Congress, of 1788, and act of 1791, claims to land at Vincennes, and in the Illinois country, founded on ancient grants made by the French or British Governments, were recognised, and donations were made to the heads of families, in 1783, of four hundred acres; to those who had improved lands, not more than four hundred acres, and to those who did militia duty in August, 1790, one hundred acres.

The Governor of the Northwestern Territory was empowered to allot and confirm to the inhabitants the lands they might be entitled to under the provisions of said resolutions and act of Congress. The Governor of the Northwestern Territory proceeded to perform that duty, and continued, from time to time, to make grants and confirmations, until the power was transferred to the Governor of the Indiana Territory, who also made grants and confirmations, until the power was transferred to Boards of Commissioners, established about the year 1804. On the 20th of February, 1812, Congress organized a Board of Commissioners to revise the grants and confirmations of the Governors. This Board, in January, 1813, transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury four lists of claims that had not been supported by sufficient evidence laid before them. Upon the claims thus reported, no proceedings have been had in Congress.

As no control was reserved by Congress over the acts of the Governors, no report ever being required to be made of their proceedings, the petitioners insist that it was not competent to Congress to revise their decisions, either directly or indirectly.

The committee are not disposed either to deny, or acquiesce in this position, because other grounds appear to the committee conclusive in favor of the petitioners.

By reference to the resolutions of 1788, and the law of 1791, it appears that the right to "donations to heads of families," accrued twenty-nine years before the passage of the law of 1812; the same remark applies to the improvement rights, and the claims derived from militia services accrued twenty-two years before the sitting of the Board of Commissioners, under the act of 1812. The petitioners complain, and with great appearance of truth, that, as their claims depend entirely on parol testimony, it was unreasonable to call on them, at so distant a period, after the death or removal of their witnesses, to prove again their claims. The petitioners also complain, with equal appearance of truth, that, admitting the power of Congress to revise the acts of the Governors, their confirmations ought to have been taken as evidence of right, until the presumption in favor of the acts of a public officer was destroyed by clear testimony. It seems, indeed, that the Board of Commissioners, under the law of 1812, did not allow to the acts of the Governors any respect at all; but when the witnesses, called by that Board, had no knowledge of the claim, it was condemned.

The committee cannot hesitate to admit that many changes of property took place, between the confirmations made by the Governors, and their reversal, in 1813, by the Board of revision, and that these revisions have operated prejudicially to innocent purchasers. The committee have not been convinced that any such hardship exists in that class of cases that depended on ancient grants; they depended on written testimony, and it does not appear that such documents have been lost.

The committee, therefore, recommend the rejection of so much of the petition as relates to the class of cases dependant upon grants of the Governors, founded on "ancient grants," and report a bill for the confirmation of the three other classes of cases dependant on parol testimony.

Charles Ladeaux, militia claim of one hundred acres.

Witnesses.—Jacques Ducharme and François Violette.

Proof.—That Charles Ladeaux was duly enrolled in Captain Mailett's company, at Peoria, on, or before the 1st of August, 1790, and continued to serve as a good militia man in the village of Peoria aforesaid.

The above claim, although not entered in time, we recommend to the consideration of the Government, as entitled to the same attention with those forwarded with our letter of November last.

LAND CLAIMS IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 25, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the inhabitants of the village of Prairie du Chien, reported:

That, in the year 1755, the Government of France established a military post near the mouth of the Ouisconsin; that many French families settled themselves in the neighborhood, and established the village of Prairie du Chien; that, by the treaty of Versailles, in the year 1763, the village and the fort, following the condition of the Canadas, and the Illinois country, passed to the Crown of England; that, in the year 1783, the events of the American revolution again changed their condition, and, on the 1st of June, 1796, the village and the fort were formally surrendered by the British to the United States; that many of the petitioners continued their residence, and enjoyed uninterrupted tranquillity, till the capture of the fort, by the enemy, during the last war. The inhabitants, protected in their possession, appear to have neglected, under the successive Governments of France, England, and the United States, to secure themselves the fields which they cultivated by formal titles.

The petitioners now pray that a commissioner may be appointed to examine their claims, and confirm or report them to Congress for future consideration.

And to this effect the committee respectfully submit a bill.

APPLICATION FOR A PRE-EMPTION RIGHT IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 3, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of Charles Smith, reported:

That the memorialist is a man of independent fortune, the fruit of his economy and personal industry; that, viewing the difficulties which the inhabitants of his neighborhood encounter in going to either of the churches of Opelousas or Attakapas, and regretting the want of a school where the youth of that part of the parish might be educated, he is disposed, at his own expense, to erect both a church and a school-house, of the value of $10,000, if the United States will give him a preference in the purchase of between five and six hundred acres of prairie land conveniently situated, at the price of two dollars per acre. He further offers, on his request being complied with, to make over, for the use of these establishments, the wood and timber of eighty acres of land of his own property, adjoining the prairie land in question, now belonging to the public.

The committee duly appreciate the motives which have induced the petitioner to present his application to Congress: but applications for pre-emption rights, though frequent and supported by strong circumstances, are very generally refused. The policy of adhering to general principles, on subjects of this nature, is obvious. The object of the petitioner, highly honorable to himself, is to promote the interests of education, and to add to the convenience of a particular sect. If the favor he asks was granted, Congress would be inundated with applications from all the religious societies of the United States; to prevent which inconvenience, the committee respectfully submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

[1st SESSION.]

VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 16, 1818.

Mr. THOMAS M. NELSON made the following report:

The select committee, to whom were referred resolutions relative to the claims of the officers and soldiers of Virginia, for bounty land for revolutionary services, have had the same under consideration, and, as respects the claims for services rendered by those on State establishment, report, in part:

That it appears to your committee that sundry laws, to promote and encourage the raising of troops to carry on the war of the revolution, were passed by the Commonwealth of Virginia; by which certain bounties in land were promised to such persons as should, by their military services, bring themselves within the provisions of such laws. That, in pursuance of their public engagements, many warrants for land were issued by Virginia, which yet remain unsatisfied. That, to discharge these promises, Virginia had set apart her vacant and unappropriated lands lying upon the waters of Cumberland river, upon the confines of North Carolina. That Virginia possessed other large tracts of unappropriated land within her chartered limits, from which she intended, in the event of a failure of the fund first appropriated, to satisfy her engagements: which event did occur, in consequence of the treaty of 1786 made by the United States with the Chickasaw tribe of Indians, granting them the lands reserved by Virginia for her troops. The injury thus practised has been repaired to the Virginia troops on continental establishment, but remains a monument of injustice towards those troops who were on State establishment. That the old Congress, to promote the general interests of the Union, recommended to the several States, holding tracts of unsettled lands, to form one common fund of them.

The Commonwealth of Virginia, with a zeal for the general welfare that has invariably characterized that State, promptly obeyed the request; and, on the 2d January, 1781, the Legislature adopted resolutions to carry into effect this measure of general good. Knowing that her troops, both on continental and State establishment, had claims upon her for bounties promised for military services, she annexed, to the proposals for this cession, stipulations for these bounties to be satisfied by the United States, not doubting that they would be fulfilled. That, among the terms proposed, the following were contained:

TUESDAY, January 2, 1781.

The General Assembly of Virginia being well satisfied that the happiness, strength, and safety of the United States depend, under Providence, upon the ratification of the articles for a federal union between the United States heretofore proposed by Congress for the consideration of the said States, and, preferring the good of their country to every other object of smaller importance,

Do resolve, That this commonwealth will yield to the Congress of the United States, for the benefit of the said United States, all right, title, and claim that the said Commonwealth hath to the lands northwest of the river Ohio, upon the following conditions, to wit: [here follow several conditions, the fifth of which relates to the bounties to her troops on continental and State establishments, in the following words:] That, in case the quantity of good lands on the southeast side of the Ohio, upon the waters of Cumberland river, and between the Green river and Tennessee river, which have been reserved by law for the Virginia troops upon continental establishment, and their own State establishment, should (from the North Carolina line bearing in further upon the Cumberland lands than was expected) prove insufficient for their legal bounties, the deficiency shall be made up to the said troops, in good lands, to be laid off between the river Scioto and Miamis, on the northwest side of the river Ohio, in such proportions as have been engaged to them by the laws of Virginia.

In this resolution, found among the journals of the General Assembly of Virginia, provision is proposed to be made for the troops of that State, both upon continental and a State establishment, to satisfy their promised bounty in land. These proposals, for the cession of her public lands on the part of Virginia, were transmitted to Congress; some of which were accepted unconditionally, others with alterations and modifications, and others were totally rejected. This proposal, denominated the fifth in the series of propositions, was accepted by Congress as reasonable. Your committee find that, in transcribing this proposition, as appears on the journals of the old Congress, an omission occurs of the "troops upon State establishment." Your committee observe also, upon the journals of the same Congress, that, where the terms of this cession did not meet their approbation, the objections were stated at length, and supported by reasons: now, as no objection to this proposition, for securing the land bounties to the troops on State establishment, appears on the journals, your committee deem the omission to be accidental. To remedy the injustice, thus practised upon a meritorious class of persons, who were actively instrumental in securing the liberty and independence of the United States, no great magnanimity is required of the national rulers; nor is much expense requisite: for, upon the best information to be obtained of several members of the present Congress who reside in the vicinity of this tract of land, now in the possession of the Chickasaw tribe of Indians, and which had been set apart by Virginia for the particular purpose of satisfying her troops, both on State and continental establishment, and, subsequently, ceded by the General Government to the present Indian holders, the land may be obtained on reasonable terms, either by purchase or exchange of territory; few or none of the Indians now residing upon it, because of the entire destruction of the game.

Your committee, upon examination of the deed of cession by Virginia to the United States, find this clause: "That all the lands within the said territory, so ceded to the United States, and not reserved for, or appropriated to, any of the before mentioned purposes, or disposed of in bounties to the soldiers of the American army, shall be considered," &c. The same clause is to be found in the original propositions made by Virginia; and it appears to your committee that no distinction was intended to be made between the continental and State lines, unless it be urged that the State troops were not considered to be part of the American army; but your committee are warranted in asserting that, on many important occasions, and particularly during the Southern war, under the command of the late General Greene, they formed a most valuable and efficient part of that gallant army.

Your committee submit to your consideration whether, as this condition is evidently one of those proposed by Virginia, never rejected by the United States, and probably considered to be included in the deed of cession by Virginia, it would not comport with the equity and justice due from this nation to her revolutionary soldiers, to supply any defect in the cession which withholds from them the promised reward for their sacrifices and privations? It is worthy of remark, that the laws of Virginia promising these bounties in lands to her troops, were adopted long before the cession made to the United States of her vacant lands; and, in a court of honor and conscience, it would hardly be questioned whether some latent equity to this bounty was not created in behalf of those meritorious and gallant troops, and whether it would not follow this transfer to the United States. Your committee further submit to your consideration, whether, as the incapacity of Virginia to fulfil her engagements to her State troops has resulted from this transfer to the United States, it would comport with the magnanimity of the Federal Government to permit a member of the confederacy, through its participation, to be guilty of so flagrant a breach of faith, and to suffer these deserving heroes of the revolution longer to pine in penury and want? Your committee are sensible that the national feelings of America demand that justice should be dispensed to the patriotic actors in the war of our independence—a war in which common interest and common danger produced common exertions and common sacrifices amongst the States, and which ended in securing to us the blessings of a free Government, in which we equally participate. That the General Government has set the precedent of performing particular State engagements, by assuming in their funding system the particular debts of the individual States, contracted in the common struggle for our independence. That community of benefit should produce community of participation in the burdens and sacrifices, justifies an opinion that the United States are bound to fulfil these engagements. Nor can your committee deem it of importance, to the justice of this claim, that none of the other States are similarly situated. Virginia stands alone upon this ground. If she, believing that she was qualified to perform these promises, (which she certainly was before the Union,) had made engagements for services which resulted in the general benefit of the United States, it would but little comport with their magnanimity to reap all the fruits of the struggle, and then send away empty the war-worn laborer who toiled in her fields.

Your committee, fully persuaded of the justice due to the troops of Virginia upon State establishment, and believing that State to have been deprived of the means to comply with her engagements, by her deed of cession of her public vacant lands to the United States, beg leave to report a bill.

LANDS ALLOTTED TO ENCOURAGE THE CULTIVATION OF THE VINE AND OLIVE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 16, 1818.

To the Senate of the United States:

WASHINGTON, March 16, 1818.

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the United States of the 31st of December last, requesting the President to cause to be laid before them a statement of the proceedings which may have been had under the act of Congress passed on the 3d March, 1817, entitled "An act to set apart and dispose of certain public lands for the encouragement and cultivation of the vine and olive," I now transmit a report from the Secretary of the Treasury, containing all the information possessed by the Executive relating to the proceedings under the said act.

JAMES MONROE.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 19, 1818.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate of the 31st of December last, requesting the President of the United States to cause to be laid before the Senate a statement of the proceedings which may have been had under the act of Congress passed the 3d day of March, 1817, entitled "An act to set apart and dispose of certain public lands for the encouragement of the cultivation of the vine and olive," the Secretary of the Treasury has the honor to report to the President, that the French emigrants have deposited in this Department a list containing three hundred and fifty names, and embracing an allotment of the lands contemplated by the said act, by which no individual is to receive more than four hundred and eighty acres, nor less than one hundred and twenty. This allotment has been approved by the President of the United States.

The instructions which have been given to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and by that officer to the surveyor of the public lands south of the State of Tennessee, which accompany this report, explains the measures which have been adopted for the purpose of locating the four townships intended to be set apart by the act of Congress referred to in the resolution. No further information has been received concerning the location of the townships.

All which is respectfully submitted.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 10, 1817.

Enclosed you have a copy of a letter, dated this day, from the Secretary of the Treasury to this office, which you will consider your instructions for laying off the lands granted to the French emigrants, by the act of 3d March, 1817, and you will obey those instructions promptly.

I am, &c.,

J. MEIGS.

THOMAS FREEMAN, Esq.,
Surveyor General, &c., St. Stephens.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 10, 1817.

The late French emigrants having, by General Chas. L. Allemand and Mr. Chas. Villar, presented to this Department an authenticated copy of their proceedings, under the act of Congress to set apart and dispose of certain public lands for the encouragement of the cultivation of the vine and olive, from which it appears that the said Chas. L. Allemand and the said Chas. Villar have been duly appointed president and vice president of the board entrusted with the management of the interest created by the act in question: and the president of the said board having, at the same time, deposited in this Department a list of the names of the French emigrants associated under the said act, with an allotment of the land contemplated to be granted, which has been approved and sanctioned, you will, therefore, without delay, instruct the surveyor of the district in which the land intended to be set apart shall be located, to cause the same to be surveyed in the same manner that the other public lands are surveyed, and that the sections and quarter sections be numbered, in all respects, in the manner invariably practised in the other public lands in the Alabama Territory. The townships must be contiguous, and they must form a component part of the general plan of the survey of the said Territory, so as not to form fractions of townships. To this end it is necessary that the standard lines, established in those parts of the Territory already surveyed, be extended as soon as the selection is made by the agents of the association, so as to embrace the townships selected. The selection and the form, whether square or oblong, of the four townships, shall be, at the discretion of the agents of the association, subject nevertheless to the principle of contiguity, and to the general connexion with, and conformity to, the sub-division of the whole Territory into townships, so as to avoid the creation of fractions of townships.

As soon as the returns of the surveys are received at your office, you will submit them to this Department, in order that the definitive arrangements required by this act may be decided without unnecessary delay.

It is understood the selection, under the act in question, has been made below the mouth of the Black Warrior or the Sepsy.

I am, &c.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JOSIAH MEIGS, Esq., Commissioner General Land Office.

A letter being received from the surveyor, dated 9th of December, 1817, stating that six fractional townships had been selected, and requesting information how the four townships, or 144 sections, should be laid off in them, he was directed to carry into effect, in every respect, the instructions already given.

SIR:

ST. STEPHENS, October 9, 1817.

I take the liberty of enclosing you, herewith, a rough sketch of the position occupied by the French emigrants, under an act of Congress granting them four townships, &c. The principal agents of these people express anxiety to have the limits of their lands or grant designated by the surveyors. The act in their favor says, "any four contiguous townships, each six miles square," to be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, under the direction of the President of the United States.

The position they have chosen, being on the bank of the Tombigbee river, and the opposite side being Indian Territory, the townships adjoining and covering the positions selected, will be all fractional. The agents of the emigrants have no doubt made known to the Secretary of the Treasury the location they have made, and wishes respecting it. Under these circumstances I have to request the favor of you, sir, to let me know whether the location, made by the agents of the emigrants, will be confirmed by the President or not; and, if it does, in what manner the legal quantity of land shall be laid off for them? I make this inquiry, in consequence of a pressing application made to me by the principal agent of the emigrants to have the limits of their lands designated for them. I take the liberty of requesting your attention to another subject on which I wish to have your advice.

The act of Congress designating the Alabama district says it shall be bounded on the north by a due west line to be drawn from Fort Williams, on the Coosa river.

The survey of this district is now approaching its northern limit, and it is not to be expected that, in the progress of the survey, a township line will fall exactly on, and correspond with, the north boundary of the district as proposed. The running of the north boundary of the district due west from Fort Williams to the Tombigbee river, (nearly 100 miles,) will be attended with expense, and will make fractional townships and sections on each side of it. The information I ask is, shall the boundary line between these districts be run due west from Fort Williams, on the Coosa, or will the nearest township line to that line be adopted as the boundary between these districts?

I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

THOMAS FREEMAN.

JOSIAH MEIGS, Esq., Commissioner General Land Office.

ST. STEPHENS, ALABAMA DISTRICT, October 9, 1817.

The annexed sketch [see plate 2, fig. 2,] is a representation of position the agents of the French emigrants have selected and taken possession of, under the act of Congress granting them four townships of land in the Alabama district, on certain conditions.

The river, as here represented, is not from an actual survey at this time; it is taken from a survey of the river by Captain Gaines, and is supposed to be tolerably correct.

The survey of Alabama district, when extended to the river, will fall on it as here represented, if the survey of the river be tolerably correct.

Query. How shall the four townships, or 144 sections, be laid off and designated for the emigrants at this position?

THOMAS FREEMAN, Surveyor General.

JOSIAH MEIGS, Esq., Commissioner General Land Office.

CLAIM UNDER A BRITISH GRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 4, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Philip C. S. Barbour, have had the same, together with the accompanying documents, under consideration, and beg leave to make thereon the following report:

It is stated by the petitioner in his petition, that his father, Philip Barbour, who was a native of Virginia, served as a captain in the provincial service of Great Britain during her war in America, which terminated in 1763; that his father went to the then colony of West Florida, now State of Mississippi, in 1768, and located there two thousand acres of land, by virtue of warrants obtained from the Governor of West Florida, for his services during the aforesaid war; had the same regularly surveyed, and, in 1770, obtained from the proper authority grants therefor; fifteen hundred acres of which were located at the confluence of the Big Black or Little Yazoo river and the Mississippi, on the east side of the latter and south side of the former; on which tract he immediately settled, and on which he lived until the commencement of the American revolutionary war; when, for espousing the cause of liberty, he became obnoxious to the British Government, by the order of which he was incarcerated for many months, and all his personal estate sacrificed on account of his attachment to his country; that, in 1789, when, by the treaty of peace, Spain had acquired the sovereignty of West Florida to the 31st degree of north latitude, and claimed the territory north of that line, including his one thousand five hundred acre tract, he took the precaution to obtain from the Spanish Government a confirmatory grant for the said one thousand five hundred acres, for the purpose, and under the hope of securing thereby a complete indefeasible title thereto; that, in 1794, his father died the undisputed proprietor of the said one thousand five hundred acres of land, leaving the petitioner, then an infant only seven years old, his only legal heir and representative; shortly after which event Col. James Barbour, of Kentucky, who has long since died, was appointed the guardian of the petitioner; that his said guardian, after it was ascertained that the country, including the said one thousand five hundred acre tract of land, was within the jurisdictional boundary of the United States, and commissioners were appointed to adjust and report on certain claims to land in the Mississippi Territory, employed a lawyer of that country, named Bullock, to lay before the commissioners the claim of the petitioner to the said one thousand five hundred acres of land, and other tracts, and attend to the proper management thereof; that the said lawyer attended to the claims, and filed them with the commissioners within the time required by law, but was unable to exhibit any other evidence of his father's title than the surveys and warrants; the patent or patents having been removed with the Florida records to England, or lost, so that it could not be procured; and, by reason of the death of the said lawyer during the pendency of the claims before the commissioners, and of his said guardian shortly thereafter, no other evidence of his father's perfected titles was laid before the commissioners, who, for want of such evidence as the law required, rejected the aforesaid claims; and that lately the most valuable part of the one thousand five hundred acre tract has been sold by the United States. Upon the case thus stated, and for the reasons thus exhibited, the petitioner asks the interposition of Congress.

To sustain the prayer for relief, as to the three two hundred and fifty acre tracts mentioned in the petition, there is no satisfactory evidence upon which it would be proper for Congress (in the opinion of the committee) to act. It is, therefore, recommended that, as to them, the petitioner have leave to withdraw his papers.

But in regard to the right of the petitioner to the relief sought for, in relation to his one thousand five hundred acre tract, the committee think the evidence amply sufficient. Every material statement, made by the petitioner in his petition, is substantiated by the documentary evidence filed therewith, to the entire satisfaction of the committee. It is proved by the affidavit of the late Governor Wood, of Virginia, that he was at the house of the petitioner's father, on the one thousand five hundred acre tract, on the Mississippi, in 1773; that the place exhibited the appearance of several years' improvement and cultivation; that the said Barbour had been living several years in that country, and informed him he had been living on the farm on which he then lived for some years, and had obtained from the British Government a large grant including it; and that, from the acknowledged veracity of said Barbour, he has no doubt of the truth of all those statements. This affidavit is corroborated by the verbal declarations of the Hon. James Barbour, of the Senate, who also confirms the statements of the petitioner in his petition, about the period of his father's death, and his minority. That the father of the petitioner had a grant from the British Government of West Florida, for one thousand five hundred acres of land at the mouth of the Little Yazoo, on the river Mississippi, for services as an officer during the provincial war of 1763, is abundantly confirmed by the letters of Bullock, the aforesaid lawyer, and of Judge Bey, of South Carolina; in addition to which the latter states that it was generally believed that the grant for said land had been taken to England on the transfer of Florida to Spain, and was deposited with the Florida archives, in the Plantation office at London. If additional evidence were wanting to prove the grant of the one thousand five hundred acres, it is furnished most conclusively by the certified copy of the official act of the Governor and Council of West Florida, in 1770, which grants to Philip Barbour the one thousand five hundred acres of land mentioned in the petition, and by the certified abstract of the British grants in West Florida, taken from the records of Florida, and filed in the office of the Department of State, both of which are certified by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and accompany this report.

That the claim to the one thousand five hundred acre tract was, in due time, filed with the commissioners, and was rejected by them for want of the grant or the transcript from the colonial records of West Florida, appears sufficiently clear from the letter of the Receiver of Public Moneys in Mississippi, Park Walton, and the letters of the Register of the Land Office in said State, Mr. Clarke, both of which are also herewith filed; and that all of the said one thousand five hundred acres that is of much value has been lately sold by the United States, is established by the certificate of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with an accompanying plat, and by the letters of Mr. Burnet and Mr. Patterson, which all accompany this report.

This mass of evidence is not all of the most formal and legal character, and parts of it would not be admissible in a court of justice; but the committee think that it is sufficiently persuasive. It all emanates from sources highly credible, is characterized by the strongest indications of verity, and is, perhaps, as strong as the nature of the case is susceptible of; the only object of human testimony being the conviction of the mind, and the testimony in this case, on every material point, holding claim to the fullest credence; although some of it is ex parte, and not sealed with all the solemnities of an oath, the committee cannot for a moment hesitate to conclude that the facts stated in the petition are sufficiently established. Nor can they, from any view which they have been able to take of the subject, perceive any injustice or unreasonableness in the appeal which the petitioner has made for relief. It is believed that it is one which addresses itself not more to the magnanimity than to the justice of Congress. It is true that, although the petitioner's father had acquired from the proper authority a complete vested and unconditional right to the one thousand five hundred acres of land, for a consideration that all will acknowledge was most meritorious, the service of his country, and although it was consecrated by being made his home, he has lost the benefit of that proprietorship by the regular operation of laws which have been uniform and equal in their dispensations, and which cannot be justly charged with unnecessary severity; and it is also true that he has, by his own misfortune alone, been superseded in the enjoyment of this estate by the intermediation of an American citizen, with the consent and under the authority of the United States, and without any fault or delinquency imputable to either. But it is equally true that this deprivation has resulted from a combination of accidents peculiar and very extraordinary, over which he could have no control. And as there is no room for a suspicion of negligence, or voluntary delinquency in the petitioner, the committee think that it would be inconsistent with the justice, liberality, and beneficence which have always marked the policy of the United States, that they should profit by his misfortune, when (as the committee believe) it would be unjust that he should suffer, and not inconsistent with sound policy that he should be relieved.

When, by the treaty of 1783, Great Britain ceded to the United States the territory which now composes the State of Mississippi, it was claimed by several States as comprehended within their charters; but principally by Georgia. In 1798 and 1800 Congress passed laws for the adjustment and extinguishment of the Georgia claim, and the establishment of a Territorial Government in Mississippi; whereby, among other things, it was declared that the claims of individuals, derived from the British or Spanish Government, rightfully, should be valid; and by the compact made by the United States with Georgia in 1802, it was stipulated that all persons, who, on the 27th of October, 1795, were actual settlers within the territory ceded, should be confirmed in their grants executed prior to that day by the former British or Spanish Government of West Florida. In 1803 Congress passed a law which, among other things, required that all persons claiming land under any British grant in the Mississippi Territory, or by virtue of the provisions of that act, should, before the last day of March, 1804, deliver to the Register of the Land Office a written notice, describing the nature and extent of their claims, together with the plats thereof, and the grants, or other evidences of title, which should be recorded; and that on failure so to do, the claims should be void so far as derived from that act, or the compact with Georgia; and that no grant, which should not be so recorded, should be ever received as evidence in any court of the United States against a grant from the United States. By the same act commissioners were appointed to settle the claims to land under that act, and under the compact with Georgia, and directed to ascertain and report all the grants for land which were not confirmed by the said compact. The time of filing the grant to be recorded was afterward extended to the first day of December, 1805; and, by an act of 1812, all claims under British or Spanish grants, which had been duly recorded, and were contained in the reports of the commissioners, were confirmed.

It is believed that the foregoing are the only provisions of law that can, in the most remote degree, operate on the petitioner's case. And from these it will appear sufficiently clear, that the commissioners had no right to reject the claim of the petitioner, unless he could be considered an actual settler on the — October, 1795, so as to be embraced by the compact with Georgia. If he be considered in the latter condition, in which the commissioners certainly viewed him, the decision of the commissioners against him, as well as the law under which they decided, is of questionable policy; for, by the compact, he was confirmed in his right, and although the power of the United States afterwards to prescribe the manner of manifesting this confirmed title, and of requiring that it should be recorded or forfeited, is not denied, yet it does not comport with the character of the United States to require of the claimant of such confirmed title that which is impossible, and, for not performing the impossibility, to subject him to a forfeiture of his right without any indemnity. The claimant was an infant; his patent in London; his guardian one thousand miles off; his legal representatives, whom he had the precaution to employ, and who had no doubt of succeeding, died before he had furnished all the evidence. In the mean time, the limitation fixed by Congress for the registration of the patent, expired; and thus, by a succession of accidents, it became impossible that the patent should be registered; and for this, and only this, the claim was rejected. The committee cannot believe that the United States would be willing, after confirming a good title to a citizen, to take it from him because he had not done that which it became impossible for him to do, and then refuse to restore him or give him some remuneration for his loss.

If the petitioner was not embraced by the compact, then the commissioners had no power to adjudicate on his claim, and, consequently, their act is void. But still the petitioner is not free from difficulty; by the act of 1804 it was declared, that if his claim should not be registered against the first of December, 1805, the United States should have a right to sell the land, and that his patent should not be evidence against the grant of the United States. The United States have sold the most valuable part of the land; and, although they have not yet given a patent, it is believed that the claim of the petitioner would not be sustained in a court of justice against the incipient right of the purchaser from the United States. But, taking the case on this ground, the committee are of opinion that the petitioner is clearly entitled to some relief; for, waiving every other consideration, it would seem that, as the United States acquired the right to sell the land, from the failure of the claimant to do that which he never consented to do, which they required the same kind of claimant to do in no other territory, and which it was impossible that he could do, they would certainly be bound by every principle of natural justice to restore it, on being satisfied of the nature of the claim, and reason of its forfeiture. If they have put it out of their power by sale to restore the specific tract of land, the claim to indemnity would be as strong, and it would be as proper to give it; otherwise, they take from an infant, without his consent, his inheritance, merely because he has been an infant, and refuse to give him that for it which, had it not been for his infancy, he never would have been reduced to the necessity of asking. When it is well known, too, that the principal, if not the only object of the Government in requiring the registration of titles, was to prevent fraud, and that the case of the petitioner is stamped with indubitable evidences of its integrity, the claim to relief is greatly fortified; but still more by the fact that the petitioner was probably prevented from recording his patent in time, by the rejection of his claim by the commissioners, which they had no right to do, unless he had been an inhabitant in 1795, which the committee think was clearly not the case.

In regard to the nature and extent of relief, the committee have been somewhat perplexed. As the United States have sold a part of the land, if they had the power to reclaim it, good policy would forbid it; for, if the United States would once establish the precedent of selling land, and afterwards taking it away, and giving it to others, the number and amount of their future sales would be not a little diminished. The committee have no doubt that the United States had the right to sell, and as little that, having sold, they should not, if they could, reclaim without the assent of the purchaser. It would follow, therefore, that the petitioner should receive either a commutation in money or other land. And as it is doubtful whether the whole one thousand five hundred acres have been sold, but pretty certain that, if there is any unsold, it is intrinsically worth little or nothing, the committee would suppose it just and proper that, on receiving a release from the petitioner of his claim, the United States should commute the whole one thousand five hundred acres.

It only remains to determine the criterion and kind of commutation. As to the criterion, punctilious exactitude cannot be expected; but the committee are inclined to think it should be the value of the one thousand five hundred acres when the United States sold it or part of it. Whether it should be given in money, or land of the same value or quantity, is not very easily ascertained, nor very material; but, taking every consideration into view, the committee have determined that it would be more convenient to the United States, and as much the interest of the petitioner, that he should be paid in scrip, receivable in payment for public lands. Wherefore, for the foregoing purposes, they beg leave to report a bill.

PLAN FOR ADJUSTING LAND CLAIMS EAST AND WEST OF PEARL RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 8, 1818.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 7, 1818.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate of the 18th of April, 1818, referring the reports of the commissioners for the districts east and west of Pearl river, in West Florida, relative to land claims, together with the memorials, petitions, and other papers addressed to the Senate upon the same subject, to the Secretary of the Treasury, and directing him to report a plan to the Senate at their next session for the adjustment of the claims to land in the said districts, the enclosed draught of a bill for that purpose is respectfully submitted.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Hon. JOHN GAILLARD, President of the Senate pro tem.

A BILL for adjusting the claims to land, and establishing land offices in the districts east of the island of New Orleans.

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all the claims to land, founded on complete grants from the Spanish Government, reported to the Secretary of the Treasury by the commissioners from the districts east and west of Pearl river, appointed under the authority of an act, entitled "An act for ascertaining the titles and claims to land in that part of Louisiana which lies east of the river Mississippi and island of New Orleans," which are contained in the several reports of the commissioners, and which are, in the opinion of the commissioners, valid, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the said Government, be, and the same are hereby recognised, as valid and complete titles against any claim, on the part of the United States, or right derived from the United States: Provided, That the foregoing enactment shall not comprehend any British grant which has not been sold and conveyed, according to the provisions of the treaty of peace between Great Britain and Spain, of the third of September, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, by which that part of Louisiana, lying east of the island of Orleans, was ceded to Spain, under the denomination of West Florida, or which have not been settled and cultivated by the person having the legal title therein, at the date of said treaty.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all claims reported as aforesaid, and contained in the several reports of the said commissioners, founded on any order of survey, requête, permission to settle, or other written evidence of claim, derived from the Spanish authorities, which ought, in the opinion of the commissioners, to be confirmed, and which, by the said reports, appear to be derived from the Spanish Government, before the twentieth day of December, one thousand eight hundred and three, and the land claimed to have been cultivated and inhabited on or before that day, shall be confirmed in the same manner as if the title had been completed; and that, for all the other claims to land comprised in the reports aforesaid, the claimant to such lands shall be entitled to a grant therefor as a donation: Provided, That such grant, as a donation, shall not be made to any one person for more than six hundred and forty acres, which confirmation of the said incomplete titles and grants of donations hereby provided to be made, shall amount only to a relinquishment forever, on the part of the United States, to any claim whatever to the tract of land so confirmed or granted: And provided, also, That no claim shall be confirmed to any person to whom any tract of land shall be confirmed under the preceding provisions.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That every person, or his or her legal representative, whose claim is comprised in the lists, or register of claims reported by the said commissioners, and the persons embraced in the list of actual settlers, or their legal representatives, not having any written evidence of claim reported as aforesaid, shall, where it appears by the said reports, or by the said lists, that the land claimed or settled on had been actually inhabited or cultivated by such person or persons, in whose right he claims, on or before the fifteenth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and thirteen, be entitled to a grant for the land so claimed, or settled on, as a donation: Provided, That not more than one tract shall be thus granted to any one person, and the same shall not contain more than six hundred and forty acres, and that no lands shall be thus granted which are claimed or recognised by the preceding sections of this act.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That every person comprised in the said list of actual settlers, not having any written evidence of claim to land in said districts, and who, on the twelfth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and fourteen, shall have inhabited or cultivated a tract of land in either of the said districts, not claimed by virtue of either of the preceding sections of this act, shall be entitled to a preference, on becoming a purchaser from the United States, of such tract of land, on the same terms and conditions, and at the same price, for which the other public lands are sold at private sale: Provided, That the first instalment of the purchase money shall be paid to the Receiver of Public Moneys of the district within which the land lies, within two years after the opening of the land office for such district.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That, for the purpose of adjusting the titles and claims to lands in the districts aforesaid, and for the disposal of the lands which may remain the property of the United States therein, a land office shall be established in each of the said districts, to be kept for the western district at St. Helena court-house, and for the eastern district at the town of Mobile; and a Register and Receiver of Public Moneys shall be appointed for each of the said land offices, who shall give security in the same manner, and in the same sums, and whose compensation, duties, and authority, shall, in every respect, be the same in relation to the lands which shall hereafter be disposed of, at their respective offices, as are, by law, provided in relation to the other Registers and Receivers of Public Moneys for the several land offices of the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That every person or persons claiming lands in either of the said districts, whose claims have not heretofore been filed with the commissioner of the land office of the district wherein the lands lie, shall be allowed until the first day of — next, to deliver notices, in writing, and the evidences of their claims, in the said districts respectively, to the Register of the Land Office at Mobile, and at St. Helena court-house; and the notices and evidences so delivered, within the time limited by this act, shall be recorded in the same manner, and on the payment of the same fees, as if the same had been delivered before the commissioners closed their said registers.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That every person, or persons, who had filed his or their notice of claims to land, within either of the said districts, with the Commissioner of the Land Office, according to the former laws, but have not exhibited sufficient testimony in support of the same, and whose claim has not been recommended for confirmation, shall be allowed until the first day of — next to deliver written evidence, or other testimony, in support of his or their claim, the notice of which had been filed as aforesaid, to the Register of the Land Office at St. Helena, for lands lying in the district west of Pearl river, and to the Register of the Land Office at Mobile, for the lands lying in the district east of Pearl river; and the evidence of claims, the notice whereof had been filed as aforesaid, for lands lying in the said districts, delivered within the time limited by this section, to the said Registers, shall be recorded by them respectively, in the same manner as was directed by former acts, on receiving the same fees allowed by said acts for recording evidence of claims to lands in the same districts.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the Register and Receiver of Public Moneys of the said respective land offices at Mobile and at St. Helena court-house, shall have the same powers, and perform the same duties, in every respect, in relation to the claims that may be filed in virtue of the sixth section of this act; and in relation to the claims, the notices of which had been filed under former acts, as well as to the additional evidence which shall be adduced in support thereof, agreeably to the seventh section of this act, as the commissioners for the districts east and west of Pearl river would have had, or should have performed, if such notices had been filed, and such evidence adduced before the said commissioners closed their registers.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Register of each of the said land offices respectively, to make to the Commissioner of the General Land Office a report of all the claims filed with the Register aforesaid, with the substance of the evidence in support thereof; and of the claims formerly filed, in support of which additional evidence shall have been received, with the substance of such evidence; and, also, their opinion, and such remarks, respecting the claims, as they may think proper to make; which report, together with a list of the claims, which, in the opinion of the Register and Receiver, ought to be confirmed; and, also, a list of actual settlers, prior to the passage of this act, noting the time of their respective settlements, shall be laid by the Commissioner of the General Land Office before Congress, at their next session, for their determination thereon.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the said Registers and Receivers shall, respectively, have power to appoint a clerk, who shall be a person capable of translating the French and Spanish languages, and who shall perform the duty of translator when required by said Registers and Receivers; and each of the said Registers and Receivers shall be allowed, as a compensation for their services, in relation to the said claims, at the rate of fifteen hundred dollars a year; and each of the clerks at the rate of one thousand dollars a year: Provided, That not more than — months' compensation be thus allowed to the Register, Receiver, and clerk, for the district east of Pearl river; nor more than — months' compensation be allowed to the Register, Receiver, and clerk, of the district west of Pearl river.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the surveyor for the lands south of the State of Tennessee shall, with the consent and approbation of the President of the United States, appoint a principal deputy surveyor for the lands within the said districts, who shall receive an annual salary of five hundred dollars, and whose duty it shall be to survey, or cause to be surveyed, by his other deputies, the lands, the claims to which are confirmed, and that are directed to be granted as donations, where the same have not been already surveyed, and the lands which may be claimed by right of pre-emption, whenever directed by the Register and Receiver, and to execute such other surveys as may be necessary for the ascertainment of the lands, the title or claim to which is embraced in the report of the commissioners aforesaid; and the said principal deputy surveyor shall make out particular plats of the surveys directed by this act, which he shall return to the Register of the proper district, and, also, a general and connected plat, which he shall return to the surveyor of the lands south of the State of Tennessee; and the expense of surveying shall be paid by the United States: Provided, The same shall not exceed, in the whole, four dollars a mile for every mile which shall be actually surveyed and marked.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the books of the former commissioners, in which the claims, and the evidence of claims are recorded, shall be lodged with the Registers of the land offices for the respective districts; and the Register and Receiver of Public Moneys in each respective district shall have power to examine the claims recognized, confirmed, or provided to be granted, by the provisions of this act, as also claims to the right of pre-emption; and they shall make out to each claimant entitled, in their opinion, thereto, a certificate according to the nature of the case, under such instructions as they may receive from the Commissioner of the General Land Office; and on presentation at the General Land Office of such certificate for a confirmed claim, or for a donation according to the provisions of this act, and where it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that the certificate has been fairly obtained, according to the true intent and meaning of this act, then, and in that case, a patent shall be granted in like manner as for other lands of the United States.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the President shall have power to appoint the Register and Receiver of Public Moneys for the said districts in the recess of the Senate, who shall be nominated to them at their next meeting; and the said Registers and Receivers shall be allowed — dollars in addition to their salary and compensation as fixed by law, which additional sums shall be in full for all their services in relation to the claims to lands in said districts.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the application for, and acceptance of, a patent from the United States, founded upon any incomplete grant or title to lands, viz: concession, warrant, order of survey, requête, or permission to settle, which have been or shall be confirmed under the provisions of this act, shall be deemed, held, and adjudged, to be a relinquishment of title by such applicant to any tract or tracts of land, the titles to which have not been, or shall not be, confirmed according to the provisions of this act.

PLAN FOR ADJUSTING LAND CLAIMS IN LOUISIANA AND MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 8, 1818.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 7, 1818.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 16th of April, 1818, referring to the Secretary of the Treasury the memorials and petitions relative to land claims which have been addressed to that House from the State of Louisiana and Territory of Missouri, and instructing him to report a plan for their final adjustment and settlement, the enclosed draught of a bill for that purpose is respectfully submitted.

In presenting a plan of final adjustment, in which no other description of claims are comprehended than those which are founded upon patents and concessions issued by the several Governments which have, at different times, exercised sovereign jurisdiction over the late province of Louisiana as held by France, the undersigned, Secretary of the Treasury, has proceeded upon the conviction that ample provision has already been made for the adjustment of all claims to lands contemplated by the resolution, founded upon evidence inferior to patents and concessions. He has arrived at this conviction, by a careful examination of the several acts of Congress for ascertaining and adjusting land titles in Louisiana, which have been passed since the 20th day of December, 1803; the period at which possession was taken of that province by the United States. This long series of acts, commencing with the 26th day of March, 1804, and terminating with the 29th day of April, 1816, presents an uninterrupted and uniform course of relaxation in favor of land claimants of every description. This relaxation has generally been effected by comprehending descriptions of cases not recognised by previous acts; by extending the time within which notices of claims, and production of evidence were required, and by giving authority, not only to decide upon such claims, but to revise and confirm such as had been previously rejected. When it is considered that, in all these respects, relaxations have been frequent, and that the evidence upon which the claims have, in the first instance, and in each successive revision, been decided, has, in most cases, been that alone which has been produced by the party in interest, it is extremely improbable that injustice has been done by the rejection of claims which ought to have been confirmed.

It is conceived to be extremely improbable that there should be, at this time, any considerable number of claims entitled to the liberality of the Government, which have not yet been submitted to either of the different tribunals that have, from time to time, been constituted for that purpose. The omission to submit claims to these tribunals for a long series of years, during which frequent opportunities were given to file them, accompanied, invariably, with legislative declarations, that a failure to produce them would bar all claims so far as they depended upon any act of Congress, ought in justice and equity to subject them to the penalty denounced in those declarations. If additional reasons should be considered necessary in support of the foregoing conclusions, they may be found in the consideration that, according to the inevitable course of events, claims which have been long discredited by rejection on the ground of fraud, or of not being provided for by law, invariably pass from the original claimants into the hands of those who have more confidence in their address and influence in conducting them to a successful result.

Considering, then, that the titles to lands in the State of Louisiana, west of the eastern boundary of the island of New Orleans, and in the Missouri Territory, so far as they are derived from, or dependant upon, any act of Congress, are correctly and finally settled, nothing more is necessary than to prescribe a rule by which the validity of titles, not dependant upon the acts of Congress, may be promptly and legally determined. The draught of the bill, which accompanies this report, is intended to effect that object. If it is defective in principle or details, the wisdom of the House, to which it is submitted, will promptly supply such deficiency.

All which is respectfully submitted.

WM. H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury.

The Hon. HENRY CLAY, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be lawful for any person or persons deriving titles to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, within the State of Louisiana, under any patent or concession, legally issued by the authority of the French, British, or Spanish Governments, whilst Louisiana, or any part thereof, was in possession of those Governments, respectively, to present a petition to the judge of the district court of the State of Louisiana, setting forth fully, plainly, and substantially, the nature of his, her, or their title to the lands, tenements, or hereditaments therein described, and particularly stating the date of such patent or concession, its boundaries, the quantity of land contained therein, and by whom issued, and also whether the same has been submitted to the examination of either of the tribunals which have been constituted, by law, for the adjustment of land titles in the State of Louisiana, and praying that the validity of such title may be inquired into and decided by the said court. And the said court is hereby authorized and required to hold and exercise jurisdiction of every petition in conformity with the provisions of this act, and to hear and determine the same according to the evidence which shall be adduced by the petitioner, and on the part of the United States, and in conformity with the principles of justice, and the laws and usages of the Government by which the patent or concession was issued.

And be it further enacted, That, in every petition which shall be presented under the provisions of this act, the petitioner shall therein make his election between a trial by jury and decree by the court, according to the principles and practice of the civil law. In either case the decision shall be final and conclusive, whether it be in favor of or against the petitioner, in all cases where the land described in the petition shall not exceed ——— acres. In all cases exceeding that quantity an appeal may be taken by the petitioner, or the United States, to the Supreme Court of the United States, according to the laws regulating appeals from inferior tribunals to that court, whose decision thereon shall be final and conclusive.

And be it further enacted, That the evidence which has been received by the different tribunals which have been constituted and empowered by law, to receive such evidence, and to report to the Secretary of the Treasury, or to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, upon all claims presented to them respectively, shall be received and admitted as legal testimony, on the trial of any petition in said court, for lands, tenements, or hereditaments, the claims of which have been presented to either of the said tribunals. And, in all cases where the petitioner shall offer no other testimony in support of the title described in the said petition, the court shall proceed to the decision thereof upon such testimony: Provided, That, in all cases where the quantity of land described in the petition shall exceed ——— acres, or where the grant or concession, from which the title is derived, has been antedated, or otherwise fraudulently issued, it shall be lawful for the attorney of the United States, for the district of Louisiana, to offer such evidence as it shall be in his power to produce, which shall be admissible according to the rules of evidence, and the principles of law.

And be it further enacted, That, in all cases where evidence shall be offered by a petitioner, which has not been received by either of the tribunals constituted by law for that purpose, it shall be the duty of the Attorney of the United States, for the district of Louisiana, to cross-examine the witnesses, whether examined in court, or by commission, under the authority thereof. And it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and also of any officer of the United States, who may have possession of the records and evidence of the different tribunals which have been constituted by law for the adjustment of land titles in Louisiana, as held by France, upon the application of any person or persons whose claim to lands has been rejected by such tribunals, or either of them, or by the attorney of the United States for the district of Louisiana, to furnish copies of such evidence, certified under his official signature, with the seal of office thereto annexed, if there be a seal of office.

And be it further enacted, That every claim to lands, tenements, or hereditaments, within the purviews of this act, which shall not be brought, by petition, before the said court within — after the passing of this act, or which, after being brought before the court, shall not be prosecuted to a final decision within — shall be for ever barred in law and equity; and no other action at common law, or proceeding in equity, shall ever thereafter be sustained in any court whatsoever.

And be it further enacted, That the provisions of this act shall extend to the Missouri Territory, and to that part of Louisiana as held by France, which is situate to the eastward of the State of Louisiana, and the same proceedings shall be had, under the same limitations and restrictions as are therein prescribed: Provided, That the district court of the State of Mississippi shall hold and exercise jurisdiction in all cases where the lands claimed are within its jurisdiction. And that the district court, which may be established in the State, which shall hereafter be constituted in the present Territory of Missouri, shall hold and exercise jurisdiction in all cases where the lands claimed shall be within its jurisdiction. And that the district court, which may be established in the State, which hereafter shall be constituted in the present Territory of Alabama, shall hold and exercise jurisdiction in all cases where lands claimed shall be within its jurisdiction. That no claim shall be barred in the said Territories which shall be presented, by petition, to the courts hereby authorized to hold jurisdiction of the same, within — after the organization of said courts, respectively, and which, after being presented, shall be prosecuted to a final decision within —

And be it further enacted, That the claim embraced in the report of the Register and Receiver of the Land Office, for the eastern district of the State of Louisiana, acting as commissioners for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to lands therein, made to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on the 20th day of November, 1816, which are recommended for confirmation under the description of first, second, and third species of class number one; and first, second, and third species of class number two, be, and the same are hereby, confirmed.

And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to cause every tract or parcel of land, the claim to which has been rejected by either of the tribunals heretofore constituted by law for the adjustment of land titles in the State of Louisiana, and in the Missouri Territory, and which have not been subsequently confirmed by law, to be sold at public auction in the same manner, and upon the same terms and conditions of payment, as the other public lands in the United States: Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall extend to that part of the State of Louisiana which is situated to the eastward of the island of New Orleans, nor to any tract or parcel of land provided for in this act until a decision of the proper court shall be had thereon, or until the claim thereto shall be barred in pursuance of its provisions.

LAND CLAIM IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 14, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of John Rice Jones, reported:

That the petitioner states that he holds a legal title to two tracts of land on the Kaskaskia river, in the now State of Illinois, containing three thousand four hundred and eighty-five acres, which Dartuquete, Mayor of New Orleans, and commandant for the King of France for the province of Illinois, granted, in 1734, to Messrs. Boissjolly and Barrois, under whom, through several intermediate purchases, he holds full title to the whole three thousand four hundred and eighty-five acres. That in — William Henry Harrison, then Governor of the Indiana Territory, which included the Illinois, by virtue of authority vested in him by Congress, confirmed the claim of the petitioner to the said three thousand four hundred and eighty-five acres of land; which confirmation, after passing through the ordeal of the first Board of Commissioners, who were appointed to revise the confirmations of the Governor, was by that Board ratified. That the Board, sitting under the act of Congress of 1812, entered his said claim as confirmed; that he was with them during the whole period of their session, until within a very few days of its close, and was not apprized of their intention to revoke their decision of confirmation; but that, about the close of their investigations, and after he had left them, they entered his claim as surreptitious, and for that alleged cause rejected it.

He alleges that his claim was genuine, and that he could have made it manifest to the commissioners if they had notified him that it required any explanations; and that, in consequence of their rejection of it, part of it has lately been sold by the United States, and the whole subject to sale. He prays a trial at law to try the genuineness of his title, or such other relief as may be thought proper.

From the reasoning of the petitioner, the report of the commissioners in his case, to which the committee have had access, and the evidence of the honorable Ninian Edwards, who detailed the facts before the committee, it appears very clear that the petitioner's claim ought not to have been rejected, and that every position taken by the commissioners in support of their opinion is indefensible.

It is fairly inferrible from the report, that the commissioners would not have hesitated to confirm the petitioner's claim, if they had been satisfied it was not a forgery; and it was only because they believed it a forgery that they rejected it. They have given, in detail, the reasons that induced their belief that it was a forgery, every one of which is explained satisfactorily by the argument of the petitioner in his petition, which is abundantly confirmed by Mr. Edwards, the late Governor of Illinois. He detailed facts to the committee, which not only destroyed entirely the reasoning of the commissioners, and showed conclusively that their arguments were fallacious, and the facts on which they predicated them misconceived, but satisfied every member of the committee that there was no ground for a suspicion of forgery.

From the manner in which Governor Edwards formed his opinions, (an examination of the records, and a comparison of them with others of a similar kind,) and the facts and reasons he has given in support of them, there is no room to doubt their correctness.

If the commissioners had a right to adjudicate on the claim of the petitioner, after having been confirmed by the Governor and first Board of Commissioners, (which is not necessary to be decided in this case,) yet it appears very clear that they erred in rejecting it. The commissioners having admitted that the claim had been confirmed by Governor Harrison, and that if it were not a forgery it was entitled to confirmation; and it appearing clearly from the report, the documents, and facts in the case, and the evidence of Governor Edwards, that it is not a forgery, it follows necessarily that it should have been confirmed, and that the petitioner ought not to be injured by its rejection, not having had an opportunity to support its integrity before the commissioners. The committee are, therefore, unanimously of opinion that as much of the claim as has not been sold by the United States, ought to be confirmed to the petitioner, by the release of the claim of the United States to it. And, in regard to that which has been sold, as they think it would be improper to rescind the sale, they are of opinion that the petitioner should receive its value at the time it was sold. To this extent they think he should have relief, and, for that purpose, beg leave to report a bill.

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 14, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition of the heirs of Alexander Montgomery, and a resolution instructing them to inquire into the expediency of authorizing additional evidence in support of the claim of said heirs to land in the Mississippi, derived from the Spanish Government through John Montgomery, report:

That it appears from a deposition of Prosper King, that, before the year 1795, one Solomon Whitley obtained an order of survey from the Spanish Government for four hundred arpents of land in the late Territory, now State of Mississippi; that he sold it to Alexander Montgomery, the ancestor of the petitioners; and that both the said Whitley and Montgomery resided in the said Territory in the year 1795, and afterwards.

It appears, also, from the said deposition, that John Montgomery obtained, before the year 1795, of the Spanish Government, a warrant for three hundred arpents of land in the said Territory, and afterwards sold it to the aforesaid Alexander Montgomery; and that, in 1795, and afterwards, the said John Montgomery was a resident of the said Territory.

An inspection of the report of the commissioners for adjusting land titles in the said Territory furnishes evidence that the aforesaid claims were duly laid before them for confirmation, but rejected, and only because it was not proved that the aforesaid Whitley and John Montgomery resided in the Territory, and actually cultivated the aforesaid tracts of land on the 27th of October, 1795.

By the law of Congress of 1800, under which the commissioners acted, actual residence and cultivation on the 27th of October, 1795, were required to be proved by the claimants to land in the said Territory under incomplete Spanish titles. The commissioners were, therefore, compelled to reject all claims which were not supported by proof of both requisites. And the committee have learned from the honorable Mr. Williams, of the Senate, and Mr. Poindexter, of the House of Representatives, from the State of Mississippi, (the former of whom was one of the aforesaid commissioners,) that the commissioners were not in the habit of recording or receiving any evidence in support of a claim under the first section of the act of 1800, unless both residence and cultivation on the 27th of October, 1795, were proved.

In 1812 a law was passed authorizing the confirmation of all claims that had been rejected by the said Board of Commissioners, in which it should appear, from the report of the commissioners, that the claimants were residents in the said Territory on the 27th of October, 1795, although there was no proof of cultivation on that day.

But as there is no record by the commissioners, in either of the cases now before the committee, of any proof of residence in either case, as required by law, those claims were not embraced by the act of 1812. It appears, therefore, from the whole case, that the claims of the heirs of A. Montgomery were valid under the law of 1800, and came within the spirit of the act of 1812; and that they have not been confirmed, because there was no record by the commissioners or proof of residence, which it is probable was either not permitted to be given, or not recorded if furnished, because all that the law required could not be proved.

If the claimants had proved residence without cultivation, and that proof had been recorded by the commissioners, their claims now before this committee for confirmation would have been confirmed by the act of 1812. That the residence could have been proved, and yet can be proved, appears from the deposition of Prosper King, whose good character is supported by Messrs. Williams and Poindexter, who also stated that the residence of Alexander and John Montgomery and Solomon Whitley, in the aforesaid Territory in 1795, was quite notorious. Hence it would follow that the reason why the residence is not a part of the commissioners' report, is not that there was no such residence, but that the commissioners would not record it, because cultivation, which is dispensed with by the act of 1812, was not also proved.

From this aspect of the case before the committee, they could not hesitate to report in favor of the claimants, were this the first case of the kind that has been presented to Congress, but precedents of relief by Congress in similar cases are not wanting.

As, therefore, the case of the petitioners set forth in their petition, and that which is laid before the committee by resolution, are of a description which the committee think ought to be confirmed, and as others of the same kind have been confirmed, they beg leave to recommend their confirmation, and, for that purpose, report a bill.

[2d SESSION.]

LANDS ALLOTTED TO ENCOURAGE THE CULTIVATION OF THE VINE AND OLIVE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 14, 1818.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 14, 1818.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 10th instant, instructing the Secretary of the Treasury "to lay before the House a statement of the progress that has been made under an act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1817, entitled 'An act to set apart and dispose of certain public lands for the encouragement of the cultivation of the vine and olive;' and whether four townships, of six miles square each, have been laid off and reserved for the purpose aforesaid; and whether any agent, or agents, acting for the French emigrants, have contracted for the said lands, and on what terms; and whether such agent, or agents, are now residing on said land, together with the number of French emigrants that have made settlements on said reservation, and the progress that has been made in the culture of the vine and olive," I have the honor to state that certain persons, acting in the name and behalf of the French emigrants, have presented themselves to this Department, and produced certified copies of the proceedings by which they were constituted agents.

These agents were authorized by this department to explore the Alabama Territory, and make a selection of the lands which were to be reserved, in conformity with the act of Congress before cited.

In pursuance of this authority a selection was made, which has been approved, and the lands reserved are believed to be represented in the several maps which accompany this report. Attached to these maps is a list of the names of French emigrants, who have associated for the purpose of accepting the grant of land contemplated by the said act of Congress, and who were represented by those agents.

It appears, from the papers presented by them, that this map or chart of the reservation has been certified by the chief clerk of the surveyor of the public lands, under whose direction the reservation has been made; but no return has been made by that officer of the surveys to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to which they ought, upon principles of law and of propriety, to have been furnished before they were placed in the hands of others.

Until the official returns are received, no contract can be entered into between the Treasury Department and the agents of the association, if such agents should present themselves duly qualified for that purpose. By referring to the list, it will appear that an allotment upon paper was made among the associates, which is intended to be represented also upon the separate maps. This allotment was sanctioned by this Department, under an impression that the parties, by themselves or agents, were better qualified to make the distribution than the Secretary of the Treasury. Recently, however, information has been received that many of the persons inscribed upon the list have transferred their shares, and followed the banners of the French generals who have made or attempted to make, an establishment on the river Trinity, or engaged in pursuits which exclude the idea, that any other object was contemplated by their joining in the association than sheer speculation.

It is contemplated, with the approbation of the President, to erase all such from the lists of emigrants, who shall not, within a limited period, settle upon and cultivate a certain proportion of the tract of land which may have been, or hereafter shall be, assigned to them, according to the terms and conditions of the contract which shall be tendered to the agents of the association.

It is understood that attempts have been made by a portion of the small number of emigrants who are now upon the reservation, to introduce the cultivation of the vine, and no doubt is entertained of the success of the enterprise. The number who have made settlements is exhibited in the annexed list, marked B.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient servant,

WH. H. CRAWFORD.

HON. HENRY CLAY, Speaker of the House of Representatives.Explanation for the general map of the four townships granted to the French emigrants.

The four townships are designated as follows: Township 18th, range 3, east; township 18th, range 4, east; township 19th, range 4, east; township 20th, range 4, east.

The ranges east begin from the basis meridian that leaves St. Stephens to the west, and the river Mobile to the east. The townships are numbered from the 31st degree of north latitude, which is the line of separation between the United States and the Floridas. A township is a regular square of six miles on each side; consequently, the township 18th begins at the distance of one hundred and two miles north from the 31st degree of north latitude. A township is divided into thirty-six sections of one mile square, or six hundred and forty acres each.

The sections have two numbers, viz: the Roman from I. to XXXVI., in each township, which indicate the numbers of the sections as placed by Government; and the Arabian from one to one hundred and forty, which indicate the numbers of the sections as adopted by the grantees at the drawing of the lots. They have been placed, according to the course pursued by the Government, leaving four sections unnumbered, as explained below.

SEPARATE MAPS. The large figures, 1, 2, 3, &c., indicate the number of sections of the drawing of lots, and correspond with those on the general map.

The small figures, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, &c., indicate the individual allotments, according to the draught. This subdivision of each section has been formed by following the same course pursued by Government, which divides the sections into quarters. The first is always placed at the northeast angle, the second at the northwest angle, the third at the southwest angle, and the fourth at the southeast angle.

The lots A, B, C, &c. have not been distributed, and remain vacant.

On the first township the four sections, not numbered, are reserved for the site of the town; and the lots of twelve, six, and three acres, which lots are to be distributed among the grantees in the following order:

Each grantee having four hundred and eighty acres, will be entitled to twelve acres, besides a city lot one hundred feet front, two hundred feet deep.

Each grantee having three hundred and twenty acres, will be entitled to six acres, besides a city lot one hundred feet front, one hundred feet deep.

Each grantee having two hundred and forty acres, will be entitled to six acres, besides a city lot one hundred feet front, one hundred feet deep.

Each grantee having one hundred and sixty acres, will be entitled to three acres, besides a city lot fifty feet front, one hundred feet deep.

Each grantee having one hundred and twenty acres, will be entitled to three acres, besides a city lot fifty feet front, one hundred feet deep, according to the general list, viz:

APPLICATION TO CHANGE AN ENTRY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 17, 1818.

Mr. POINDEXTER, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of William Stranahan, of the State of Ohio, reported:

That, according to the statement of the petitioner, he entered with the Register of the Land Office, at Zanesville, in Ohio, the southwest quarter of section six, in township two, range two, and paid the first instalment on said quarter section; but that he intended to have entered the southwest quarter of section one, in said township, and, therefore, prays Congress to allow him to change his said entry.

Your committee are of opinion that, as the mistake of the petitioner was not produced by any act of the officers of the Government of the United States, nor by the destruction of the marked lines, by the act of God, which ought to operate injuriously to one, but was solely to be ascribed to the petitioner's own negligence, he is not entitled to the relief which he asks.

The circumstance of his having entered land less valuable than that which he intended to have entered, is his own misfortune; but it constitutes no reasonable ground on which to authorize him to change his location.

Your committee, therefore, recommend that the prayer of the petitioner be rejected.

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 28, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Stephen Henderson and Elliot Hackley, reported:

That the petitioners represent that, in 1809, they purchased, for the consideration of $50,000, of a Mr. Young, two thousand one hundred and sixty-four acres of land in the State of Mississippi, which they say said Young had purchased of three gentlemen named Pannell, to whom, in 1795 and 1797, the said land had been granted by the Spanish Government, in three several tracts, one to each; that they have made extensive and very valuable improvements on the said land; that the claim was regularly filed with the commissioners appointed to adjust land claims, and by them rejected, for want of proof of cultivation and residence in 1795, as required by law; that a part of the land has since been sold by the United States, and the balance, they fear, will be sold. They, therefore, pray Congress to either confirm their claim, or give them a pre-emptive right thereto.

The committee deem it only necessary to remark that there is no evidence to support the most material allegations in the petition, and that if there were, the case made out by the petition will not authorize the relief sought.

It is not proved, that the petitioners purchased from Young, or that Young purchased of the three Messrs. Pannells; and the committee think that the non-production of evidence, to support facts so important in the deduction of title, is strong evidence of the non-existence of the facts themselves.

There is no attempt to prove the sale by Young to the petitioners, and the only evidence tending to prove Young's purchase is the affidavit of Young himself, which, if it was competent, and entitled to full credence, does not prove enough. He states that he purchased of one of the Pannells, consequently he only could have purchased his individual interest, and could have no right to sell more.

But, as already remarked, if the evidence, to prove the derivation of title, were sufficient, the petition does not exhibit a case that would justify the relief prayed for.

The petitioners acknowledge that they purchased in 1809, after the rejection of the claim by the commissioners. The committee, therefore, infer that, if they purchased at all, the contract was a hazardous one, and can present no claims to indulgence. But the petition states that the claim was rejected, because there was no proof of residence in 1795. If this were the only cause of rejection, it would seem proper that the petitioners should at least state that there was such residence, and that it can now be proved, and give some reason for its non-production before the commissioners, before their claim to relief can be even plausible. Their not having done this indicates strongly that it cannot be done. At all events, the committee cannot undertake to recommend relief, until such a case shall have been presented.

Add to this that Mr. Williams, one of the commissioners, who rejected the said claim, states, in his certificate, not that the claim was rejected for want of "proof of evidence in 1795," but "for want of evidence." Viewing the case, therefore, in every attitude in which it is presented, the committee are of opinion that it furnishes no ground for the interposition of Congress.

They, therefore, recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

[2d Session.]

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED TO ADJUST LAND CLAIMS IN THE TERRITORY OF ORLEANS, AND DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 28, 1818.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 24, 1818.

In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 7th instant, requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to "communicate to this House a copy of the instructions given by the Secretary of the Treasury, under the 8th section of the act of Congress, of the 21st of April, 1806, entitled 'An act supplementary to an act entitled an act for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to land within the Territory of Orleans, and district of Louisiana,' to the several Boards of Commissioners appointed under the act of the 2d of March, 1805, for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to land within the aforesaid Territories," I have the honor to transmit the instructions described in the said resolution.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

GENTLEMEN:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 5, 1806.

I have the honor to enclose a copy of an act, supplementary to an act entitled "An act for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to land within the Territory of Orleans, and the district of Louisiana."

The two first sections are intended to give a more liberal effect to the provisions of the former law, on the two points on which it was thought safe to legislate at this time; and the provisions of the fifth section will show that Government wishes to obtain more particular information in relation to the claims of double concessions to grants made to minors generally, and to grants made between the 1st April, 1800, and the 20th December, 1803, before an ultimate decision is made; but the apprehensions of the inhabitants will, in the mean while, be quieted, by perceiving that it is not intended to make any disposition of lands thus claimed, until the necessary information shall have been obtained.

The obstacles which seem to have prevented a more general entry of the claims, not only suggested the propriety of extending the time, but have also induced Congress to facilitate the means of making the entries, by authorizing the Registers to appoint deputies, in the manner provided by the fourth section of the act. To this part of the law I request your immediate attention, by the appointment of a sufficient number of deputies, on whose integrity, discretion, and attachment to the American Government, you may rely; observing, at the same time, that men already living in the county, and enjoying the confidence of their neighbors, will be best calculated to promote the object of the law, by removing the erroneous impressions which may, heretofore, have prevented a compliance with its provisions.

The clause of that section, which relates to the compensation of the deputy Registers, is not very clearly expressed. As it was, however, intended to give, in addition to the usual fees as established by the former law, either an additional fee of one dollar for each claim, to be paid by the parties, or a gross sum of $500, to be paid by the United States, I think it proper to make the option of the payment of $500 in full; and, accordingly, to direct that the contemplated fee of one dollar should not be demanded. You will be pleased to instruct the deputies accordingly, and to state the number appointed, and the sum of money which it will be necessary to place in your hands for the purpose of paying them.

But it is expected that you will appoint no more than will be strictly necessary, and particularly, that you will not appoint any for the county in which you reside. You may, on the 1st of January next, draw in favor of the collector of New Orleans, on the Secretary of the Treasury, for the five hundred dollars additional compensation granted for your services as Register. But for all the other compensations, provided by the sixth and seventh sections of the act, that for the agent excepted, a certificate by the Board, of the days of attendance, mileage, or time of service, as the case may be, will be necessary.

You will perceive by the twelfth section of the act, that General La Fayette is allowed to make locations for tracts of five hundred acres. The forms alluded to in the eighth section will be prepared and sent in due time.

I have, &c.

In a letter to Mr. Thompson, the following paragraph was added:

Mr. Vacher's conduct has induced the President to remove him, and I do not believe that his place will be filled. Mr. Parmelye, late clerk of the Mobile board, is appointed third commissioner, and has sailed from New York for New Orleans. I have also thought proper to discontinue Mr. McGruder, on account of his intemperance, and I do not know whether it will be thought necessary to appoint a successor. I will thank you to seal and deliver the enclosed letters to both those gentlemen.

JOHN W. GURLEY, Esq., Register, New Orleans.

JOHN THOMPSON, Register, Opelousas.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 6, 1806.

Your letter of the 3d of March was received this morning. The commissioners are already authorized, by law, to demand and obtain copies of all the papers which may exist in any of the public offices, and, on application to James Brown, Esq., agent of the United States for land claims at New Orleans, you may obtain such copies as you want.

In the case of conflicting, incomplete titles, it does not appear to me that the date of filing the claims with the Register ought to have any effect; the date of the incomplete title ought certainly to govern. But it will be still better to have the lands surveyed, in conformity with what must have been the intention of the Government who made the grant; and that may be fairly presumed to have been, that the division lines running back from the bayous should be perpendicular to the course of the bayous in that place.

In order to accommodate you, I have directed the collector of New Orleans to purchase your bills, drawn on the Secretary of the Treasury, for a sum not exceeding three thousand dollars. You will draw for such portions of this sum, from time to time, as you may find necessary, and pay out of the same your own compensation as it becomes due; the contingencies of the Board, which you have mentioned, but not exceeding the quarterly amount which you stated; the cost of stationery, and the salaries of the clerk and the translator. For every payment which you may make, you will take duplicate receipts, and state quarterly, on the last days of June, October, December, and March, in each year, a general account, which you will transmit to this Department, together with the vouchers, consisting of one set of the receipts in support thereof. Your bills, though drawn on the Treasury, will be immediately purchased by the collector at New Orleans. They will, therefore, serve your purpose, whether you send to New Orleans, or sell the bills at Opelousas, as well as bills drawn on him, and this mode will better comport with Treasury regulations.

If a further credit beyond the three thousand dollars shall be wanted, you will please to state it in time to come.

I have, &c.

JOHN THOMPSON, Esq., Register, Land Office, Opelousas.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 7, 1806.

I enclose a copy of the act, supplementary to an act entitled "An act for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to land within the Territory of Orleans, and the district of Louisiana."

The first, second, seventh, and eighth sections, are the only ones which relate to land claims in the Territory of Louisiana.

The eighth section having made it the duty of the commissioners to conform to the instructions which may be transmitted to them by the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approbation of the President of the United States, you will please to state from time to time, whether any principle be adopted by them which, from its nature and consequences, seems to call for any such instructions. In the mean while I enclose a copy of my letter of this day to the Board.

I embrace this opportunity to call your attention to the lead mines, and to request that you will, in conformity with the sixth section of the act of March 2, 1805, hasten to lay the subject before the commissioners, in order that they may make, as soon as possible, the special report contemplated by the said section.

I have, &c.

WM. C. CARR, Esq., Agent U. S. &c. &c., St. Louis.

GENTLEMEN:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 7, 1806.

I have the honor to enclose a copy of the act supplementary to an act entitled "An act for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to land within the Territory of Orleans, and the district of Louisiana."

The first, second, seventh, and eighth sections, are the only ones which relate to land claims in the Territory of Louisiana.

The first section defines the cases in which permission to settle shall be presumed, although the evidence of such permission cannot be produced.

The second section is intended to confirm, in certain instances, the claims arising from orders of survey, or other informal concessions granted to minors.

The seventh section was inserted in consequence of your communication, and of the New Madrid representation.

The forms alluded to in the eighth section will be prepared and transmitted in due time.

I embrace this opportunity, under the authority vested by the same section, to confirm the instructions contained in my letter of the 26th March, 1806, (except so far as they become necessarily modified by the effect of the first section of the enclosed act,) and particularly to repeat that you must adhere to the letter of the law, and not confirm any claims not strictly embraced by its provisions.

Although the time for receiving claims has not been extended in Louisiana, it must be understood that all claims which had been presented in time, but were not accepted for want of an accompanying survey, must be considered as having been duly presented, and be acted upon accordingly.

I have, &c.

J. B. C. LUCAS,

C. B. PENROSE,

J. L. DONALDSON, ESQs.,

} Commissioners for Land Claims, St. Louis.

GENTLEMEN:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, September 8, 1806.

I have the honor to enclose instructions prepared in conformity with the eighth section of the act entitled an act supplementary to an act entitled "An act for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to land within the Territory of Orleans, and the district of Louisiana," which have been approved by the President of the United States, and to which you will, therefore, be pleased to conform in your several proceedings and decisions.

The forms of reports and transcripts will be transmitted in the course of next month. If, in your opinion, the business of the Board cannot be completed before the close of this year, you will be pleased to state in time to me, in order that Congress may make such additional provision as they will think necessary.

I am, &c.

JOHN B. C. LUCAS,

CLEMENT B. PENROSE,

JAMES L. DONALDSON, ESQs.,

} Commissioners, &c., St. Louis.

Instructions for the commissioners appointed to ascertain the titles and claims to lands in the Territory of Louisiana, prepared by the Secretary of the Treasury, in conformity with the eighth section of the act entitled an act supplementary to an act entitled "An act for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to land within the Territory of Orleans, and the district of Louisiana," and approved by the President of the United States.

1. All claims derived from any grant, concession, or order of survey, or other species of title, whether complete or incomplete, bearing date subsequent to the first day of October, 1800, must be rejected, unless they be embraced by the second section of the act of 2d March, 1805.

2. No titles shall be considered as complete but legal French or Spanish grants, made and completed before the 1st day of October, 1800, regularly signed and issued prior to that date, by the Governor General or Intendant of the province of Louisiana, residing at New Orleans, and duly recorded at the proper office in New Orleans.

3. No claims, other than those derived from complete titles, shall be admitted, unless the lands claimed were actually inhabited and cultivated on the 1st day of October, 1800; and by or for the use of the persons claiming the same, if such persons claimed by virtue of the first section of the act of the 2d of March, 1805; and, on the 20th day of December, 1803, and by the persons claiming the same, if such persons claimed by virtue of the second section of the said act.

4. All claims founded on the first section of the said act must be derived from a written order, whether known by the name of concession or any other denomination, issued by an officer duly authorized by the Spanish laws for the time being to issue the same, and directing a tract of land to be surveyed for the party.

5. In every case where the tract thus claimed shall contain a greater quantity of land than was generally allowed to actual settlers and their families, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government, the claim shall be rejected, unless a duly authenticated copy of the ordinance, authorizing the officers to grant such greater quantity of land, shall have been produced and deposited with the commissioners.

6. All claims presented under the first section of the act above mentioned must be rejected, unless the concession, order, or warrant of survey shall have been duly registered in the books, records, or minutes kept by the Spanish officer or officers for that purpose.

7. If the officer, issuing such concessions, orders, or warrants of survey, shall have kept any books, records, or minutes for the registering or noting of the concessions, orders, or warrants of survey issued by him, any concession, order, or warrant of survey not registered or noted in its proper order, according to its date, in such books, records, or minutes, shall be considered prima facie as surreptitious or antedated, and the burden of the proof of its date and validity shall fall on the claimant.

8. If no books, records, nor minutes have been kept, in which the concessions, orders, or warrants of survey have been entered at the time when the same were issued, and in their proper order according to their dates, the burden of the proof of the date and validity of any such concession, warrant, or order of survey shall fall on the claimant, whenever the agent of the United States shall object to the same on the ground of its being antedated or otherwise fraudulent.

9. Whenever it shall appear in evidence that the actual survey of any such concession, order, or warrant was made subsequent to the 1st day of October, 1800, and the date assigned to such actual survey, either on the plat or return thereof, or on the books or records of the officer acting as Surveyor General under the Spanish Government, shall be prior to the said 1st day of October, 1800, the concession, order, or warrant shall be rejected as fraudulent; and the above mentioned officer, acting as Surveyor General, and also every other former Spanish officer, as well as every other witness, shall be obliged to answer every question put to him by the agent of the United States respecting any claim, the validity of which is disputed by the said agent.

10. No tract of land shall, in any instance, be granted under the second section of the act of the 2d of March 1805, to a person claiming land under the first section of the act, or under a complete French or Spanish grant.

11. The commissioners will consider the opinion of the Attorney General of the United States, of the 12th of March, 1806, transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury in his letter of 26th March last, as part of these instructions; and they will revise and correct, in conformity with the said instructions and opinion, every former decision of theirs which may be inconsistent with or contradictory to either.

GENTLEMEN:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 14, 1806.

In conformity with the provisions of the eighth section of the act of 21st April last, the following rules are prescribed in relation to the forms of the transcript of your decisions in favor of claimants for land in the Territory of Louisiana, which you are directed by law to transmit to the Secretary of the Treasury:

1. The decisions to be arranged according to the districts into which that part of the former province of Louisiana, now forming the Territory of Louisiana, was divided at the time when the United States obtained possession of the same; so that the decisions in relation to claims for land in one district, shall not be blended with those for land situated in another district; but there shall be, in fact, a distinct transcript of decisions for each district.

2. The transcript of decisions for each district to be arranged under three general heads, viz: 1st. Complete titles derived from French or Spanish grants. 2d. Claims derived from warrants or orders of survey, and embraced by the first section of the act of 2d March, 1805. 3d. Claims derived from actual settlement, and embraced by the second section of the above mentioned act. Each of the two first classes to be subdivided into and arranged under two distinct heads, viz: 1st. Claims derived from the French Government, and, 2dly, claims derived from the Spanish Government; and the last class to be also arranged under two heads, viz: 1st. Cases in which evidence of permission to settle has been produced. 2dly. Cases embraced by the first section of the act of 21st April, 1806, which will make, in the whole, six distinct classes.

3. To the transcript of decisions for each district, a recapitulation or register must be prefixed, arranged also under the six above mentioned classes, and in conformity to the forms of A, B, C, D, E, F, herein enclosed. Each class may, by the commissioners, be subdivided into such subordinate classes as they may think convenient, and the decisions for each class or subdivision, to be in the said recapitulation or register arranged alphabetically by the names of the persons in whose favor the decisions shall have been made. In the last column of the said recapitulation or register, entitled general remarks, the following particulars must be noted, in addition to such other references as the commissioners may think proper to insert, viz: 1st. Whether the claim was opposed by the agent of the United States, which may be expressed by the single word "opposed." 2dly. Whether the decision was not unanimous, which may be expressed merely by inserting the surnames of the commissioners in favor of the decision, (and it will thence follow that whenever in that last column the word opposed does not appear, the claim was not opposed by the agent, and whenever the name of neither commissioner is inserted, the decisions were unanimous.) 3dly. Reference to the ordinance authorizing the officers to grant the quantity of land allowed, whenever it shall exceed the quantity generally allowed, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government; in which case a copy of such ordinance must accompany the transcript of decisions. 4thly. Whether the claim be confirmed, under the second section of the act of 21st April last, which may be expressed by the words ten years' possession.

4. No other rule can be given for the form in which the decisions themselves should be expressed, than to say generally, that they must, as concisely as practicable, include the particulars necessary to enable Congress to understand the principles on which they are founded, and the leading facts to which the principles apply in each decision. The enclosed forms of recapitulation or register, and the immediately preceding rule, show the circumstances which are believed, with the imperfect knowledge this Department has of the subject, to be most important. To these must be added the conditions on which grants, orders, or warrants of survey, and every species of concession were made or granted, and whether the same have been fulfilled. But the commissioners will materially assist Congress in forming a correct determination, by prefixing to the transcript a general report, stating the various secondary classes into which the above mentioned general classes may be divided, and the general principles which have governed the Board in their decisions respecting each subdivision. This will be more particularly important, as it relates to claims which were opposed by the agent, or on which the commissioners were not unanimous.

5. It will be observed that, in the forms of C and D there is a column for inserting the situation of the land as described in the order or warrant of survey; for, although it is understood that there are some concessions which do not describe the land, these are not considered as embraced by the first section of the act of 2d March, 1805. Should any such, however, from any particular and unforeseen circumstance, be confirmed by the commissioners, they must be distinctly reported and arranged as subordinate classes of the classes C, D, both in the transcript of decisions, and in the register or recapitulation.

6. As far as circumstances will permit, the same arrangement in the division of classes, and the same forms of recapitulation or register, must be followed in the report of claims, rejected as in the transcript of decisions in favor of claims, observing briefly to note in the column of general remarks the cause why rejected.

Of the special report relative to the lead mines, no form can be prescribed; but, in stating the claims to the same, whether confirmed or rejected, a reference should be affixed to the place where that claim is to be found, either in the transcript of favorable decisions, or in the report of claims rejected.

I am, &c.

JOHN B. LUCAS,
CLEMENT B. PENROSE, } Commissioners, &c., St. Louis.
JAMES L. DONALDSON, }

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 17, 1806.

Herewith you will receive copies of a letter written on the 14th instant to the Land Commissioners at St. Louis, and of the forms accompanying the same. You will perceive that they are intended to compel, as far as practicable, a compliance with the provisions of the laws, and with the instructions heretofore transmitted.

I rely on the continuance of your faithful endeavors in promoting that object, and bringing to view every attempt of an improper nature. I beg leave also to call your particular attention to the strong presumptions of fraud arising from the appearance of the records of surveys lately delivered to Mr. Bent.

I am, &c.

WM. C. CARR, Esq., Agent United States, St. Louis.

GENTLEMEN:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 13, 1807.

I have duly received your letter signed by Messrs. Lucas and Penrose, in which you advise me that the instructions sent by this Department would occasion a revision of a great part of the decisions of the board, and suggested the propriety of suspending your operations for the present, as a bill is now before Congress, which will probably make considerable alterations in the provisions heretofore enacted. I approve your suggestion, and request that you will suspend your decisions, though you may proceed to receive evidence until you shall receive a copy of the intended alterations, and such further instructions as those may render necessary.

This letter will be delivered to Mr. Bates, now one of your board, he having been appointed Recorder in lieu of Mr. Donaldson.

I have, &c.

The COMMISSIONERS on Land Claims for Louisiana, St. Louis.

You may draw on me on account of your compensation as commissioners, viz: Mr. Lucas for six hundred dollars, and Mr. Penrose for two hundred dollars, which will leave a balance of four hundred dollars, to be paid hereafter to each. Of the time when you may draw for that balance, you may hereafter be advised.

GRANT TO A FRENCH EMIGRANT IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 30, 1818.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of John B. Regnier, reported:

That, about the year 1790, a company of French emigrants settled at and near a place in the now State of Ohio, on the bank of the river Ohio, which they called Galliopolis. They had purchased of a company who styled themselves the "Scioto Company" a large tract of land on the Ohio, including the said little village, which they built under the expectation of enjoying without molestation all the benefits and advantages which could be derived from the proprietorship of the land thus purchased. It is believed that the sale was made to most of the settlers in France, and that they migrated to America to enjoy, on the land purchased, a peaceful home. But they had not been living long at their new village before they ascertained that the "Scioto Company" was self-created, and had no right to the land it had sold to them. In this condition, in a strange country, destitute of a home, and without the means of purchasing one, having expended their all in the purchase and improvement of the tract on the Ohio, they appealed to the generosity and magnanimity of Congress. Congress, in consideration of their peculiar condition, without hesitation, granted them, in 1795, twenty-four thousand acres of land on the Ohio, and directed the surveyor to subdivide it into smaller tracts, that the individuals composing the company who resided at Galliopolis in 1795, might, by lottery, draw to each one tract. This was done, as far as practicable, before 1798, when it was ascertained that eight of the original settlers were not at Galliopolis in 1795, and did not return there soon enough to derive any benefit from the law of 1795: for their relief a law was passed in 1798, giving to each one hundred and fifty acres of land. It seems, from the statements of the petitioner, (all of which are confirmed by the certificates of respectable men,) that he was one of the original purchasers: that he settled at Galliopolis in 1790, under the purchase, but was absent in 1795 and in 1798, so that he was not benefited by either of the laws of those dates. He states that he is the only one of the French emigrants, concerned in the aforesaid purchase, who has not received from the United States the evidence of their generosity given by the two acts of 1795 and 1798; and that he is yet living in the State of Ohio, and is poor. Under these circumstances, and for these reasons, he asks to be placed in the situation of the other emigrants.

The committee are of opinion that the petitioner should now receive some relief, but they think it would be supererogation to superadd to the foregoing statement of facts other reasons and arguments to sustain their report. They have consulted Mr. Barber, the member of Ohio from the district including Marietta, where the petitioner lives, in regard to the quantity of vacant land in the Marietta district, which would be worth as much as the quantity which the other emigrants received from the Government, who thinks that one hundred and sixty acres would not be too much. The committee, therefore, think that the petitioner should receive one hundred and sixty acres of land in the said district; and, for that purpose, they report a bill.

FURTHER RELIEF TO PURCHASERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 6, 1819.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 4, 1819.

In obedience to a resolution of the 24th ultimo, directing the Secretary of the Treasury "to lay before the Senate information relative to the effect of an act to suspend, for a limited time, the sale or forfeiture of lands of the 18th of April last, upon the receipts into the Treasury, and the probable effect by continuing in force the act aforesaid for one year, with a condition that, if the purchasers complete their payments on or before the expiration of the period aforesaid, interest shall only be required on the instalments due from the time that they became due until paid." I have the honor to submit the enclosed statement of the receipts at the different land offices in the States of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, during the three first quarters of the years 1817 and 1818, by which it appears that the receipts in the latter period have exceeded those of the former about three hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

It is presumed that the relinquishment of interest, proposed by the resolution, would increase the amount of payments on account of public lands during the continuance of the act in question. It may be proper, however, to observe, that the benefit would be confined to the purchasers, who are best able to submit to a rigid exaction of the conditions upon which the purchase was made. The real needy and necessitous purchaser would derive the least benefit from such an act of liberality. It is possible, also, that those who have heretofore paid the accumulated interest which is now proposed to be relinquished, may complain that the same measure of liberality has not been meted to them that is now extended to others.

If, however, it is considered important to increase the payments, on account of the public lands, during the present year, to the greatest possible amount, the proposed measure is better calculated to effect that object than any other which can be devised, except that of leaving the existing laws to their ordinary operation.

Considering the derangement of the currency in the section of the Union where these payments are to be made, justice and sound policy require that relief in some form should be granted.

I remain, with sentiments of respect, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD.

APPLICATION TO CHANGE THE LOCATION OF A REVOLUTIONARY BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 8, 1819.

Mr. MORROW, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of John Buchanan and Hugh Milling, reported:

That it appears that the petitioners, being officers in the continental army during the revolutionary war, have had the bounty lands, to which they were entitled in consequence of their service, located within the tract set apart by the United States for satisfying the bounty lands to the officers and soldiers of that army, and that patents were granted to the petitioners for their respective proportion thereof on the 22d day of May, 1806. They represent the land thus granted as not being valuable to them, on account of its remote situation from their residence, they being inhabitants within the State of South Carolina, and pray that they may be authorized to reconvey the same to the United States in exchange for a like quantity of public lands in the Alabama Territory. The committee, on a review of the laws regulating the grants of bounty lands, observe that locations have been always made under general regulations. That the claimants have had the right of selecting the tracts, to which they were entitled from extensive territory of vacant lands; and that, in no instance heretofore, has a claimant been permitted to change his location, however improvidently he may have exercised his right of selection, or ineligible the tract of his choice may be in point of soil or situation. That a relief in the present instance would most probably encourage numerous applications for similar relief in cases not to be distinguished from the present application. A precedent being once established, a course of impartial justice would substitute particular provisions and individual grants in place of the general and regular system now in force, and heretofore pursued. The committee recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the petitioners have leave to withdraw their petition.

CLAIM TO LAND IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 13, 1819.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Nicholas Jarret, reported:

That Michael Jones and Shadrac Bond transmitted, on the 29th of March, 1815, a list of unconfirmed and unlocated claims to land in the then Territory, now State of Illinois, among which was the claim of the petitioner. By the 4th section of an act, of 1816, all the claims contained in the said district were confirmed, and the claimants given until the 1st day of October, 1816, to register them. It appears that the list was not precisely identified by the said act, but called the list transmitted on the 29th day of March, 1815, instead of the 29th day of November, 1815; whether it was owing to this incorrect description of the class of cases intended to be confirmed, or to other circumstances, that the petitioner's claim was not registered within the required time, is not ascertained; but he has lost the benefit of the aforesaid act of 1816, by failing to register his claim within the period given for that purpose, and now asks Congress to extend the time, or give him the privilege of locating the claim on vacant lands in Illinois.

The material facts of the petition being sufficiently supported, the committee think that the petitioner should have the privilege asked for, and for that purpose report a bill.

CLAIM TO SIX ISLANDS AT THE MOUTH OF DETROIT RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 15, 1819.

Mr. MORROW, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Alexander Macomb, reported:

That the petitioner claims, as his property, six small islands, situated in the mouth of Detroit river, in virtue of a grant or deed of gift made at Detroit in the year 1781, by the chiefs and principal leaders of the Potawatomie nation of Indians, with the approbation and consent of the British commandant at that post. The said deed of gift was made to Alexander and William Macomb—the latter of whom became the sole proprietor, by agreement with the former, and appears to have exercised the right of ownership, by leasing one of the islands; and, after his decease, the same island was leased out as a part of his property, by his executors, for successive periods up to the year 1806. The chain of title from the original grantees to the petitioner appears to be regular, by attested documents accompanying the petition.

It also appears that, under the laws for adjusting the titles and claims to land in the Michigan Territory, a notice of claim to one only of these islands, viz: Stony island, was filed with the Register of the Land Office. If a grant from an Indian tribe to an individual could be considered valid to convey a title, the claim to five of these islands has, from the neglect to give notice of the claim, become barred under the express provisions of the statute. It is, however, believed the United States have, in no instance, recognised an Indian grant, whether made under the British or American Government, as valid to give title, such grants being prohibited by the laws and regulations of both. The claim of the petitioner must rest on the evidence of possession, occupancy, and improvement, which the law requires for a confirmation of claim, and none such has been adduced by him, except as to Stony island, which appears to have been occupied and improved as a stone quarry and for burning lime, from the year 1787 to the year 1806 or 1807. The claim to this island was rejected by the Board of Commissioners, but no reason assigned as the ground of their opinion. If the continued occupancy of this island for many successive years, for the purpose of working a stone quarry thereon, and for the purpose of manufacturing of lime, may be considered an occupancy and improvement in view of the law, the petitioner ought to be confirmed in his claim to that island. Therefore, the committee respectfully submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner, so far as it relates to Stony island, ought to be granted.

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 18, 1819.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Mackay, reported:

That the petitioner claims a tract of four hundred arpents of land in the Territory of Missouri, by virtue or pretence of an alleged Spanish concession, dated the 31st of May, 1797, and issued and signed, as the petitioner alleges, by Zenon Trudeau, the Spanish Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana. The petitioner filed the papers, relating to his claim of record, in the office of the Recorder of Land Titles, on the 23d of July, 1806.

On the 31st day of July, 1807, the petitioner submitted his claim to the Board of Commissioners for settling land claims in Louisiana, who, having examined the same, and the evidence in support thereof, rejected the same, alleging the following reasons: 1st. Because the name of the applicant was written on an erasure in the requête, or concession. 2dly. Because his place of residence was also written on an erasure. 3dly. Because the quantity, situation, and quality of the land demanded, were also written on erasure. 4thly. That, in consequence of these erasures, the said claim was fraudulent, and of no validity.

The petitioner states that the above charges, as spread on the records or minutes of the commissioners, are totally false, and prays that the requête and decree of concession may be examined, and that his said concession of four hundred arpents may be confirmed to him.

The committee have examined the said concession, or instrument of writing, and are unable to discover all the erasures mentioned by the commissioners; nor can it pronounce, with certainty, that it contains any erasure so material as to furnish sufficient evidence of fraud, although there is such an appearance of erasure in one or two places, as would excite suspicion; and, therefore, in the opinion of the committee, justify a further inquiry, if the Board of Commissioners had not already pronounced its judgment. But the commissioners having heard and decided on the character of this claim, and there being no additional evidence before the committee, they cannot believe themselves qualified to reverse that decision; nor is the petitioner entitled to a re-hearing, upon any principle which would not equally apply to all the numerous claims heretofore rejected by the commissioners as fraudulent. If the petitioner shall be able, hereafter, to file the supplemental evidence that he alleges he will be able to file, the committee have no doubt Congress will interpose. But the committee cannot do it in the absence of such evidence. The committee, therefore, submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 18, 1819.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the report of the Recorder of Land Titles of the Territory of Missouri, made in obedience to the act of Congress of the 20th of April, 1818, for the relief of James Mackay, of the said Territory, have had the same, together with all the documents thereto appertaining, under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

The memorial of James Mackay, presented to Congress during the last session, states that, by a decree of concession of the 1st of February, 1798, the Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana (which is now the Territory of Missouri) granted to one James McDaniel one thousand eight hundred arpents of land in the said Territory; that, on the 3d of January, 1802, the said McDaniel conveyed his interest to the said one thousand eight hundred arpents of land to him the said Mackay; that it was surveyed in 1802, and a certificate of the survey was recorded, regularly, on the 15th of March, 1803; that, as soon as commissioners were appointed to adjust land claims in the said Territory, the said Mackay entered with the Recorder of Land Titles therein notice of his claim to the said land, and at the same time delivered to him the decree of concession therefor; that, about two years afterwards, he applied to the Board of Commissioners for the documents in relation to his title, which he had thus deposited, and which had, or ought to have been, before that time recorded, but that they refused to give them to him; that, some time after their refusal, having heard that an original paper had been stolen out of the Recorder's office, and had been offered for sale at Kaskaskia, he renewed his application for his original papers, when he ascertained that his plat and certificate only had been recorded; and demanding why his concession was not also recorded, was informed that it could not be found; that, after the act of 1807 was passed, which authorized the commissioners to confirm all claims not exceeding a league square, conformably to the laws and usages of Spain, which comprised his case, he applied to the Board of Commissioners for its confirmation, and supposing that the Recorder's receipt for his concession would be by them received as sufficient evidence of its existence, he exhibited it to them in support of his claim; but that, to his surprise, he found that the commissioners would not receive it as evidence, whereby he lost the benefit of the aforesaid act of 1807 and of the act of 1814; that, in the spring of the year 1817, he received an anonymous letter enclosing his original concession; which letter accompanies this report, and which states that the concession had been purloined; and that, on the reception of the letter, he exhibited the concession to the Recorder, who informed him that his powers, under the act of 1814, having expired, he could not confirm his claim.

This petition was referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims, during the last session, and the foregoing facts having been satisfactorily supported, a bill was, by that committee, reported, and became a law on the 20th April last, authorizing the said Mackay to file in the Recorder's office the aforesaid concession, and requiring the Recorder to take whatever evidence might be offered on the subject of the claim, and report the substance of it, with his opinion thereon, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to be by him laid before Congress, during the present session, for their decision.

The report of the Recorder, made in obedience to the above act, and referred to the committee, states the foregoing facts as disclosed in the petition, and subjoins the evidence submitted to the Recorder in support of them. This evidence is the same on which the committee decided at the last session, with the addition of the testimony of witnesses of good character, not examined before, in support of the genuineness of the concession.

In addition to the evidence in support of the claim, the Recorder has thought proper to state, and refer to in his report, a writing (document D) which appears to have been intended to convey a suspicion that the concession was fraudulent or antedated.

With respect to this suggestion, derived from this source, the committee are bound to discard it as having no force or intrinsic weight, for the following reasons:

1st. Taking it in its strongest attitude, it is but the vaguest kind of hearsay evidence, and is, therefore, inadmissible.

2d. If it were competent and creditable evidence abstractedly, it does not apply with any precision or certainty to this case, because it refers to other facts, dates, and persons, without any definite application. And,

3d. It is inferrible, from the circumstance that the Recorder had it in his power to take the evidence alluded to in the document marked D, and did not, or would not, avail himself of many opportunities furnished for that purpose; that the facts could not be proved, or, if proved, that they would not affect the case, either because they would not apply to it, or because the witness was not credible, or his testimony could be destroyed by countervailing evidence.

The opinions of the committee, in regard to this suggestion of fraud, are fortified by the singular fact that, even the testimony of Hammond, the author of the document referred to, was not taken, or attempted to be taken. The committee, for those reasons, and others which they might give, if necessary, think they are warranted in discarding the suggestion of antedate or fraud; and that it should not impair or diminish the effect of the evidence in support of the genuineness of the claim, which they think is amply sufficient, without countervailing evidence, which is not furnished, and the possibility of the existence of which, it is not their privilege, much less their duty, to presume.

Having stated the evidence, the Recorder subjoins his opinion upon it, which is, that Mackay's claim ought not to be confirmed, for the following reasons:

1st. Because there is no Spanish registry of the order of survey, and that it is in cases where no distrust has been entertained, that Government has forbore to demand this authentic evidence. And,

2d. Because the plat of survey is in the name of Mackay, and not McDaniel, the original grantee.

In answer to the first objection, it would be sufficient to say, that if it be conceded that the Recorder is right in his abstract position, he has failed to show that it can apply to this case; nor does it appear that it can, there being no evidence or fact in the case, except in support of the genuineness of the claim. The distrust spoken of, and which the Recorder acknowledges is a prerequisite to the requisition of registration, does not, cannot, consistently with the established rules of evidence, and common data of opinion, exist; consequently, in this case the registry is not necessary, according to the Recorder's own opinion.

It is due to the Recorder to say, that it is quite probable that his personal knowledge of facts, not before the committee, authorized his distrust; but he should not have forgotten that, the case furnishing no evidence of fraud, Congress would not be at liberty to entertain the same suspicions. This committee cannot, and, therefore, must say that the first argument of the Recorder, as applied to the case before them, is a felo de se. But it should be added, that, if the Recorder's doctrine were applicable to the case under consideration, the committee are not able to admit that it is orthodox. They have not been able to find any law or usage, either Spanish, French, or American, which requires registration as essential to the validity of a concession, or certificate of survey. Nor can they concur with the Recorder in his opinion, that the mere registry is the only authentic, or even the most authentic evidence. The concurrent and positive evidence of respectable witnesses, in support of all the facts necessary to constitute a good and valid claim, is not only sufficiently authentic, but as authentic, and the committee think much more so, than the mere registration of the Spanish provincial Government but a short time anterior to the sale of the province to the United States.

The committee think the second position taken by the Recorder, in opposition to Mackay's claim, equally indefensible. The facts of the case, and the law applicable to them, will support the committee in this opinion. The opinion of the Recorder, in regard to legal possession, is, they think, entirely erroneous. Nothing can be found, it is believed, in the Spanish or American laws or usages, that will justify the conclusion that actual survey was necessary to give a legal possession to the grantee of the land conceded, or to enable him to sell it to another, in whose name, of course, the survey would be made; and certainly actual survey could not be necessary to give legal possession, when the concession was special, or when the grantee was in the occupancy of the land. That McDaniel was in the possession of the land, when he sold it to Mackay, is abundantly proved by the conveyance, and the certificate of survey. (Vide documents B and C.)

It is undeniable that a naked possession would have given to McDaniel a settlement right under the laws of the United States, and must, therefore, be deemed legal possession. A fortiori occupancy must be deemed a legal possession, when sanctioned by a special decree of concession. It may further be observed, that, under the Spanish laws, mere floating concessions were subjects of sale and transfer. It would, therefore, seem absurd to say that actual possession, or a descriptive specification in the concession, should preclude the original grantee from selling that which he would, by Spanish law and usage, have a right to sell without them.

The committee think that the alleged necessity for actual survey, to authorize sale, is inconsistent with principle, and analogy, and law, and ought not to be required.

In the various acts of Congress, passed for the adjustment of land titles in Missouri, there is nothing that will warrant the Recorder's construction.

By the act of 1806, the plat of survey called for by the act of 1805, is dispensed with, in relation to lands not surveyed by the proper officer, prior to the 20th December, 1803, under the Spanish Government. The act of 1807, which directs the commissioners to conform to the Spanish laws and customs in their decisions, says nothing about a survey by the original grantee; and it is believed that as no such survey, under this act, was necessary, no plat of survey is required.

By the act of 1814, it is required that the claimant, not the original grantee, should have his concession or claim surveyed prior to the 10th of March, 1804. The law, therefore, seems to require no actual survey in the name of, or by the original grantee. If it be made by the vendee, or the legal representatives of the grantee, before the 10th day of March, 1804, it is good, unless there is evidence of fraud or collusion.

But, were it admitted that a survey by the original grantee was necessary to give him a valid claim, it would not be very irrational to infer that, in this case, it exists. It will be seen, by reference to the conveyance to Mackay, (marked C,) that the power of attorney contained in it authorized Mackay to do every act in relation to, and completion of, the claim, which McDaniel could have done, or ought to have done. If, therefore, it was necessary that the survey should be made by, and in the name of, McDaniel, before the sale by him to Mackay could be operative and effectual, would it not follow that McDaniel was represented by Mackay quoad the survey? and that, virtually, the survey was made by him under the legal maxim, "qui facit per alium, facit per se." And thus, according to the reasoning of the Recorder, the legal estate would be vested in McDaniel; and the conveyance by him to Mackay would give to the latter an equity, which any court of chancery would enforce, by compelling the legal title.

The Recorder observes that McDaniel never made a legal entry of his claim. To this, it is only necessary to reply that, under the acts of Congress requiring the claimant to make an entry of his claim within a certain time, McDaniel had no right to make it; because he had no claim, having sold to Mackay, who was, therefore, the only claimant. Mackay alone had the right to make this entry.

As to the special circumstances alluded to by the Recorder, it is proper to remark that, so far as they can operate on the case, they are in favor of Mackay. By referring to the petition and concession, (document A,) it will be seen that the decree grants, as was usual, an absolute allodial property in the land. It imposes no condition, nor does the petitioner offer any.

To strengthen his argument the Recorder refers to the case of Rutgers, under Dana, and many others, probably to the amount of fifty thousand arpents, as analogous to the present case, and says that they were rejected on the grounds taken by the Recorder against this case. If this argument were an apposite one, and the analogy spoken of existed, it would be necessary for the Recorder to show that his decisions referred to were just and legal; and the committee think this would be difficult. But it does not appear that the alleged analogy does exist. The Recorder shows no analogy; we have only his opinion that it exists; and, on the other side, have the positive statements of the petitioner that it does not exist. The committee cannot, therefore, reason on the predication of this analogy until there is other and stronger evidence of its existence. And if the analogy were made clearly to appear, and it should thereby be rendered probable that many other cases of the same kind, even to the amount of fifty thousand arpents, should afterwards be brought before Congress for confirmation, it could not be proper to reject this case for such reasons. For, if this claim ought to be confirmed, all others of the same kind should be; and the number cannot alter the justice of the claims; but, by confirming this claim, Congress will establish no general rule which can operate as a precedent. The case is entirely insular, and stands, as will every other, upon its own peculiar merits. Besides, the objection comes too late; because, by passing the law of last session, already referred to, Congress certainly overruled the objections taken by the Recorder: for the evidence before him was before them; and it would be unjust to suppose that they would have passed the law, if they had thought that those objections were tenable. To suppose so, would be directly charging Congress with doing a nugatory act knowingly, and which would unnecessarily subject the claimant, the officers of Government, and Congress, to much trouble, inconvenience, and expense. We can, therefore, only infer that Congress intended to confirm the claim at the present session, unless the Recorder should be able to exhibit additional evidence proving its fraudulency. Upon these grounds, therefore, the case is already decided; and there is no good reason to revoke that decision.

And, besides, it does not appear to be the province of this committee, when called on to decide a solitary case before them, to reject the claim, although good in itself, merely because it is alleged that, if this case should be confirmed, there are many others which should be; and that, therefore, it should either be rejected or postponed until a general law can be passed, embracing the whole. It will be soon enough to examine those other cases when they shall come before us. And if many should, it will be then soon enough to determine whether it will be proper to pass a general law to embrace them.

If any other doctrine than this should be recognised, it is believed that no individual case would ever be confirmed, and it would follow that Congress have erred in almost every case in which they have legislated; because it is not difficult to allege, and much less to presume, that there are other cases of the same description.

The argument of the Recorder rendered it the duty of the committee, in their opinion, to exhibit the foregoing view of the case. They might have gone more into detail, but thought it unnecessary.

Upon the whole case, therefore, believing that the petitioner is entitled to relief, they beg leave, for that purpose, to report a bill.

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 18, 1819.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Josias H. McComas and wife, reported:

That it is stated by the petitioners, in their petition, that, in the year 1791, the father of the wife, petitioner, Henry Willis, living in South Carolina, went to the then district of Natchez, now State of Mississippi, and obtained from the Spanish Governor, at New Orleans, a concession for eight hundred arpents of land on bayou Sara, about fifteen miles from its mouth, dated 23d May, 1791, which was surveyed about the 21st day of December, 1791.

It is further stated, in the said petition, that, in 1791, the said Willis became entitled, by purchase, to a concession for five hundred arpents of land in the said district, adjoining the said eight hundred arpents, granted to one James Sanders in 1787. That, at the close of the year 1791, the said Willis returned to South Carolina for the purpose of removing his family to the lands in the Natchez district, and of living on and cultivating them agreeably to the requisitions of the Spanish Government; but that, in 1793, being nearly prepared for his contemplated removal to bayou Sara, he died, leaving the wife, petitioner, and an infant son, and his widow, his only heirs; and that the son shortly afterwards died, and the widow married a Mr. Chotard, who, being appointed guardian of the surviving child, conveyed her interest in the aforesaid tracts of land to James Williams, in order that he might (as is alleged) attend to and secure the title. And it is lastly stated that the said Williams presented the said claims to the commissioners for confirmation, who rejected them for want of evidence; since which the land has been sold by the United States. The petitioners ask Congress for leave to locate, without payment, the same quantity of land on any vacant land in the State of Mississippi.

The claim of the petitioners having been urged before the committee, with extraordinary solicitude and earnestness, they felt prompted, by a decent respect for the feelings and wishes of those concerned and their advocates, to give the case all the consideration of which they were capable; but, after the most mature deliberation, they feel constrained, by the law and facts appertaining to the case, to decide against the petitioners.

The case now under consideration is purely equitable, addressing itself to the liberality of Congress, and not to its justice. It does not come within the provisions of any law enacted for the adjustment of land titles in Mississippi, or any of the principles adopted by Congress in other cases. Nor is it believed that, if the country had never been ceded to the United States, the claim would have been recognised by the Spanish Government.

If the committee are disposed to adhere to, and enforce the laws of the United States in this case, there can be no doubt that they would be compelled to reject the application of the petitioners for relief. The most favorable law which can be made to apply to the case is the act of 1803, which requires that the claimant should reside in the country on the 27th day of October, 1795, and, on that day, cultivate the land claimed. In this case, it is not pretended that Henry Willis lived in the country in 1795. This was impossible, because of his death before that time. Nor is it asserted that his heirs were, in 1795, residents in the country. It is admitted that they were not, and that the land was never occupied or cultivated by them, or for their use. By the act of 1812, all cases are confirmed which had been presented regularly before the commissioners, and rejected for want of cultivation only, if it should appear from their report that there was residence in 1795. This law cannot aid this case; because, so far from its appearing that the claim was rejected for want of cultivation, and that there was evidence of the required residence, it is conceded that there was neither residence nor cultivation. It would, therefore, be a prostration of the requisitions of those laws to grant relief in this case. Nor does it appear to the committee, from any thing before them, that it would be proper to release the operation of the law on this particular case, and enforce it in others. It is contended that, because the occupancy and residence which are made indispensable prerequisites to the confirmation, the class of Spanish claims to which this belongs was rendered impossible by the act of God, they should, therefore, be dispensed with. It will not be very difficult to show that this position is indefensible, and the reasoning adduced in support of it fallacious.

The Spanish concession, or warrant of survey, was made without any pecuniary consideration: the only inducement which prompted it was the encouragement of the population of the country. Hence, it was required in the concession that Willis should, among other things, settle on the land conceded within three years after the date of the concession: if he should, then a grant should issue; but, if he should not, the concession was to be absolutely void, and the land conceded revert, ipso facto, to the crown of Spain.

As the title vested was only inceptive, and its completion made to depend on certain contingencies, the performance of these was certainly a condition precedent to the consummation of the title; and, consequently, the impossibility of their performance cannot help or strengthen the case, more especially as the settlement, which was one of the conditions, was the only consideration for the concession. The Spanish Government was certainly not bound by the contract with Willis, or by the dictates of moral justice or propriety, to grant to his heirs the land which it had promised to give to him if he would settle on it. If it were not bound to grant the legal title, it is presuming too much to suppose that the Spanish Government would have done it, had application been made for that purpose before the cession of the country; and, if it would have done it, the act would have been a gratuity, which the United States have no adequate inducement to make. If the claim of the petitioners had been valid, when the country was ceded by the Spanish Government, and had been subjected to forfeiture by the laws of the United States for failure to record it, or because the claimants did not reside in the country in 1795, there might be some propriety, as the heir was a minor, in granting the relief asked for. But the ancestor Willis, had not obtained a title before his death; he had not given any consideration for the concession; he had not settled in the country, and his heir did not settle there before the 27th of October, 1795. The land was, therefore, vacant when the United States purchased the country, and, consequently, vested in the United States, unincumbered by any claim which Spain was bound to recognise, or which comes within the scope or spirit of any law passed by Congress for the adjustment of land claims.

The United States have sold the land, claimed by the petitioners, having the right to do so; and, if the prayer of the petitioners be granted, the grant will be gratuitous; when there is no particular reason for such generosity in this case, which may not be urged with equal force by many others, whose chance and right of success would be much strengthened by the argument of analogy and of consistency which would be derived from the precedent thus established.

If the committee abstract the case from the operation of law, and consider it in its insular character, on its own intrinsic qualities, they can find no ground for the just and proper interposition of Congress. If relief be given, the United States will lose the value of the land given, and either do injustice to others, or give relief to them also, which might not be very convenient; and the claimants will receive a handsome estate, without having given for it one cent, except the price paid to Sanders. If the petition be rejected, the petitioners will have lost nothing. The committee are unable to perceive any thing in the character or complexion of the case of the petitioners which should entitle them to any peculiar favor. They acknowledged that, if they were permitted to indulge their individual feelings, their decision might be somewhat different, but, feeling bound to follow the sound dictates of sober judgment, they are compelled, unanimously, (without giving detailed reasons for their opinion,) to recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

PROPOSITION TO GRANT ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND ACRES OF LAND TO EACH STATE FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A UNIVERSITY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 18, 1819.

Mr. POINDEXTER, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred a resolution instructing said committee to inquire into the expediency of appropriating one hundred thousand acres of land to each State, for the endowment of a university in each State, reported:

That they are fully impressed with the propriety and importance of giving every encouragement and facility to the promotion of learning, and the diffusion of knowledge over the United States, which can be done without a violation of the principles of the constitution, and the system of policy heretofore adopted for the advancement of the general welfare. The proposition under consideration is, whether it be or be not expedient to authorize a grant of one hundred thousand acres of land to each State in the Union, making in the whole two million three hundred thousand acres, to be vested in bodies corporate, created by the several States having the care and management of their respective universities. Your committee have no specific knowledge of the necessity which exists for this appropriation, in reference to any particular State whose resources may not be adequate to the support of literary institutions, as no petitions or memorials have been referred to them on the subject. In the absence of these, it is fair to presume that the internal wealth and industry of the population, composing the several States, have been found sufficient to answer all the purposes of public education and instruction, so far as they have deemed it prudent and necessary to apply the means they possess to those objects. But if the aid of the General Government should, at any time, be required to enable a particular State, or every member of the Union, to carry into effect and operation a liberal and enlarged system of education, suited to the views, capacities, and circumstances, of all classes of society; and if it should be thought wise and constitutional to extend to them the national bounty, the donation of extensive tracts of land in the unappropriated territories of the United States appears to your committee to be the most exceptionable form in which the requisite assistance could be granted. To invest twenty-three corporations, acting under State authority, with a fee simple estate in two million three hundred thousand acres of land, to be located in the Western States and Territories, would put it in their power to impede the settlement of that section of the Union by withholding these lands from market; to interfere with the general regulations now in force for the disposal of the public lands; to divide settlements which would otherwise be contiguous; and, consequently, to lessen the value of lands offered for sale by the United States in the neighborhood of these large grants, which may remain unoccupied for any length of time, at the discretion of the Legislature of the State to which the donation is made. Your committee are of opinion that, besides these strong objections to the donations proposed in the resolution submitted to their consideration, it does not comport with sound policy, or the nature of our republican institutions, to grant monopolies of large and extensive tracts of the public domain, either to individuals or bodies corporate. The lands of the United States ought, as far as practicable, to be distributed in small quantities among the great body of the people for agricultural purposes; and this principle ought in no instance to be violated, where the grantee is exempted from the payment of a valuable consideration to the Government. Your committee are sensible that it may be found necessary and useful, for the promotion of learning in this growing republic, either to endow a national university, or to extend its benevolence in a reasonable and proper proportion to individual States; but, in either case, they are of opinion that the requisite aid should be given in money, and not in the mode pointed out in the resolution referred to them. They, therefore, recommend the following resolution to the House:

Resolved, That it is inexpedient to grant to each State one hundred thousand acres of land in the endowment of a university in each State.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN TENNESSEE UNDER GRANTS FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 18, 1819.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, 1818.

The Select Joint Committee, to whom was referred so much of the Governor's message as relates to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on the claim of this State to perfect titles to certain lands within the State of Tennessee, respectfully report:

That the committee have considered the subject referred to them with the attention which its delicacy and importance demand. The claim of North Carolina to consummate titles to lands lying within the limits of Tennessee—inchoate titles which had commenced before the cession of the territory afterwards erected into the State of Tennessee—was asserted not in the spirit of hostility to a sister State, nor of defiance to the authority of the Union; it was a claim founded on a right expressly reserved when North Carolina made to the United States a generous cession of the soil and sovereignty of her vast western territory; a right which she had agreed to surrender upon terms which it was confidently believed had never been ratified. Under the conviction that this right was yet unimpaired, North Carolina owed it to her sovereignty, and to the interests of those whose claims she was bound to vindicate, to put the question in the way of judicial decision before the highest tribunal in the land. This has been done, and the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the State of North Carolina has parted with the power to issue grants in such cases, and could not resume it.

Your committee feel a high reverence for the virtues and talents which illustrate and adorn the judgment seat of this court. They readily yield to its decrees constitutional respect, and, in a doubtful case, would yield even the submission of their judgments. But they owe it to truth to declare that, on an examination of the reasons which have been assigned for this decision, they are unable to acquiesce in the correctness of the judgment pronounced by the majority of the court. Your committee, however they may admire the astuteness, cannot admit the force of that subtle argumentation which would fain prove that an agreement between two States, dependant on the ratification of Congress, is made final and obligatory by the passing of an act of Congress, which expressly sanctions but a part of the compact.

Your committee believe that the State has done all that she ought to do in assertion of her right. It remains for those on whom is now thrown the obligation of consummating these titles, to comply with the exactions of honor, and the claims of equity. The Supreme Court has declared that it "has no doubt of the obligations on the United States to make provision for issuing grants on these cases, and that, in the mean time, the courts of the United States are not without resources in their equity jurisdiction to afford relief to those entitled to ask such grants." The committee will not doubt but that, while this State submits to a decision adverse to her claims, and which she believes to be erroneous, the United States will recognise the obligations which their judges will pronounce to be incumbent on them, and will speedily provide that claims acknowledged to have an equitable existence shall be clothed with all the forms of legal title.

The committee recommend that they be discharged from the further consideration of this subject, and that the Governor be requested to transmit copies of this report to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 29, 1819.

Mr. ROBERTSON made the following report:

The Private Land Committee, to whom was referred the petition of William Scott, Gabriel Scott, Thomas Scott, and Elizabeth Bowles, children and heirs of William Scott, late of Wilkinson county, Mississippi Territory, deceased, report:

That the petitioners state that their father, William Scott, obtained an order of survey on the 21st of May, 1787, from Don Stephen Miro, Governor of the province of Louisiana, for four hundred arpents of land on the Homochitto river, in the district of Natchez. That, in pursuance of said order of survey, there was surveyed for him, by William Vousden, surveyor of the Natchez district, on the 23d November, 1787, two hundred acres of land, situate on the east side of the south fork of the Homochitto, (as appears by plat of survey.) That the said William Scott resided on said tract of land from the year 1787 until the year 1783, when he was killed by the Cherokee Indians. That the petitioners were left in possession of the same, and still continue in possession. That, on the 29th March, 1804, the claim of the petitioners was filed with the Register of the land office west of Pearl river, agreeably to law, by a certain James Bowles, (the petitioners then being minors,) and not knowing any further proof was necessary, they rested satisfied their title was secure; but their claim was rejected by the Board of Land Commissioners for the want of the proof of residence of their father, William Scott, and of themselves, which they then could have proved and established, had they known it was incumbent on them to have done so, and which they now prove by the testimony of Patrick Foley and Gerard Brandon, (see their deposition.) That, in consequence of the rejection of their claim by the Board of Commissioners, their land was surveyed and returned as public land, the property of the United States, and was sold by the Register of the land office west of Pearl river, on the 9th September, 1817, to a certain Lyman Harding. Your committee being satisfied that the foregoing facts are clearly established, and taking into view the death of the ancestor of the petitioners and their minority, by which unavoidable occurrences they have been placed in the situation they now are in, are of opinion they are entitled to relief, and report a bill for that purpose.

CLAIM TO LAND IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 3, 1819.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Hughes, reported:

That the petitioner sets forth that he purchased two hundred acres of land about three miles from Kaskaskia, in the Illinois Territory, of a certain John Reynolds, who purchased the same of John Fowler. That the said Fowler was entitled to the same in consequence of his having improved and cultivated the said lands prior to the year 1791. That William H. Harrison, whilst Governor of the Indiana Territory, under the authority of an act of Congress, of the 3d day of March, 1791, confirmed Reynolds's title to the said two hundred acres, by reason of which confirmation the petitioner was induced to believe the title good, and purchased. That Governor Harrison, on the 22d of November, 1803, issued a patent for said lands to the petitioner, and that, since that time, he has made further and more valuable improvements thereon. That the commissioners appointed, in pursuance of an act of Congress, of the 20th of February, 1812, to inquire into the validity of titles confirmed by the Governors of the Northwest and Indiana Territories, and reported thereon, have, without proof or the form of a trial, reported his claim as rejected, and that the land has been surveyed and sold by the United States, and he has been under the necessity of purchasing it a second time, and prays relief. It appears to the committee that, by the act of the 3d of March, 1791, the Governors of the Northwest and Indiana Territories were fully authorized and empowered to confirm lands in those territories, that had been actually improved and cultivated, to the persons who had made such improvements, their heirs or assigns. The petitioner, on the 4th of September, 1804, filed with Michael Jones, the Register of land titles at Kaskaskia, the patent above mentioned for said lands, as appears by his receipt, and likewise gave notice, in writing, of the nature and extent of his claim. It is proved, to the satisfaction of the committee, that the petitioner, and those under whom he claims, have been in the possession and enjoyment of the said lands ever since the year 1791. From a certificate of Michael Jones, the Register, and one of the commissioners, it appears that the claim was rejected because it was not supported. The committee cannot conceive how it would be possible to support a claim with much stronger evidence than attends this—upwards of twenty years actual possession, and a patent issued by competent authority, and regularly filed with the proper officer. It does not appear to the committee that there is any foundation for a belief that the patent was obtained by fraud or collusion, or that it has ever been supposed or alleged to have been so obtained; they, therefore, report a bill for relief.

[2d SESSION.]

PROPOSITION TO SELL THE PUBLIC LANDS FOR CASH, TO REDUCE THE PRICE, AND TO SELL IN EIGHTY ACRE TRACTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 9, 1819.

Mr. MORROW, from the Committee on the Public Lands, being instructed "to inquire into the expediency of so altering the laws respecting the sale of the public lands, that, from and after the ——— day of ——— next, credit shall not be given on such sales," reported:

That, from a view to the extensive territory placed at the disposal of the Government, the increasing demand for new lands for cultivation, arising from the progressive augmentation of the population in the United States, and the influence which the proposed alteration in the system for the sale of the public lands must produce on the interests of a large portion of the community, gives, in the opinion of the committee, more than ordinary importance to the inquiry which they are instructed to make.

From the connexion that the terms of credit have with the other provisions and conditions provided for the sale of the public lands, a corresponding alteration in the price and size of the tracts offered for sale will be necessary, when the credit is discontinued on future sales. That provision, alone, would virtually operate an enhancement of the price, and lessen the facility to men of limited capital of acquiring new lands for settlement and cultivation.

In this view the committee have considered the expediency of providing for the discontinuance of credit, a reduction of the price, and the subdivision of tracts in future sales. The provisions for the sale of public lands, now in force, with some subsequent alterations, were adopted by the act of the 10th day of May, 1800. By its general regulations a credit is allowed on three-fourths of the purchase money for the lands sold. The moneys credited may be retained by incurring the charge of simple interest for five years from the time of purchase. It would appear that, at the first sales under this law, the long term of credit allowed had induced excessive purchases. The term of credit on these sales expired in the year 1805, and, in 1806, it became necessary for Congress to interpose for the relief of the purchasers, to prevent extensive forfeitures for failure in payment; and since that period nine several acts have been passed for the relief of the purchasers of public lands; and these acts, for mitigating the operation of the general provision of the law, have been in force for more than one half of the whole time since the system was first organized. The inducements of a long credit, which encourage purchases beyond the means for making payment; the general disposition in men to anticipate the most favorable results from the products of their labor; and the frequent unfavorable fluctuations in commerce, which cannot be foreseen by the most discerning, are the principle causes of the failures in payment by purchasers of public lands. It must appear from the Treasury statement, at the present session, of the amount of outstanding balances on account of the sales of public lands, with the embarrassments arising from the deranged state of the currency, that any degree of punctuality in the payment of the debts, now due, is highly improbable. If the laws were left to operate in the rigid exactions of the penalties and forfeitures, the most serious injuries (in the present circumstances of the country) must follow to a large class of the community; and the effect of relief, by an extension of the time for payment, while the sales continue to progress, may produce an accumulation of the debt, and increase the difficulty in making the final payments.

The experience for several years of the effects of this system, the frequent recurrence of circumstances which render necessary the interposition of the Legislature to mitigate the general operation of law, and the extensive forfeitures which have been incurred, notwithstanding the aid of frequent remedial laws for the relief of the purchasers, seems to forbid any calculation on a successful operation of the same system in future sales. It cannot be correct policy to persist in the continuance of a system so much affected by circumstances as that under consideration, which requires the frequent aid of mitigating expedients to preserve its existence, and to prevent its oppressive effects on a considerable portion of the community. It is not believed that any of the acts for the relief of the purchasers of public lands were unnecessary indulgences. The unfavorable state of things, during the restrictions on our commerce, and the late war, rendered such measures necessary; and the present state of the currency presents claims for indulgence still more imperative. Judging from the experience of the past, without any assurance of a more favorable state of things in future, it may be concluded that the system of credit is not well adapted to the circumstances of the country, and will be injurious so long as commerce is liable to fluctuation. The allowance of credit on the sales of the public lands could not have been adopted for the benefit of capitalists; to them it is unnecessary, and for them it ought not to have been provided; and yet, it is believed, that it has operated most to the disadvantage of men destitute of capital. An individual, who takes the whole term of credit allowed by law, on the three last instalments of purchase money, is charged, on the moneys credited, more than ten per centum per annum above the purchaser who makes prompt payment; and, in many instances, if he possess no other resources than those arising from the land itself, he incurs a forfeiture of the money paid, and the land with its improvements. If the allowance of credit on future sales was abolished, every subsequent purchaser would, without any liability to error, be able to calculate his means for payment; and if his purchase should not be so extensive, he would at once become an independent landholder, secure and quiet in his possession. In future those fertile sources of discontent and disquietude, which arise from disappointment, and from the exercise of measures necessary to enforce the payments, as, also, the frequent distress occasioned by the forfeiture of lands on which the settlements have been made, would be avoided. And (as will be proposed) were the public lands offered for sale in tracts of eighty acres, at one dollar and fifty cents per acre, then any individual, on the payment of one hundred and twenty dollars, might acquire a freehold estate without encumbering himself with any debt whatever. It is believed that any advantage to the general interest of the districts in which the public lands are sold, would result from discontinuing the credit on the sales. The purchaser is in possession of the lands purchased, for four or five years before the completion of his payment; the product of his labor for that time is applied in discharge of his debt, and passes into the public Treasury. In as far as the instalments are collected in the district, it operates on the principle of rents collected and withdrawn from circulation, or of a partial tax on that part of the community. The drain of money from circulation, thus occasioned, has been sensibly felt, and the balance in exchange against the Western country may, on this principle, be accounted for. In case of cash payments, the resources for payment would be drawn from other parts of the country, in as far as emigrants are the purchasers. In a more general point of view, the proposed measure appears important. The accumulation of debt in particular districts, where the mass of citizens are the debtors, is a consequence attending the credit system. The principles of general policy require that charges on the people, for the necessary supply of revenue, should be diffused over the whole society. By adopting cash payments, this evil would be avoided, and the interest of subsequent purchasers would then be identified with that of the Government.

If credit shall not be allowed on the sale of the public lands, it is proposed that a corresponding reduction in the price shall be made. The public lands have ever been considered as a source of revenue to the Government, and the early regulations for their sale appear to have had that object principally in view. Several of the States ceded vacant territory to the United States for the purpose of creating a fund for the discharge of the public debt. With this object in view, and to cover the considerable expenses of extinguishing the Indian title, and otherwise incidental to bringing the lands into market, the price was first fixed by general regulations at one dollar per acre, and subsequently increased to two. It would be difficult, without reference to any general principle of public policy, to fix any determined price, which, under all circumstances, should be proper for the sale of the public lands. The demand for new land to bring into cultivation will, in some measure, be proportioned to the increase of population in the agricultural class of the community; but the amount of sale will always depend (at any given price) on the capital destined to be so invested. The capital ordinarily employed for this object, is the surplus product of agricultural labor. If the profit in agricultural pursuits, so to be employed, will not purchase the supply of new lands necessary to the proper extension, and prosecution of that important branch of national industry, it may then be fairly presumed that the price is excessive, and operates injuriously to the public interest. It is not alleged that the prices at present fixed has produced that effect; but it is believed it is much higher than has been required by any of the individual States, or in any other country for vacant lands; and that the price required, connected with the credit allowed, has been found sufficiently high, by the industrious class, who are disposed to purchase for the purpose of occupancy and improvement. Experience has exploded the opinion that injurious speculations might be discouraged, and monopolies prevented by simply fixing a high price on the sale of the public lands; and if, in any measure, these salutary effects have been produced by that means, it has been at the expense of the corresponding disadvantage, that, by the same means, the industrious class, with small capital, have been prevented from becoming purchasers with a view to settlement and cultivation.

The only expedient which has been successfully resorted to, for preventing the public lands from becoming engrossed by capitalists, and perhaps the only one that will, in any measure, be effectual to that end, is, the subdivision of the sections, and offering them for sale in small tracts suited to the means of purchaser or actual settlement; and while ever a sufficient quantity of land is kept in market to satisfy the necessary demand arising from the increase of population in the country, and sold in small tracts, to suit those who are disposed to purchase for the purpose of occupying them, little may be apprehended from the evils of speculation and monopoly, whether the price be as now fixed, or shall be reduced. The sales of lands are regulated by no other principles than that of any other traffic in any species of merchandise. While ever the market is fully supplied with any commodity, and a certainty, that the supply can be kept up, and it is retailed in quantity and quality to suit the purchaser for use or consumption, monopolies will not be made, whether the price be high or low. A high price will discourage the consumption, and a low price promote it; but while the price is steady, speculations will be unprofitable.

It has been alleged that discontinuing the credit, and reducing the price, would operate to the disadvantage of the poor—that they must be supplied on credit; and if it shall not be allowed by the Government, they must purchase at an advanced price from speculators. The idea of providing equal facility to the poor and to the rich by any regulation is incompatible with that of disposing of the land for a valuable consideration. While the Government require a price, he who possesses the means of payment will have an advantage in making purchases over him who does not possess such means.

It is not apprehended that speculations will be extensive, or be long continued, where it must be carried on by purchase for cash, and sale on credit; and when the sales must be confined to those who cannot advance one hundred and twenty dollars, and become purchasers from the United States.

From the foregoing considerations, it is respectfully proposed that credit on future sales shall not be allowed; that the price of the public lands shall be fixed at one dollar and fifty cents; and that the lands be offered for sale in tracts of eighty acres; and, for that purpose, they ask leave to report a bill.

[2d Session.]

CLAIMS TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI UNDER BRITISH GRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 19, 1819.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Mississippi respectfully represent to your honorable body, that the situation of the titles of real property in the section of this State, formerly a part of West Florida, is embarrassing, and threatens to involve the settlers therein in vexatious law suits, and will, unless your honorable body interferes, take from them the fruits of their industry.

Fully sensible of the situation in which many of the citizens of that section of the State are placed, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Mississippi beg leave to represent to your honorable body that many of them settled long since on vacant land. At the period when they settled it was in the wilderness; some were invited by the policy of Spain, which gave away her land to actual settlers; they penetrated the forest; they subdued the soil; they encountered all the privations which are incident to new settlements, surrounded by savages and desert.

Had the country not passed from Spain to the United States they, no doubt, should have been quieted in their possessions. But that political vicissitude, while it has enhanced the value of the country, has given to its prosperity, and added to its importance, has, by changing the system of policy, put all their possessory right in a state of jeopardy.

The evil apprehended, and unless arrested by your honorable body, will involve many of the industrious citizens in ruin, arises from a description of claims generally denominated British grants. It is well known that, in the war of 1763, so called, England conquered the Floridas. At the peace, by treaty stipulations, the Floridas were ceded to England. From this period, England made grants not only of lands in the Floridas, but of what we contend was within the limits of Louisiana. These grants covered almost the whole of the country, and were made, no doubt, generally to the officers and retainers of the colonial Government. Very few settlements were made upon them; indeed, at this period, the country, with the exception of two or three towns on the seacoast, was a wilderness.

In 1779, war existing between Spain and England, the country was reconquered by the former; the forts and garrisons were possessed by the Spanish force, and the conquest became absolute. The colonial Government, army, and navy, and most of the grantees, went off; and these grants, in all probability, would never have been heard of, had it not been that your memorialists, by settling the country, by rendering it valuable, by extending to it the benefit of a social organization, had made it an object worthy of the avarice of unprincipled and greedy speculators.

Spain, then, having again possessed the country; by the right of entire and absolute conquest, it may be asked what title accrued to her in consequence of it? We know very well there is a distinction between the strict right of nations in this respect, and the modifications of that right usually made by conventions, which have for their object to ameliorate the rigors of war. The strict right which Spain acquired, by the act of reconquest, was, to consider all the inhabitants prisoners of war, they being alien enemies, and an unlimited control over all the property.

This, we contend, upon the strictness of the principles of national law, was her situation. Every British inhabitant of Florida was an alien enemy. He could not, of course, hold property under the crown of Spain. Such is the principle of the municipal laws of the civilized world, and, as such, may be considered one of the axioms which, by being adopted by all nations as a rule of internal policy, is, from this circumstance of universality, equally sound as a principle of international law.

But this principle is deducible from a higher source, from the strict principles of public law. All the writers on public law, how much soever they may unite in recommending clemency and moderation in the exercise of power over a vanquished foe, combine in sentiment that, by a conquest, in its strict sense, passes public and private property when such conquest is durable, entire, and environed with proper defences. We refer your honorable body to the learned Grotius on the Law of War and Peace, book 3, chap. 6, of the right to appropriate the things taken from an enemy.

This strict right being vested in Spain in an unqualified sense, it became her duty to modify it according to the usages and comity of modern civilized nations. She did so. She made none prisoners of war but such as had arms in their hands. She stipulated that personal effects should be respected; and, as it regards real property, the fifth article of the treaty of 1783, between Spain and England, provides "that His Britannic Majesty likewise cedes and guarantees, in full right to his Catholic Majesty, East Florida, as well as West Florida. His Catholic Majesty agrees that the British inhabitants, or others who may have been subjects of the King of Great Britain in the said countries, may retire in full security and liberty where they shall think proper, and may sell their estates, and remove their effects as well as their persons, without being restrained in their emigration under any pretence whatsoever, except on account of debt or criminal prosecutions. The term limited for this emigration, being fixed to the space of eighteen months, to be computed from the day of the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty; but if, from the value of the possessions of the English proprietors, they should not be able to dispose of them within the said term, then His Catholic Majesty shall grant them a prolongation proportionate to that end." Such longer period was given by subsequent proclamation, so as to make, in the whole term, the period, as we are informed, of three years.

Now, from these premises, let us respectfully ask, What shadow of validity can be attached to these dormant grants? A conquest vested the property in Spain. By the provisions of the treaty, within a limited time, the grantees had power to sell; that period expired, and the right, acquired by conquest, attached in an unqualified sense.

In some instances British subjects remained upon the land, were allowed to take the oath of allegiance to Spain, and their lands were confirmed to them by the Spanish Government. These titles we conceive to be valid, not, however, on the ground that the British grant availed, but because the Spanish confirmation was a new grant of itself.

There is another principle which we beg leave to submit to your consideration:

The claimants were British subjects. They went off with the army. Spain entered into possession, and, in many instances, regranted lands which had previously been granted by the British Government. In order to decide the question it is necessary to go to the commencement of the respective titles; for, if there, the British grants without a Spanish confirmation are invalid. The deduction is obvious that all subsequent title, derived only from that source, are equally invalid. Let us, then, suppose that the year after the treaty of 1793, a British grantee, not a subject to Spain, had commenced his action before the tribunals of Florida, against a grantee of Spain, for the same lands, what would the result have been? The demandant would have met, in the very threshold of his cause, the objection that he was an alien, and, of course, whether enemy or friend, could not hold real property where he owed no allegiance, and, of course, could prosecute no real action.

The United States stands in the place of Spain, and a title deducible, through an alien to the Spanish Government, cannot be considered as ever passing the soil.

We should not have gone so much into detail, as it respects the British grants, had we not understood that a bill was reported at the last session of Congress, which passed the House of Representatives, but failed in the Senate of the United States in consequence of an attempt to make an exception as it respects British grants, and to give them a legislative confirmation at the expense of the settlers. But it is for the National Government to decide, whether they will drive from the soil those who have subdued it with their labor, and defended it with their arms, in favor of old British grantees who have never been even in the country.

Such is the situation, and such the wishes of your memorialists, and we solicit from your honorable body all the assistance they can afford to us. They will perceive that the contest is unequal. On the one hand there is a corps of speculators, who, by their enormous wealth, are enabled to vex and harass the honest and industrious cultivator of the soil. On the other hand the humble yeoman, cultivating his few acres of ground, living on the spot which he wishes to own as the summit of all his hopes, aspiring to no other distinction than to discharge faithfully his duties to society, and aspiring to no other reward than the approbation of his conscience and his God.

It is to the National Government that the occupants of this district of country look with solicitude for protection in the quiet enjoyment of their lands, a protection small, indeed, for the Government of the United States to grant, but of incalculable importance to the industrious settlers.

Your memorialists, therefore, pray that the honorable Congress of the United States will take into their serious consideration the condition of the settlers in the country above described, and quiet the grants derived from Great Britain, which interfere with titles derived from the Spanish Government, on such terms and conditions as may be deemed just and equitable by your honorable body: and your memorialists will ever pray, &c.

E. TURNER,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[1st SESSION.]

CLAIM OF THE COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED BY GEORGIA TO EXAMINE CERTAIN LANDS ON THE TENNESSEE RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 14, 1819.

Mr. COBB, from the committee to whom were referred the petitions of Thomas Carr and John A. Heard, of the State of Georgia, Andrew Jackson, in behalf of himself and others, of the State of Tennessee, and a memorial of the General Assembly of the State of Georgia, reported:

That, it appears from the documents accompanying the petitions, that, on the 20th February, 1784, the General Assembly of the State of Georgia, for the purpose of settling the country called the Bend of the Tennessee, (at that time within the chartered limits of that State,) by a resolution, determined that seven commissioners should be appointed, who should be vested with the powers necessary to ascertain the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the lands in that tract of country; who should report their proceedings to the Legislature for their consideration, and which commissioners should have made to them "such compensation as should be deemed adequate and satisfactory." That, by the same resolution, the said commissioners, or a majority of them, were empowered "to grant warrants of survey, which should, when executed, be transmitted with the plats to the Surveyor General's office, in order that the same might be passed into grants, as the law directs; limiting each survey and grant to one thousand acres, and requiring bond and security to be given for the purchase money, by those in whose names such surveys should be made."

That, on the day following, the General Assembly of Georgia proceeded to the appointment of commissioners pursuant to said resolution, and actually did appoint Lachlin McIntosh, William Downes, Stephen Heard, John Morell, John Donelson, Joseph Martin, and John Sevier, Esquires.

It further appears from the documents, that John Morell refused to act, or resigned, and Thomas Napier was appointed by the Executive of Georgia in his stead; who, also, not accepting or resigning, Thomas Carr was appointed to fill his vacancy on the first of March, 1786. It does not appear that Lachlin McIntosh, another of the commissioners, ever acted.

It also appears that, pursuant to the provisions of the constitution of Georgia, then in force, the General Assembly, on the 22d February, 1785, acting upon information contained in a letter of that date from Stephen Heard, one of the said commissioners, did appoint the following persons as justices of the peace "for the said district of Tennessee," viz: William Blount, John Donelson, William Downes, John Sevier, Joseph Martin, Charles Robertson, Valentine Sevier, Jun., and Stephen Heard, Esquires.

It further appears that, on the 10th February, 1785, the commissioners for the district of Tennessee, exhibited an account of their proceedings to the General Assembly, which was referred to a committee, and, on the 14th day of the same month, a report was made by them, which cannot now be found.

That, on the first day of August following, pursuant to the recommendation of a committee appointed for that purpose, leave was given by the General Assembly for the introduction of a bill, to be entitled "An act for the laying out a district in the bend of the Tennessee;" which was introduced, and read for the first time, on the 7th of that month, and finally rejected on its third reading, on the 12th of the same month. But, on the day of its rejection, the General Assembly adopted a resolution declaring, "that the title of any person or persons whatsoever, to any lands in the district of Tennessee, so far as the same is sanctioned or authorized by former resolutions of Assembly, shall not, in any respect, be weakened or injured by the rejection, of this day, of the bill for laying out a district, nor shall the powers or duty of the commissioners who have acted on that business, be at all revoked or impaired; but every thing, in respect to the said Tennessee district, shall stand precisely upon the same footing as if the said bill, so rejected, as aforesaid, had not been brought in; and it is further resolved, that John Linsey, Esq., stand appointed surveyor for said district of Tennessee."

Two days afterwards (14th August, 1786) the General Assembly adopted the following resolution: "That each of the commissioners appointed on the Tennessee business, who have actually attended to their duty, shall be entitled to five thousand acres of land in the district, as a gratuity and full compensation for their trouble therein, and shall and may have a warrant and survey for them respectively; that John Call shall also be entitled to three thousand acres as a compensation for his trouble, and may have a warrant of survey for the same. And it is further resolved, that the district surveyor shall not proceed to make, or suffer to be made, any surveys in the bend of the Tennessee until the further order of the Legislature."

Thus far the proceedings of the General Assembly of Georgia were of a date anterior to the adoption of the Federal Constitution, and while that State had sovereign power to act upon the subject. It appears that, under the powers given to the commissioners under the several resolutions of the General Assembly, they did proceed to issue, or cause to be issued and located, various warrants of survey for land, in the names of a variety of persons, from whom bonds were taken for the purchase money. The names of some of those persons are known to your committee, but of the claims of a large majority of them they know nothing. It does not appear that these "warrants of survey, when executed, with the plats," were ever "transmitted to the Surveyor General's Office" of the State of Georgia, "in order that the same might pass into grants, as the law directs," or that any grants were ever issued upon any of them, pursuant to the resolution of the 20th February, 1784, or that the purchase money was ever paid, or the bonds taken to secure its payment, ever placed in the Treasury of Georgia. Your committee, therefore, are of opinion that these warrants and surveys were all set aside, on account of some informality, or other cause; and, for any claim founded upon them, they can recommend no relief.

In relation to the claim of the petitioners on account of the "five thousand acres," stipulated by the General Assembly of Georgia, to be given to "each of the commissioners who had actually attended to their duty," as a gratuity and full compensation for their trouble," the committee are of opinion that they are entitled to relief. They were appointed to the arduous and dangerous duty of exploring the country, and examining the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the lands therein, by the sovereign authority of the State. This they performed at the risk of their lives; and, indeed, it appears that one of them (John Donelson) was killed by the Indians while in the actual discharge of his duty. It was not until their return, and after they had made a report of their proceedings, that the compensation was promised them; that it was binding upon the State of Georgia, both in justice and equity, there can be no doubt. Whether this obligation has been transferred to the United States remains to be seen.

Your committee think proper to observe that, by the act of the General Assembly of Georgia, called the Yazoo act, this claim of the commissioners was expressly recognised, and the amount increased to fifty thousand acres, (as will appear by the fifteenth section of that act, an extract from which accompanies the petitions,) and a reserve for that quantity was made in the grant to the Tennessee Company in their favor. The claim does not appear to be otherwise connected with that nefarious transaction; on the contrary, the services were performed, and the justice of the claim admitted, eight or nine years before that speculation was originated. Believing in the propriety of the repeal of that act, your committee cannot recommend relief for the fifty thousand acres therein reserved for them; more especially as the claim is founded on an entire different, and infinitely more just consideration, unattended, so far as your committee can discover, with any fraudulent circumstances.

By the articles of agreement and session between the United States and the State of Georgia, made on the 24th of April, 1802, the very territory or tract of country, ("the district of Tennessee,") in which was to be situated the five thousand acres promised to each of the commissioners, was ceded to the United States. This "gratuity or compensation" had never been passed into a grant, so far as your committee can discover, by the State of Georgia, and are not among those grants expressly recognised by the said articles. The question then, is, can this claim fall within the provisions of the third condition of the first of those articles? The proviso is as follows: "that the United States, for the period, and until the end of one year after the assent of Georgia to the boundary established by this agreement, shall have been declared, may, in such manner as not to interfere with the above-mentioned payment to the State of Georgia, nor with the grants herein before recognised, dispose of or appropriate a portion of said lands, not exceeding five millions of acres, or the proceeds of said five millions of acres, or of any part thereof, for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, or compensating for any claims, other than those herein before recognised, which may be made to the said lands, or to any part thereof." It being fully understood that, if an act of Congress making such disposition or appropriation shall not be passed into a law within the above-mentioned period of one year, the United States shall not be at liberty thereafter to cede any part of the said lands, on account of claims which may be laid to the same, other than those recognised by the preceding condition, nor to compensate for the same; and, in case of any such cession or compensation, the present cession of Georgia to the right of soil over the lands thus ceded, or compensated for, shall be considered as null and void; and the lands thus ceded, or compensated for, shall revert to the State of Georgia."

Within the year after the execution of these articles of agreement and cession, an act of Congress was passed, (3d of March, 1803,) declaring that "so much of the residue of the said five millions of acres, or of the net proceeds thereof as may be necessary for that purpose, shall be, and is hereby, appropriated for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, or compensating for such other claims to the lands of the United States, south of the State of Tennessee, not recognised in the above-mentioned articles of agreement, and which are derived from any act, or pretended act of the State of Georgia, which Congress may hereafter think fit to provide for," &c. To this section there is a proviso, that no other claims shall be embraced by the appropriation but those, the evidence of which shall have been exhibited to the Secretary of State, and recorded on or before the 1st January, 1804.

Your committee are of opinion that the claims of the petitioners are, and in justice ought to be, embraced within the provisions of the above-quoted parts of the articles of cession, and the act of Congress consequent thereon. Although these provisions may have been intended for a particular class of claimants, yet the case of the petitioners clearly falls within them. Their claims are derived from a bona fide or unsuspected act or resolution of the Legislature of Georgia, made in their favor, for services rendered under the authority of the State; and for which, at the time of their appointment, an "adequate and satisfactory compensation" was promised. The five thousand acres allowed to each as a gratuity, or compensation for their services, was to be located in the district of Tennessee. The whole or a part of the lands so promised, were actually those measured and surveyed for the commissioners, as appears from the documents. This district of country was, by the articles of cession before referred to, ceded to the United States, and it was agreed in one of the conditions of these articles, that the United States might appropriate a portion of the lands ceded, not exceeding five millions of acres, "for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, or compensating for any other claims" than those therein before recognised, (among which the claims of the petitioners are not embraced,) which might be made to the said lands, or any part thereof. And that, pursuant to the proviso contained in this condition, the Congress of the United States, by an act passed within the time limited, did appropriate the five millions of acres for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, or compensating for such other claims as might be derived from "any act, or pretended act of the State of Georgia," and which Congress might think fit thereafter to provide for.

It is true that the evidence of all, or some part of these claims, (consisting in the resolutions of the General Assembly of Georgia,) were not exhibited and recorded in the office of the Secretary of State, pursuant to the proviso of the eighth section of the act of Congress before recited, (of 3d of March, 1804,) and within the time therein prescribed. For such of them as claimed under the resolutions of the General Assembly of Georgia, and not under the Yazoo act, it was scarcely necessary, as they could exhibit little else than a transcript of the resolutions, and perhaps a warrant and survey founded thereon in some of the cases. Your committee are of opinion, that this omission does not, and ought not to affect the justice of these claims, more especially when it is considered that the strictness of the proviso was waived, and the time extended in favor of claims of an infinitely more doubtful character, as will be seen by an act of Congress, of the 23d of January, 1815. (4th vol. L. U. S. p. 776.)

That the claims are viewed as just, and coming within the provisions of the articles of cession by the State of Georgia, is amply testified by the memorial of the Legislature of that State, referred to your committee, requesting that the claims of the petitioners may be satisfied and paid by the United States. (See No. 31, of the reports of last session of Congress.)

It also appears from the evidence exhibited before the committee, that the commissioners who acted, expended large sums of their own private funds in bearing their expenses while thus employed, and in quieting the Indians resident in that neighborhood.

It also appears, that six only of the commissioners ever "actually attended to their duty," viz: John Donelson, Thomas Carr, Stephen Heard, John Sevier, William Downes, and Joseph Martin; all of whom are now dead except Thomas Carr.

Your committee also discover that the petitions have been presented and referred to select committees at each of the two last sessions of Congress, and favorable reports made. They see no reason to change the relief suggested by those reports, (to which they beg leave to refer,) recommending that scrip be issued to the parties interested for the amount that is due to them respectively, at the rate of two dollars per acre, that being the minimum price, in cash, of public lands, and that this scrip, so to be issued, shall be receivable for any lands to be sold in the State of Alabama; for which purposes, the committee report a bill.

No. 306.

[1st SESSION.]

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 14, 1820.

Mr. CAMPBELL made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Mackay, with sundry documents, have had the same under consideration, and report:

The petitioner states that, by a concession dated the first day of February, 1798, Zenon Trudeau, Governor of Upper Louisiana, granted one thousand and eight hundred arpents of land to James McDaniel and his heirs; that, in the year 1802, McDaniel transferred the concession to the petitioner, who had the same surveyed and located by the proper officer, whose certificate bears date the 15th of March, 1803; that, as soon as a Board of Commissioners had been appointed for Louisiana, he filed a notice of his claim with the Recorder, to whom he delivered the concession, and took a receipt; that, two years afterwards, he applied to the board for his documents, which he supposed had been recorded, but was denied them without a reason being assigned; that, being informed certain papers had been stolen from the office by a person who had been in the Recorder's employment, he renewed his application, found all his documents recorded, except the concession, which was missing; that, as soon as advised of the passage of the act of the 3d of March, 1807, confirming grants within a league square, he applied to the board for confirmation, and produced as evidence the receipt given him by the Recorder, which was deemed inadmissible; that this decision not only deprived him of the benefit of the said act, but also of one passed the 12th of April, 1814; that, some time in the spring of 1817, he received an anonymous letter, without date, enclosing the lost concession, which he presented to the Recorder, who informed him, his powers having ceased, he could not grant him confirmation; that, on the 20th of April, 1818, an act was passed authorizing him to file his concession with the Recorder of land titles, who was required to take testimony, and report the same, with his opinion, to the next Congress. Wherefore he prays relief.

An act did pass on the 20th of April, 1818, requiring the Recorder to perform certain duties in relation to the petitioner's claim, which has resulted in the collection of testimony, with his opinion.

It is proved a concession or warrant of survey was granted to James McDaniel, on the first of February, 1798, by Lieutenant Governor Trudeau.

Bernard Pratte swears the petition and concession are in the hand-writing of Antoine Soulard, and the signature in Governor Trudeau's.

Antoine Soulard swears the petition was written by himself, and that he saw Zenon Trudeau sign his name to the order of survey or concession; also, that more than a year before that time, (15th of June, 1818,) while James Mackay and he were walking the street, Mackay said he would inquire for letters which he expected from his son; that, on coming out, he opened, in presence of the witness, a letter containing the concession to McDaniel, which was said to have been mislaid or stolen in the year 1806.

The conveyance of the right of James McDaniel in the concession to the petitioner, on the 3d of January, 1802, is proved by a copy of the original deed, filed in the office of the Post of St. Andrew, translated, and sworn to.

The survey and location of the one thousand eight hundred arpents on the river Des Pères, for the petitioner, are proved by a copy of the surveyor's plat and certificate, dated the 15th of March, 1803, translated under oath.

The existence of the receipt from the Recorder to the petitioner, for the concession, and other papers, is sufficiently established.

The Recorder's opinion is unfavorable to the claim of the petitioner. To support his conclusion he assumes two grounds: 1st. The want of registry of the order of survey. This evidence of authenticity he admits has only been required in cases where distrust has been entertained. To produce "distrust" he has furnished no evidence. On the other hand, of the genuineness of the concession, there is not room to doubt, without entirely disregarding the statements of Pratte and Soulard, who stand unimpeached; and, 2. The plat of survey is in the name of Mackay, and not McDaniel, who he supposes never had a legal possession, and, of course, could not convey.

Upon an inspection of the conveyance from McDaniel to Mackay, dated the 2d of January, 1802, it is pretty evident McDaniel had possession. This instrument describes the one thousand and eight hundred arpents by boundaries, though it may be true a location was not perfected until after the transfer. Besides, your committee are satisfied the laws and usages of the Spanish Government did not interdict the sale of unlocated concessions. Indeed, by the act of Congress approved the 12th of April, 1814, the term "claimant" is recognised, which, if properly defined, would embrace every person claiming, whether in his own or another's right.

Your committee think the petitioner entitled to relief, and, for that purpose, report a bill.

QUANTITY OF LAND SOLD AT THE LAND OFFICES SINCE THEIR INSTITUTION, THE RECEIPTS THEREFROM, AND THE BALANCES DUE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 24, 1820.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 21, 1820.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 10th instant, instructing the Secretary of the Treasury "to lay before the House an annual statement of the number of acres of land sold at the several land offices, from their institution to the 30th of September, 1819; of the moneys accruing, and the moneys received, from such sales; of the sums due the Government, and unpaid; and of the sales of forfeitures for non-payment, keeping separate that part of the statement which relates to the States of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, formerly the Northwestern Territory," I have the honor to submit the enclosed statements, from the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The rule applied by the commissioner to determine the sums, which will become due in the course of the succeeding years, is not satisfactory. If the sales of each year were of the same amount, the rule would be correct, after the expiration of five years from their commencement, provided the time, within which the payments were to be made, should not be extended by act of Congress.

For a number of successive years indulgence has been uniformly granted, and an examination of the annual sales will show that the amount has constantly varied. The rule, therefore, applied to the sum now outstanding, will not give a satisfactory result. It is probable, however, that, as the public sale of lands, during the present year, will be considerable in the States of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, the receipts in those States will, during the year, nearly equal the sum which the application of that rule would produce. In the States of Mississippi, Alabama, and in the district west of the Mississippi river, the receipts will fall greatly below that amount, as the principal sales have been made since the commencement of the year 1817; and the returns of the Receivers show that the payments are principally confined to the annual purchases. Notwithstanding these circumstances, the receipts, during the year, from those offices, will probably be considerable, as a considerable quantity of land will be brought into market in Alabama, and the districts west of the Mississippi river.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

LAND CLAIMS IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 27, 1820.

Mr. ANDERSON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of sundry inhabitants of the State of Illinois, praying for the confirmation of certain lands heretofore confirmed by the Governors of the Northwestern and Indiana Territories, reported:

That, by the resolutions of Congress, of 1788, and act of 1791, claims to land at Vincennes, and in the Illinois country, founded on ancient grants made by the French or British Governments, were recognised, and donations were made to heads of families in 1783, of four hundred acres: to those who had improved lands, not more than four hundred acres; and to those who did militia duty in August, 1790, one hundred acres. The Governor of the Northwestern Territory was empowered to allot, and confirm to the inhabitants, the lands they might be entitled to, under the provisions of said resolutions and act of Congress. The Governor of the Northwestern Territory proceeded to perform that duty, and continued from time to time, to make grants and confirmations, until the power was transferred to the Governor of the Indiana Territory, who also made grants and confirmations, until the power was transferred to Boards of Commissioners established about the year 1804. On the 20th of February, 1812, Congress organized a Board of Commissioners to revise the grants and confirmations of the Governors. This Board, in January, 1813, transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury four lists of claims that had not been supported by sufficient evidence laid before them. Upon the claims thus reported no proceedings have been had in Congress.

As no control was reserved by Congress over the acts of the Governors, (no report even been required to be made of their proceedings,) the petitioners insist that it was not competent to Congress to reverse their decisions, either directly or indirectly. The committee are not disposed either to deny or acquiesce in this position, because other grounds appear to the committee conclusive in favor of the petitioners.

By recurrence to the resolutions of 1788, and the law of 1791, it appears that the right to "donations to heads of families," accrued twenty-nine years before the passage of the law of 1812; the same remark applies to the improvement rights, and the claims derived from militia services accrued twenty-two years before the sitting of the Board of Commissioners under the act of 1812. The petitioners complain, and with great appearance of truth, that, as their claims depended entirely on parol testimony, it was unreasonable to call on them at so distant a period after the death or removal of their witnesses, to prove again their claims. The petitioners also complain, with equal appearance of truth, that, admitting the power of Congress to revise the acts of the Governors, their confirmations ought to have been taken as evidence of right, until the presumption in favor of the acts of a public officer was destroyed by clear testimony. It seems, indeed, that the Board of Commissioners, under the law of 1812, did not allow to the acts of the Governors any respect at all; but, where the witnesses called by that Board had no knowledge of the claim, it was condemned. The committee cannot hesitate to admit that many changes of property took place between the confirmations made by the Governors, and their reversal in 1813, by the Board of Revision, and that these revisions have operated prejudicially to innocent purchasers. The committee have not been convinced that any such hardship exists in that class of cases that depended on ancient grants. They depended on written testimony, and it does not appear that such documents have been lost.

The committee, therefore, recommend the rejection of so much of the petition as relates to the class of cases dependent upon grants of the Governors, founded on "ancient grants," and report a bill for the confirmation of the three other classes of cases dependent on parol testimony.

CLAIM OF THE COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED BY GEORGIA TO EXAMINE CERTAIN LANDS ON THE TENNESSEE RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 7, 1820.

Mr. CAMPBELL made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petitions and accompanying documents of Thomas Carr and others, have had the same under consideration, and report:

Your committee have examined the case with attention, and think it not necessary to present anew the allegations and proofs of the petitioners. This has been done with much accuracy, in the report made by the Select Committee on the 14th of December. [See No. 305.]

As your committee are convinced the claim of the petitioners is just, the only question which remains for decision is, whether the United States are under obligations to grant relief. To furnish an answer, it is necessary to advert to the language of the articles of agreement and cession. In this instrument there are sundry conditions, for the performance of which Congress is solemnly pledged; they are absolute and indispensable. However, in the proviso to the third condition, Congress is, without doubt, permitted the exercise of discretion. The auxiliary verb "may" is always to be understood as importing this idea. It cannot be well doubted that, by the words "any claims," were meant those derived under the act of the Legislature of Georgia, of the 7th of January, 1795. To satisfy these, Congress was at liberty to appropriate not exceeding five millions of acres of land, or the proceeds thereof. This ability to appropriate was limited to one year. If exercised thereafter, a forfeiture to the State of Georgia was to ensue; and, if not exercised at all, the five millions of acres were not to be known as distinct from the common fund applicable to the purposes of the United States. It is well known in what light the Yazoo claims were viewed at the time the cession was made. This may account for the shortness of the period within which Congress might provide for them, and for the absence of a positive obligation to do so. Can it be imagined, Georgia, if it had been intended the cession should embrace the petitioners' case, would not have insisted on a different phraseology? Is it not probable the sanction of these claims would have been as positively required as that of any other persons? Scarcely would their validity have been left precarious and contingent by the limitation of a year.

The articles of cession may well be called a contract. In construing it, it is proper to ascertain, if possible, the intention of the parties. In the application of this rule, your committee cannot discover that the United States are under any obligations to relieve the petitioners.

The Select Committee think the act of Congress, approved the 3d of March, 1803, and within the year, includes the case of the petitioners. The words, it is true, are broad, and may be interpreted by some to extend to all claims emanating from Georgia under any act. Your committee object to this latitude of construction, inasmuch as cases, of which Congress could have had no knowledge, might be embraced. The words, "such other claims," "any act, or pretended act," at once direct the attention of the reader to the Yazoo speculators. This sentiment is strongly supported by the system of legislation which became necessary after the appropriation of the five million of acres or the proceeds thereof.

Your committee recommend that the bill reported by the Select Committee, on the 14th of December last, for the relief of the petitioners, be rejected.

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 11, 1820.

Mr. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Josiah H. McComas and wife, reported:

The petitioners state that, sometime previously to the year 1791, Henry Willis settled in the district of Natchez, now State of Mississippi, married, and became entitled to all the privileges of a citizen of the Spanish Government. That he obtained from the Spanish Government a warrant of survey for eight hundred arpents of land, situated on the waters of bayou Sarah, in said district, which land was actually surveyed for him, as appears by a warrant and plat of survey bearing date on the 21st of December, 1791, which accompanies the petition. It is also stated that Willis obtained by purchase from James McIntosh, who purchased of James Sanders, another tract of land of five hundred arpents, adjoining the former, which was actually surveyed for said Sanders, as appears by a warrant of survey and plat bearing date the 22d of December, 1791. About the year 1791 or 1792, Willis obtained leave from the Spanish Government to visit South Carolina and Georgia on necessary business, intending to return, inhabit, and cultivate his lands, but died before his business in Carolina was closed. He left, at his death, the petitioner Anna, and a son named Lewis, since deceased, his only heirs, then infants, and his widow, since intermarried with John Chotard. In addition to the repeated declarations of Willis, they state, as an evidence of his intention to return, that he appointed an agent to transact his business during his absence, and left a large personal estate to be preserved until his return. They allege that the Spanish authorities always regarded said lands as the property of Willis and his heirs, until the time of surrendering the country to the United States.

The commissioners appointed under the act of Congress of 1803, to adjudicate on claims to lands in the district of lands west of Pearl river, rejected this claim for want of habitation and cultivation, on the 27th of October, 1795. It was not confirmed under the act of 1812, because the claimants were not actual settlers "resident" in said district in October, 1795. The intention of Willis to return to the district and "inhabit" and "cultivate" his lands; the act of God in preventing his return; the infancy and consequent incapacity of the petitioner Anna to comply with the terms of the act of Congress are assigned as reasons why the requisitions of the act were not literally complied with, and for the interposition of Congress in their behalf. The material facts set forth in the petition are supported by the evidence. The petitioners pray a confirmation of their title, alleging that, although their claim does not come literally within the expressions of the act of 1812, yet it comes within the spirit.

Congress, in presenting obstacles to the confirmation of claims to land derived from British or Spanish warrants and orders of survey, we presume merely intended to guard against fraud and speculation. Lands were generally granted by those Governments with a view to the settlement of the country; hence the American Government required a residence to evidence an intention to settle and improve the lands granted, and not speculate. Wherever that intention is clearly manifested, without an actual residence, and the case is otherwise divested of suspicious circumstances, your committee are of opinion that such case comes within the spirit, if not within the letter of the law, and embraces the intention of the Government. In legislating, general rules must be adopted. These general rules operate injuriously, and sometimes unjustly, towards individuals, without legislative interference. In this case it may also be remarked, that, if a man's home is his residence, Willis had an actual residence in the district until his death in the year 1794. The residence of the father was necessarily the residence of his family after his death, until they evidenced a change of residence by some act of their own. So far from showing an intention to change their residence, the family moved, so soon after the death of Willis as they could, (though not too late to meet the provisions of the law,) to the district where the land was situated, and where they have ever since resided. There Willis had left an agent to transact his business; there he had left a large personal estate; there was the inheritance of his legal representatives. These circumstances present, in the opinion of your committee, a case virtually, although perhaps not expressly within the provisions of the law. We feel the more disposed to favor this claim, as it is in favor of the orphan and the widow, towards whom almost all Governments extend a guardian and parental care. Your committee, therefore, think the petitioners entitled to relief, not, however, by a confirmation of their title to the land claimed, which has since been disposed of by the United States, but by a commutation of lands within the district, and report a bill for that purpose.

CLAIM OF THE STOCKBRIDGE INDIANS TO LANDS IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 24, 1820.

Mr. STORRS, from the committee to whom was referred the petition of Muhheakunuk or Stockbridge nation of Indians, reported:

That it appears that, antecedent to the revolutionary war, the Miami nation of Indians granted to the Delaware, Mohican, (Muhheakunuk,) and Munsee tribes, a tract of land situated on the waters of the White river, and now comprised within the State of Indiana. That the Delawares and a part of the Mohican nation shortly thereafter removed to and settled upon these lands where they yet remain. This grant was originally authenticated according to the customs of the Indian nations, by the delivery of a belt and several strings of wampum. On the 21st day of December, 1808, it was formally reduced to writing at the city of Washington by Mr. Jefferson, then President of the United States, attested by Henry Dearborn, Secretary of War, and the seal of the War Department was affixed to the instrument. This authentication of the title to these lands has ever since remained in the possession of the chiefs of the Delaware and Mohican nations. The Mohicans principally reside in the State of New York, but, for many years previous to the execution of this deed, a part of the nation resided with the Delawares on these lands.

By the treaty made at St. Mary's, in the State of Ohio, on the 3d day of October, 1818, the Delaware nation ceded to the United States "all their claim" to land in "the State of Indiana," reserving the use and occupation of their improvements for the term of three years. Since the ratification of this treaty, the title of the Mohican nation to an undivided and equal portion of the lands ceded by the Delawares has been denied, and they have been required by the agents of the Government to remove from the tract at the expiration of three years from the date of the treaty, and that their title will not be recognised.

Since the grant of these lands by the Miamies, the Mohican nation has never ceded or alienated any portion of them; and the committee are of opinion, after a careful examination of the documents, that their title is not affected by the cession made by the Delawares to the United States, or by any treaties made with the tribes to which the Mohicans were not parties, and that they still remain the lawful proprietors of an equal and undivided share of the tract granted by the Miamies to them, in common with the Delawares and Munsees.

The foundation of the denial of their title is contained in the communication (herewith submitted) to the Secretary of the Department of War from John Johnston, the agent of the United States for Indian affairs at Piqua. The allegation contained in this communication, that the Mohicans "may be considered a component part" of the Delaware nation, does not appear to the committee to be a fair deduction from the history of these nations. The terms of relationship, used by the Indian nations in their intercourse, are merely appellations of the friendship existing among different tribes; they denote no consanguinity with each other, and their origin may frequently be traced to casual circumstances, or events in the history of the Indian nations inhabiting this continent. A clear and satisfactory explanation of their customs in this respect is contained in Heckewelder's History of the Indians, and Loskiel's History of the Missions to the Indian tribes in North America. In confirmation of these historical accounts, the committee submit, with this report, a statement furnished by one of the chiefs of the Mohican nation, relative to the origin of the appellation of relationship existing between the Delaware and Mohican tribes.

It is stated by the agent for Indian affairs, that the Mohicans claim these lands under the 2d article of the treaty made at Fort Wayne on the 30th September, 1809, between the United States and the Delaware, Miami, Potawatamie, and Eel river tribes. The deed from the Miamies to the Mohicans, bearing date at a period long antecedent to this treaty, which deed was but the formal recognition of a title much more ancient, the inference drawn by the agent that the title of the Mohicans is derived from a subsequent treaty with other tribes, to which the Mohicans were not parties, is not only singular, but clearly unwarranted, as well by the fact, as by every rule of just interpretation.

It appears, from this communication of the Indian agent, that, "previous to the Miami chiefs signing the treaty, they required and received from the commissioners of the United States a paper, purporting to hold them indemnified" from the claim of the Mohicans. To determine with certainty the nature of this instrument, and the reasons of its execution and delivery, the committee have examined the journal of the commissioners, and nothing appears therein relative to the subject.

The committee are of opinion that it is evident, from this communication of the Indian agent, that the Mohicans were entitled to a share of these lands. They were formally notified to attend the treaty; the Indian agent endeavored to obtain for them a reservation; the Miamies, before the execution of the treaty, required an indemnity against their claims; a part of the nation resided on the lands, and their claim was a subject of consideration during the making of the treaty.

Independently of the evidence of this claim furnished by the documents, many circumstances concur to render it proper that it should be recognised on the part of the United States. As far as the complaints of the Mohican nation, in relation to this treaty, are set forth in their petition, there is much reason to believe that they are just.

Their communications to the Delawares, transmitted to the care of the Indian agent, were, by him, suppressed from the knowledge of the Delawares, and his suggestions of the "proper steps" to be taken for the procurement of Indian lands, by the employment of persons whose negotiations may not prove to be "unsuccessful, by reason of ignorance of the Indian character," tend much to impair the sincerity of those professions of "candor" and devotion to the "best interests" of the Indians, which are displayed in this communication to the War Department.

The committee have not been able to determine, with satisfactory precision, the extent or boundaries of the grant from the Miamies to the Delawares, Mohicans, and Munsees. It is alleged, on the part of the chiefs of the Mohican nation, that the grant included a tract of one hundred miles square; but no documents exist which render certain its extent. It being evident, however, that their title to some portion of the lands ceded by the Delawares, is well founded, the committee report a bill for the confirmation of their claim, and providing for its amicable and equitable adjustment.

To our great Father, the President, and to his great Council, the Congress of the United States:

We, your red brethren, chiefs and principal men of the Muhheakunuk or Stockbridge nation, desire you to listen to us. We are all descended from one father, and, with our white brethren, acknowledge and worship one God, who has graciously placed us under the care of wise and just men. We have been taught that you were always ready to listen to the complaints of your red brethren, and we confidently come unto you, believing that, when you shall have heard our petition, you will not suffer us to be wronged of our lands, or driven away from our country.

Brethren: We, from a great and strong nation, have become few and weak. When your fathers first came to this great island, they found our fathers in possession of a great country, abounding in all things necessary for their comfort and sustenance. Your fathers were then few and small. We, of the Muhheakunuk nation, then received them as friends and brothers. As your fathers increased along the seashore, ours were obliged to fall back; and, to afford them more land, our fathers removed from the island of Manhattan, (which you have since covered with a great city,) toward the head waters of the great river which there mixes with the sea.

But in a little time your fathers came among them again, and built another city and fort, when they again left their town near Albany, and removed with their wives and children eastward toward the river Connecticut, where they again re-united our nation at Stockbridge.

But, in a little time again, others of your fathers coming from the east had come near unto them; and, on the west had encircled them in, when our fathers, finding that their lands were covered with their white brethren, and that they would soon be left with but little ground for hunting or for corn, removed far west, beyond the borders of your fathers' land, and our nation was again seated down in peace.

Though thus compelled to wander from place to place, we were your friends. When your parent disowned you as her children, and sent over to this great island many strong warriors to burn your towns, destroy your families, and bring you into captivity, we, of the Muhheakunuks, defended your fathers on the west against the warriors which your parent had sent against you on that side; and we also sent our warriors to join your great chief Washington, to aid him in driving back into the sea the unnatural monsters who had come up from thence to devour you, and ravage the land which we a long time before granted to your fathers to live upon.

Since our removal to New Stockbridge, where we now live, we have abandoned our hunting, and cultivate the earth.

We have found that, by the counsel of good men in that respect, we have profited much, and our nation was increasing in numbers and peace. Your brethren have, at various times, sent among us good and pious men, who have instructed us by good counsels, and redeemed us from our false gods, and put into our hearts to know the truth, and our nation have long ago cast away their dumb idols which could not speak, and we now worship the only true God and Saviour Jesus Christ. Our children are taught to read and write, to cultivate the earth, and to worship, love, obey, and serve the Lord. But, with all these blessings, we have found that, since we have again become surrounded with our white brethren, bad men persuade our young men to evil.

Our lands here have again become small, and, many years ago, a part of our nation went to other lands, which we own, to prepare a place for us.

Brethren: We wish you now to listen to what we have to say. A great many years ago, the Miami or Maumee nation, and several other tribes, granted to our fathers, the Muhheakunuks, to the Delawares, and Munsees, a large tract of country on the White river, far west of the river Ohio. This grant was confirmed by a belt of wampum, which our white brethren know is among us a pledge of faith. In many councils has this grant been confirmed and acknowledged; and, in the year of our Lord 1808, it was put into writing, on parchment, at the city of Washington, according to the customs of our white brethren, and was sealed with the seal of your nation, and subscribed and witnessed by our father, Thomas Jefferson, and Henry Dearborn, one of your chief counsellors.

This deed we now show to you. A part of our nation, as we have told you, removed to these lands and possessed them, with the Delawares and Munsees, and made large improvements on them, at great expense to the nation, to prepare them for us. We were about preparing last year to remove to them, with our families and instructors; but we heard, with great grief and disappointment, that, during the last year, your nation, by its chiefs and counsellors, have made a treaty with the Delawares alone for these lands, at which our chiefs were not present, nor our nation consulted; and our brethren, who are on these lands, are directed to leave them in a short time; our right to them is denied; our hopes are thus blasted, and we suffer under the wrong, which grieves us greatly.

In the last year our nation looked with pain on the situation of our brethren in the west. We saw them lying in darkness and Paganism, and believed that our God called upon us to send among them a colony of our nation, in which was built up a church of our Lord and Saviour, that we might be the means of civilizing and christianizing them, and doing to them great good. In this we were aided by the counsel and assistance of the good and pious among us, and those who had sent to us the light and blessings of the gospel of our Lord.

We hoped to aid greatly in spreading over this whole island, even to the great western waters, the fruits of religion and civilization, that all our red brethren might partake of them and be made happy, our God adored, and his kingdom advanced; but all these prospects are clouded and hidden from our eyes. The lands we justly own as a nation are taken from us; we shall thus be deprived of our inheritance without our consent. We pray that you will not suffer this wrong to be done to us. We have always looked up to you for advice and counsel and protection, and we believe that you will not refuse to listen to our cries. The lands which our fathers have left to us is small, and, if we are now driven from it, our nation must remain where we now are, and we fear that, in a little time, it may be wasted away and destroyed. You are a great nation, and have many lands; that which we have will add little to them.

We were told, last winter, that we must look to the Delawares about this matter; but we know that the Delawares have no right to sell our lands. Besides, the Delawares have nothing that we want, to give us for them. We had rather look to your nation, which is wise and just, than to our brethren the Delawares, who are but little instructed in religion, and who are preparing to move away west of the great river Mississippi.

Brethren: This is what we have to say, and now we pray that you will consider our just rights, and set off to our nation such a location of these lands as we are justly entitled to, that we may not suffer under this wrong, and that we may thus be aided in our designs, and our nation again be set down in peace, and our hearts be quieted.

And we, as in duty bound, will ever pray,

N. STOCKBRIDGE, or MUHHEAKUNUK.

It is a tradition handed down from our ancestors, that, many thousand moons ago, when the red men were the sole possessors of this flourishing and happy land, before white men came over the great water in their bounding ships, the Delawares dwelt along the banks of the river of that name, quietly and peaceably enjoying the fruits of their labor. They had had no wars for a long time; the nation increased and multiplied; they grew strong; they prospered.

But at length their prosperity was to be interrupted. The Cherokees, Nanticokes, and some other nation, (whose name has not descended to us,) envying their condition, came from the south, with a great army, to fight against them. The woods resounded with their footsteps, and the mountains echoed with their war-whoops. They vanquished the Delawares in several battles, and, at last, forced them to retreat to an island in the river, (some where above Philadelphia,) on which they had before placed all their old men, women, and children. Some time before this they had sent runners to the Mohicans, living along the seashore in Connecticut, to implore their help. These two nations were friends, but not allies. The chief of the Mohicans was then Etowwaughaum; he assembled his warriors, and immediately set out on his march to assist his friends in the west. They arrived at a most critical period; the Delawares were contending with the whole combined force of the Cherokees, Nanticokes, and the other nation, whose name is now unknown; there was no possibility of retreat from the island; they stood defending themselves, their aged parents, their wives, and helpless children. What remained of the whole tribe was now assembled on this island. They were threatened with extermination. Long had they striven with no hope of escape, surrounded with ten times their number; the field of battle was become a heap of carnage; the fainting warriors of the Delawares could scarce raise a weapon in defence of all that was dear to them; driven backwards and forwards, they retreated and rallied, and again retreated, until indiscriminate death seemed inevitable, when the shouts of the Mohicans, advancing in great force to their assistance, struck their ears. Then it was that the fortune of the day was turned. The Cherokees and their allies were defeated with great slaughter, and put to flight.

Threatened in their turn with invasion, the Cherokees, Nanticokes, and the other tribe in alliance with them, sued for peace of the Mohicans and Delawares, who were now the victorious party. It was granted them, on condition that they would return peaceably home, and never again make war on the Delawares or their allies. This was agreed to; the Cherokees and their allies returned home, and remained faithful to the conditions of the treaty.

The Mohicans continued with the Delawares for some time, and when they were preparing to return to their own country, the chief of the Delawares assembled a council of his old men, and invited the chiefs and principal warriors of the Mohicans to be present; when they were come, he spoke to them to this effect:

"Chiefs and warriors, our friendly allies: We are greatly indebted to you for the services you have done us. We can never repay you. We cannot speak to you as we would, our hearts are too full; but the Great Spirit can reward you, brothers, and he will do so.

"Brothers, we would invite you to come and settle among us, and bring your fathers with you, and your women and children; but we know, brothers, you would not leave the bones of your forefathers, and go into a strange land. But this we can do; we will make you our relation. Now, brothers, what relation shall we be to you?"

Then Etowwaughaum, chief of the Mohicans, stood up, and said: "Brothers, we give you thanks for your kind offer, and accept it. Now we, from the east, generally defend our grandfather if he is assaulted or abused by any one."

It was thereupon agreed, by both parties, that the Delawares should be the grandfather, and the Mohicans the grandson, and that they should both be as the members of one family. The Mohicans returned to their homes, and ever remained faithful to their relations, the Delawares.

These are the facts on which we found our claim, and, as justice warrants it, so may it be done.

In the treaty of Grouseland, near Vincennes, of August, 1805, the first article has the following:

"And whereas the Miami tribe, from whom the Delawares derive their claim, contend that, in their cession of said tract to the Delawares, (i. e. the lands watered by White river, Indiana,) it was never their intention to convey to them the right of the soil, but to suffer them to occupy it as long as they thought proper; the said Delawares have, for the sake of peace and good neighborhood, determined to relinquish their claim to the said tract, and do, by these presents, release the United States from the guaranty made in the before mentioned article of the treaty of August, 1804."

The fourth article of the same treaty recognises the Miamies, Eel rivers, and Weas, (all Miamies,) as being the rightful owners of all the country on the Wabash and its waters, above the Vincennes tract. White river, in which the Delawares resided, is a main branch of the Wabash.

Treaty of Fort Wayne, September, 1809, the Miamies, for the first time, solemnly recognised the claim of the Delawares as follows:

ART. 2. The Miamies explicitly acknowledge the equal right of the Delawares with themselves to the country watered by the White river; but it is also to be clearly understood, that neither party shall have the right of disposing of the same, without the consent of the other; and the improvements which shall be made on the said land by the Delawares, or their friends, the Mohicans, shall be theirs forever.

It is under the last clause of the preceding article that the Mohicans claim. There is no other treaty stipulation in their favor.

It is believed the Delawares have resided on White river, Indiana, forty or fifty years. The Mohicans may be fairly considered a component part of this tribe; for, in speaking of the Delawares, they call them their grandfathers, which implies relationship and dependance, as looking up to them for counsel and direction; they were, unquestionably, originally the same people. The Mohicans have not been known, as a people, on White river, more than eighteen or twenty years. It is not believed that more than six families of them have been there at any one time, until since the sale of the country, when about sixty souls moved there last spring. They went in defiance of the orders of the Agent for Indian Affairs. The Delawares had repeatedly invited all of them to move and settle beside them on White river; for reasons unknown, they did not accept of their offer. The last was made from Fort Meigs, at the treaty of September, 1817. The Indian agent wrote it at the instance of the chiefs.

The country on White river, owned in part, and occupied exclusively by the Delawares, was eagerly desired by the people and Government of Indiana. Two different attempts had been made to purchase it after the late war, both of which were unsuccessful, by reason of ignorance of the Indian character, by the persons employed in the negotiation.

Governor Jennings afterwards wrote to the Indian agent on the subject; the reply was, that the country could be procured, if the proper steps were taken. The course was suggested, through Governor Jennings, to the Government here. A negotiation was ordered.

Wishing always to act with candor, I immediately notified the Mohicans in New York, by letter, of the time and place of holding the treaty, and invited them to attend. They transmitted written communications to the Delawares, containing reflections on the white people, and warmly urging them not to sell any more land. Those communications I could not be the organ of to the Indians, because they were directly in the face of my duty. A letter was immediately transmitted to the Mohicans at New Stockbridge, advising them that I could not deliver their communications to the Delawares, (which the persons who wrote them ought to have known,) and informing them that in any other case I should be glad to serve them.

They did not think it necessary or proper to attend the treaty, which was signed at St. Mary's, October 3, 1818, although they had ample time; but wrote to me to have a large reservation, I think twenty miles square, made for them. The chiefs of the Delawares would agree to grant them no reservation, saying that they wished the Mohicans to accompany them over the Mississippi. Application was made to the Miamies, also, to designate a reservation for them.

My request to Richardville, the head chief, was to allow them a reservation on the Wabash river, below Massinaway. The reply was, that if the Delawares would not provide for their friends, the Mohicans, it could not be expected the Miamies would. It is very doubtful, if the Mohicans had been on the spot at St. Mary's, whether the Delawares would have consented to give them an acre, so desirous are they of taking all their friends along with them.

Previous to the Miami chiefs signing the treaty, they required and received from the commissioners of the United States a paper, purporting to hold them indemnified from any claim which the Mohicans might thereafter make, in virtue of the second article of the treaty of Fort Wayne, of September, 1809. No such document was asked by the Delawares.

No person, employed in the negotiation, ever thought it necessary, at any stage of the business, to have the assent of the Mohicans to the sale of the White river country. They were not considered by the Indian chiefs, who were parties to the treaty, nor by the officers of the United States, as having a right in the soil. If there should be any doubts on this head, Governor Harrison, who negotiated the treaty, would clear them up. There is no man in the Western country better acquainted with the geographical limits of the various tribes of Indians north-west of the Ohio.

When we treat with Indians, it is always with those who are in possession of the country wanted. A great number of the Delawares are settled beyond the Mississippi; yet we do not consider it necessary to send to them, and get their consent. The same case with the Pottawatamies, who are scattered over a great extent of country. In treating with this tribe, at St. Mary's, we purchased from those only who lived on the lands, and in the country adjacent. This rule has always governed, and holds good in the case of the Mohicans. Viewing them as a component part of the Delaware nation, we purchased from those who exercised the chief authority, and who resided in the country.

The communications made to the Mohicans by the Delawares and their agent, do not, it is conceived, alter the case. The parties could not be bound by such communications at any rate after the treaty was signed. The Mohicans have no just reason for complaint; they were properly notified by the United States' agent to attend the treaty. This they declined doing, no doubt from a conviction that the Delawares would secure no land for them. I think there was not a single family of the Mohicans residing on White river, in October, 1818, nor for some years before. Their improvements must have been of little value; the land in cultivation was all prairie.

Mr. Storrs having stated, in the hearing of the Secretary of War, that the Mohicans considered themselves materially injured by my conduct, it becomes necessary to justify it. I never had any political connexion with these Indians. They reside in the northern part of New York, at least six hundred miles from my agency. Many of their leading men, at different times, have visited the Delawares; a few families have occasionally resided on White river. This led to a correspondence between Mr. Sergeant, the elder, and myself, respecting them. I was also the medium of communication from the Delaware chief to the Mohicans. The Government at no period placed supplies of any kind at my disposal for their use. I, therefore, could not withhold the public favors from them. I acted fairly in notifying them to attend the treaty. In failure thereof, every fair and honorable means was used to get a reservation for them. I am conscious of never having done an act to their prejudice; there could possibly exist no motive for it. I am desirous of moving all the Indians within my agency over the Mississippi, because I think their best interests will be promoted by so doing. They cannot be preserved in what is called reservations. The intemperate use of ardent spirits is destroying them rapidly.

Respectfully submitted by JOHN JOHNSTON, Indian Agent.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, President of the United States, to whom it may concern:

Whereas it appears, by the declaration of Captain Hendrick, a chief and agent for the Delaware Indians, and is confirmed by the acknowledgment made to me personally, by the Little Turtle, a chief of the Miamies, that the said Miamies have granted to the Delawares, Mohicans, and Munsees, and their descendants forever, a certain portion of their lands on the White river, for the sole use and occupation of the said Delawares, Mohicans, and Munsees, and their descendants forever; but under the express reservation and condition, that neither they, the said Delawares, Mohicans, and Munsees, nor their descendants, shall ever alienate the lands to any other persons or purposes whatsoever, without the consent of the said Miamies. And the said chiefs before named, having desired me to bear witness to their declarations and acknowledgments aforesaid: Now, therefore, know ye that I, the said Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States, do testify that the declarations and acknowledgments before mentioned, by the said chiefs of the Delawares and Miamies before named, were made in my presence, and on my interrogation, in the exact tenor before stated.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, at the city of Washington, on the 21st day of December, 1808.

[1st Session.]

APPLICATION FOR THE PURCHASE OF LAND ON TERMS DIFFERENT FROM THOSE ESTABLISHED BY LAW.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 3, 1820.

Mr. ANDERSON, made the following report:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Charles Henry Du Pasquier and others, praying, on behalf of themselves and other Swiss emigrants, that Congress would authorize them to purchase a tract of the public land lying on the west side of the Mississippi, and between the thirtieth and thirty-seventh degree of north latitude, sufficient for the settlement of three or four thousand families, on terms more favorable than the general law would permit them, have had the same under consideration, and report:

That the question presented to the consideration of the House involves the expediency of selling the public lands to foreigners on terms more indulgent than those which regulate the sales to native citizens. This committee is very sensible that the mildness of our Government, its wise and wholesome laws, have produced an emigration to its shores which has gone far to increase the collective talents and industry of the nation. Some of our most distinguished citizens, as well as industrious and ingenious mechanics, are among those who have made this country their own by adoption. But it is thought that, while we highly appreciate these benefits, we should not change the operation of the general laws of the country to produce the effect. So long as the freedom of our institutions is preserved, and wholesome laws are permitted to have their ordinary effect, the inducements which heretofore have had their influence will still be sufficiently strong to produce the desired emigration. It cannot be concealed that special provisions, excepting foreigners, however meritorious, from the operation of general laws, and giving to them advantages which are denied to the citizens, can be founded in good policy. It is a peculiarity eminently honorable to our country, that the native of Europe possesses, in the acquisition of the soil here, the same advantages which an American citizen does; to give him more, would produce a distinction not only invidious, but most unjust. When the law is now equally open to both, it would, indeed, be a perverted use of charity to give to the stranger a facility which we deny to the citizen.

It is probable that, during the present session of Congress, the mode of selling the public lands will be so far altered as to demand a cash payment of each purchaser. Every reason which could influence Congress to make that change, would forbid this committee from proposing to sell a large quantity on a credit still more distant than the present laws contemplate. If the public interests should be thought to require a system still more rigorous than the one which now prevails, and this, too, against the petitions of a great number of your citizens, and the memorials of the Legislatures of several of the Southern and Western States, it would, indeed, be an assumption of high responsibility on the part of this committee, to recommend, in obedience to the prayer of the present petitioners, that indulgence to them which the expected bill will deny to your own citizens.

The establishment of a community of foreigners within our country, secluded by their habits, manners, and language, from an intimate association with the great body of our citizens, cannot be an event so desirable as to justify a departure from the general law. An unrestrained intercourse with the body of the American yeomanry, affords to the emigrant the best, and probably the only means of acquiring an accurate knowledge of our laws and institutions; a knowledge, which is not only necessary to give to him the full enjoyment of his situation, but is necessary to render him a valuable citizen to the commonwealth. It is believed that, if a large settlement was formed, exclusively of foreign families, to most of whom our language would, of course, be unknown, many years would elapse before that general intercourse would take place beyond the boundaries of their own community, which would be essential to give them full possession of American principles and character; and it is by no means certain that time would, in such cases, ever have the effect of entirely destroying their foreign character. While, then, this committee rejoices in every opportunity of communicating the blessings of their country to their European brethren, they believe that it can be safely done only when they enjoy them by indiscriminate association.

The petitioners have, many of them, been heretofore engaged in manufactures; and they rely for much of the support which they expect to receive, upon the stock, manufacturing skill, and industry, which they promise to introduce. They have exhibited before the committee some beautiful and very satisfactory specimens of their ingenuity and skill, particularly in silk and cotton goods. Your committee felt the full force of this appeal, and very frankly state that, if any petition of a similar character can be acceptable to the House, this deserves to be so. Without referring to the known character of the Swiss peasantry, a settlement in the State of Indiana, of emigrants from Switzerland, gives strong evidence that a colony, established under the auspices of the present petitioners, would be characterized by industry and unoffending submission to the laws. They resist the application, however, on the grounds they have stated. The terms of sale held out by the present laws are of the most indulgent kind; and if the public interest should ever justify a still further relaxation, it is confidently believed that it should be in favor of American citizens.

In answer to that part of the petition which declares that one of the principal objects is the "domestic manufacture of cotton, wool, flax, and silk," this committee will only say, that it may be well considered how far it would comport with sound policy to give a premium for the introduction of manufactures at the moment when, by the almost unanimous declaration of our manufacturers, it is said that they cannot live without farther protection.

Your committee, therefore, recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

AMOUNT OF THE TWO PER CENT. FUND IN OHIO, INDIANA, AND ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 9, 1820.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 8, 1820.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate, of the 1st instant, I have the honor to submit the enclosed statement of the amount of the two per cent. fund arising from the sale of public lands in the States of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, to the 30th of September, 1819.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

HON. JOHN GAILLARD, President pro tem. of the Senate.

Estimate exhibiting the amount of the two per cent. fund arising from the sale of public lands lying in the States of Indiana, Ohio, and Illinois.

In what State.	During what period.	Amount of two per cent. fund.
Ohio, - - -	From 1st July, 1802, to 30th September, 1819, -	$182,712 55
Indiana, - - -	From 30th November, 1816, to 30th September, 1819, -	24,089 43
Illinois, - - -	From 1st January, 1819, to 30th September, 1819, -	2,579 47

NOTE.—This is an estimate of the funds that have arisen from the receipt of money for lands sold—not of the funds that will arise when the lands sold have been paid for.

PRE-EMPTION RIGHT IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 13, 1820.

Mr. TAYLOR, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of William Conner, reported:

That the petitioner has resided for many years at a place called the Delaware Towns, in the State of Indiana, which is situated in a tract of country lately belonging to the Delaware tribe of Indians, and which was by them ceded to the United States, by the treaty made at St. Mary's, in October, 1818. The petitioner, having made considerable improvements on the land on which he resides, wishes to remain on it for the purpose of raising his family, who are half-breeds, prays that the right of pre-emption for a fraction or section of six hundred and forty acres may be granted to him to include his improvements.

It appears, from a certificate of Jonathan Jennings, Governor of Indiana, who was one of the commissioners appointed to treat with the Indians at St. Mary's for the purchase of their lands, that the petitioner had contemplated asking of the Delaware tribe of Indians a reservation, similar to others granted by the treaty of St. Mary's, in 1818, to half-breeds—the petitioner having married a Delaware woman by whom he has several children; but that he was dissuaded from his purpose by the commissioners, lest the applications for such reservations should become so numerous as to prejudice the negotiation, then pending, for the tract of country which was afterwards purchased. In consequence of this suggestion of the commissioners, the petitioner declined applying to the Delaware tribe for a reservation, which the Governor states he was as much entitled to, in behalf of his family, as many for whom provision was made by the treaty.

The committee are of opinion that the pre-emption prayed for ought to be granted, and report a bill.

CLAIM OF GABRIEL WINTER AND OTHERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 14, 1820.

Mr. HUNTER, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Gabriel Winter, made the following report:

That, upon a cautious investigation of the claim set forth in this petition, it appears to be one of peculiar interests, whether considered in regard to the amount of property, or the importance and extent of the principles it involves. The petitioner claims, as heir of his father, Elisha Winter, and alleges that, on the 27th day of June, 1797, his father obtained from the Baron de Carondelet, the Governor General of the Province of Louisiana, a grant of lands in the district of Arkansas, for himself and associates: for himself, one thousand arpents square; to William and Gabriel Winter, his sons, five hundred arpents square each; to Samuel Price, Richard Price, William Hubble, John Price, William Russell, Joseph Stilwell, and Walter Carr, fifteen arpents of land in front to each of them, with the usual depth of forty back.

It is alleged by the petitioner that this grant or concession of land was rightfully made by the Baron de Carondelet, as Governor General of the province of Louisiana, in conformity to its general powers and instructions, and the acknowledged law and usage of the country, with a view to the encouragement of the agriculture, and augmentation of the population of a distant and unsettled district. It is stated that the great and useful services rendered by the petitioner's father to the Spanish Government, especially by the establishment of an extensive rope-walk at New Orleans, and sympathy for his misfortune when this rope-walk was destroyed by fire, and a wish to alleviate the severity of his loss, were the honest and adequate personal inducements of this large grant and concession.

The grant is upon condition that the grantees should make a settlement upon their respective tracts within one year from the date of the grant, and, upon failure thereof, the grant was declared void. It is averred by the petitioner that these conditions of settlement have been complied with by Elisha Winter and William Winter; that they were legally, and, according to the accustomed forms, put into possession of these lands by the commandant of the district of Arkansas; and that, on the tract granted to William Winter, they erected a dwelling-house, and made considerable and extensive improvements. It is likewise averred that these last named grantees continued to occupy and cultivate the lands thus settled until the country was taken possession of by the United States. Since that event, the parties interested have recorded their title papers and documents in the proper office, and have constantly asserted and continued their claim, which, however, was not allowed and confirmed by the Board of Commissioners. On what ground the rejection was founded does not appear. It might have been that the claim, amounting, according to the petitioner's construction of the grant, to one million five hundred thousand arpents, was too large. Under the statute for their cognizance, or that, restricting the grant to one thousand five hundred square arpents, a quantity not excluded from their cognizance, they determined either that the grant was not genuine in itself, or not valid according to the Spanish regulations for the allotment of lands, or void for want of the King's assent, or that they deemed it forfeited for breach of its conditions, and to have been subsequently surrendered and cancelled.

The committee have been furnished with a copy of a petition presented to the House of Representatives, and now there pending, signed by William Russell, agent for the representatives of Michel Boone, Louis P. Levy, and Joseph Mason, solemnly protesting against any unconditional confirmation of the tract of land said to be granted to Elisha Winter. They object to the sufficiency of his title, and represent that, under the authority of the United States and their laws, six hundred and forty acres of land included in Winter's grant, according to his pretensions and construction thereof, has been granted and confirmed to the said Michel Boone; another six hundred and forty acres to the said Louis P. Levy; and other six hundred and forty acres to the said Joseph Mason. From an examination of a communication from Gabriel Winter, addressed, in the nature of a protest, to the present Commissioner of the General Land Office, the committee have reason to apprehend that a considerable portion of these lands, lying between the river St. Francis and Arkansas, has been surveyed by the Government of the United States, for the purpose of satisfying military land warrants granted to soldiers who served during the late war. These proceedings greatly embarrass the settlement of this claim, suggest considerations of public policy not to be disregarded, and present formidable obstacles to a result at once just, equitable, and convenient.

But the question of the most singular interest arising in this case is, as to the quantity of the land intended to be granted. And this depends on the just and proper interpretation of the Spanish phrase of the original concession, "mil arpanes de tierra quadrados;" in literal English, "a thousand arpents of land square." The claimants contend that the word "arpent" was always used in the province of Louisiana as expressive of linear measure; and that the first tract granted, means a square figure with one thousand arpents on each side, making one million superficial acres. If the word arpanes (arpents) is used to designate a given quantity of land, then a thousand arpents were granted in a square; if it is used to designate linear measure, viz: that equal to its square, then a tract equal to the square of one thousand arpents, when laid off upon one line, was granted. The difference is immense. Though the word arpent is strictly applicable to superficial measure, yet the testimony furnished the committee, tends strongly to prove that the use of it as a measure of length, has been almost invariable and universal among the Spanish, and our own surveyors. The testimony on this matter is derived from the most respectable sources; from foreign surveyors, from Surveyors General of the United States, and other public officers, and will be found collected in the second volume of the documents of the House of Representatives, first session, fifteenth Congress, [see No. 261, page 256 of this volume.] Indeed, the documents and testimony presented on behalf of the petitioner, whether in relation to the authenticity of his grant, his compliance by actual settlement with its conditions, or in support of his interpretation of the words expressive of the quantity of land, have been collected with uncommon diligence and care, and assume a persuasive appearance of candor and good faith; and, if not satisfactory, because in some instances informal, and in all ex parte, are entitled to the most candid consideration, and authorize a strong presumption in favor of the petitioner's claim.

A committee of the House of Representatives reported unanimously in favor of the petitioner on the 30th December, 1817, and presented a bill confirming certain lands in the county of Arkansas, in the Missouri Territory, to the heirs of Elisha Winter, and to the heirs of William Winter. The present committee do not conceive themselves warranted in recommending a course so directly conclusive against the rights and interests of the United States. From the statement now made, it must be perceived that such an act would be inconsistent with engagements already made by the United States, and that they would be inevitably subjected to an urgent and equitable claim for indemnity from their own despoiled grantees. They would, by legislative enactment, virtually annul their own grants and contracts, and be betrayed into the exercise of an odious power, expressly prohibited by the constitution to the States, and by all the principles of sound morality and just policy prohibited to themselves.

The committee are of opinion that this claim presents a matter peculiarly and exclusively fit for judicial cognizance. It cannot impair the dignity, nor disturb the regularity of the Government, to permit a citizen to state, in a mode analogous to that of a petition of right, his claims and proofs of title and property to a competent court. And the committee are of opinion that not only in this, but in many of the numerous land cases, accumulated and diversified beyond their competency of such an investigation as justice to the Government requires, the best course would be to refer them to judicial decision. This course would be less expensive and vexatious to the claimant, and the best safeguard of the land property of the United States. It cannot be denied that, by the present mode of considering these cases, Congress is liable to be misled. It would be wonderful if they were not sometimes surprised, sometimes importuned, by the zeal, ability, and perseverance of claimants and agents, into erroneous decisions, when they can listen only to ex parte testimony and argument, when the cases cannot be tried in an adversary way, and they are excluded from all the benefits of cross-examination and counter proof.

In land cases of small amount it has been habitual, and perhaps excusable, for the committees to lend a favorable ear to claimants. At the worst, it was the donation of a few acres of an unbounded region; a handful from a heap. But experience teaches that these decisions, in minor cases, are soon cited as precedents, and are made to include principles dangerously vague and indefinite, and are clamorously invoked in aid of subsequent cases of suspicious aspect and enormous magnitude.

None of these general remarks are intended to be pressed against the particular case now under consideration. The petitioner is not a land speculator. Whatever may be his property in the land claimed, he inherited it from his ancestor, and claims it under the guaranty of a treaty. Confident of the legality of his claim, he assents by his agent to such a judicial decision as is recommended by the committee; and for the purpose of obviating obstructions, and disembarassing the question on the part of the United States, he assents to the confirmation of all claims of any person at this time deriving title from the United States.

The committee are of opinion that the course recommended will enable the Government to avail itself of every mode of legal objection and defence. The United States will be supported in their own impartial and enlightened courts by their own law officers; and if the decision should be against them, they would be bound by all the obligations of justice and moral duty to submit to and respect it. The committee, therefore, report the accompanying bill:

"To authorize the legal representatives of Elisha Winter and William Winter to institute a bill in equity, in the nature of a petition of right, against the United States."

[1st Session.]

LAND CLAIMS IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 20, 1820.

To the Honorable the Senate, and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: The General Assembly of the State of Louisiana respectfully represent:

That commissioners were appointed by the Government of the United States, under the treaty between those States and the French republic, dated on the 30th of April, 1803, to adjust the land titles of the late Territory of Orleans, with a view of extinguishing thereon the claim of the said States. That it has been represented to the General Assembly that the said commissioners have made their final reports on that subject, leaving unconfirmed a considerable mass of private titles, which, agreeably to the customs and usages of the ancient land system of Louisiana, and the equity inherent in these concessions, were fairly entitled to confirmation by the Government of the United States.

That such a course of proceeding tends equally to delay the extinguishment of the national title on those claims, and to endanger the final adjustment thereof on fair principles, involving, in various points of view, consequences imminently injurious to the great landed interests of this State. Among these, it is manifest that it arrests the hand of improvement, and weakens the energies of enterprise and industry, which flourish in their natural vigor on a soil where the title thereof is indisputable: that it opposes the obstacles of a foreign title and doubtful tenure to the transference of private landed estates, except at prices disproportioned to the intrinsic value thereof; that it affixes a questionable character to the titles of the soil, which leaves waste and unproductive a large portion of the lands of this State; that it opens the avenues of fraud and speculation by which the fountains of real estates become corrupted, converting the soil, which, to the mass of the people, should be the source of every substantial blessing, into a medium of unprincipled traffic, reducing its appropriate value, and withering the active powers of the community: that it delays the sale of the public lands, a circumstance which has tended to turn off the current of emigration, and thereby to check the growth of these attributes of general power and prosperity which the State of Louisiana, from its distinguished natural advantages, has a right to secure to itself among the members of the confederation, under equal laws and a just policy: that, by referring the investigation and decision of the unconfirmed claims to a tribunal beyond the limits of the State, the claimants, in a great number of cases, will be precluded the common facility of furnishing such additional evidence or other aids as time and circumstances may have enabled them to adduce in support of their claims, especially since a large mass of title papers have been recently discovered among the archives of the former Government relating to concessions of land in different parts of this State: that, by referring the titles yet to be adjusted to the dernier decision of a tribunal accustomed to the discussion of rights by the precise and rigid rules of a different system of jurisprudence—a tribunal incompetent equally from the nature of its organization, its ordinary functions, and the novelty, obscurity, and variety of details connected with the general subject upon which it is to act—it furnishes to the claimants just cause for apprehending a course of adjudication inconsistent with the mild and liberal principles under which the original concession and present tenure of private rights have been consecrated; and, finally, that it exposes the titles to the destructive influence of time and accident, which are sweeping away the existing evidences of their validity.

The General Assembly, deeply impressed with the foregoing considerations, respectfully solicit of Congress the institution of a Board of Commissioners, to be vested with such ample powers as may bring the titles in question to a fair, satisfactory, and speedy adjudication, and have thought proper, in this appeal, to present to Congress some leading principles relative to the subject.

They pray that confirmation be admitted to the claims of all persons, or their legal heirs, claiming lands in Louisiana by virtue of any incomplete French or Spanish grant, concession, warrant, or order of survey, which was made, granted, or issued prior to the 20th day of December, in the year 1803, for lands lying in any part of the State of Louisiana, where the claimant, or the person under whom the claimant claims, was resident in the late province of Louisiana at the time the grant, concession, warrant, or order of survey, was made, granted, or issued, provided that the right of no person claiming lands by virtue of a confirmation heretofore made, or act of Congress heretofore passed, shall be affected.

That all persons claiming lands in the said State, by virtue of any grant, concession, warrant, or order of survey, or by virtue of habitation, occupation, cultivation, or improvement, or claiming any town or village lot, out lot, or common field lot, and who have not filed with or given notice of their claim to any of the former Boards of Commissioners within the times heretofore prescribed by law, may be allowed sufficient time to file and give notice of their claims, and to produce evidence in support thereof. That, in all cases where the claimants may have heretofore filed or given notice of their claims, within the times heretofore respectively prescribed by law, with the former Boards of Commissioners, and have not produced proof in support thereof, or where the proof was incomplete or insufficient, and the claim has been disallowed, that all such persons be allowed sufficient time to produce testimony in support of such claims, whether the said testimony shall relate to grants, concessions, warrants, or orders of survey, or to settlement, habitation, cultivation, occupation, or permission to settle, or in any other manner whatever. That all persons claiming lands in that State by virtue of any act of Congress heretofore made, and whose claims have been disallowed by the former Board of Commissioners in said State, who were authorized to examine and decide on the same, may withdraw from the records and files of said Board of Commissioners, and file anew with the Boards of Commissioners whose institution is hereby solicited, all the title papers, testimony and evidences of their claim, as in other cases not heretofore given notice of or filed.

The General Assembly further represent that, under the Spanish Government of this country, the proprietors of land fronting on the Mississippi, and the waters flowing from it, were bound to make and keep up the levees in front: this was made a condition in all grants of such lands; and to this day the said proprietors are bound, at their own expense, to keep up the same, for which the lands are liable to be exposed to sale in case of failure. In consideration of this servitude the front proprietor had the privilege, under the custom, of taking possession of as much land in rear of and adjoining his front ground as he thought proper to ask. Several concessions of such lands have at times been made to the same person in tracts of forty arpents in depth; and so strong was the conviction of the Government that the back grants were necessary to the support of the front concession, burdened as the proprietor was with the foregoing service, that they were considered as his property, and could not be granted to another without his consent.

That such were the laws and usages of the Government, is shown by its records containing decrees on the subject, which, in every instance, on the application of the front proprietor, declared null and void all grants made to a third person without the consent of the first grantee.

None of the laws, usages, or customs of the Spanish Government have been better established than the foregoing; and it has heretofore appeared to be the intention of Congress to confirm to all claimants the lands which they held under the Government, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs, although no formal grant has been made.

But from some misconstruction of the laws of Congress, no second concessions have been confirmed, unless it had been inhabited and cultivated prior to the 20th December, 1803, although most of the lands, being low swamp, are not susceptible of cultivation, but are only useful for timber.

From the aforesaid considerations, Congress will no doubt find it expedient to declare that the backs of the forty acre tracts on the Mississippi, and waters flowing therefrom, shall be confirmed to the front proprietor, and to order such an extension of the lines as will, in each case, give a depth of eighty acres, agreeably to the ancient usages, avoiding to approach nearer to any river or water course on which lands have been granted than will include one-half the extent or distance between such water courses.

The General Assembly, fully impressed with the conviction that it could never have been the intention of the contracting parties, in the act of cession, to place the rights of the inhabitants of Louisiana on a more feeble and uncertain basis than the one which bottomed those rights prior to that act, think that they perceive in the foregoing principles, for deciding the land titles of this State, and which they have respectfully recommended to the recognition of the National Legislature, the true standards of adjudication for securing a just conformity to the spirit and design of the treaty ceding this country to the United States, to the liberal practical operation of the ancient land system, to the rightful claims and solid interests of this highly important section of the Union, and to the distinguished character of justice and fidelity which the American Government has hitherto maintained equally towards the citizen, and its contracts with foreign nations.

The standard recommended to the National Legislature for deciding on the land titles of this country, will not, the General Assembly are persuaded, appear too loose and informal when the spirit and practice of the ancient land system are accurately known. To those accustomed to more rigid and precise rules in the judicial discussion of municipal rights, under a different system, they may probably appear too hazardous from their liberal tenor, but conventional obligations are susceptible of a less rigid construction; they are estimated more by moral standards than by specific legal interpretation; they adapt themselves equally to the spirit of the contract, and the nature of the subject upon which they act, avoiding, on either side, any factitious advantage, derived simply from mere legal informality.

The land system of this country was unquestionably of the most liberal and beneficial character; it was generally bottomed on the design common to the colonial policy of all European nations in relation to America, of increasing the population, the power, and defensive means of the province. In pursuance of this plan, the different administrations held out allurements to invite the emigrant, and to fix his residence in the country. The land system was the principal medium of giving to it successful operation. Monopolies of the soil were seldom permitted. The means of speculating in the lands, to the injury of the poorer classes, under good administrations, were really less practicable than under the present land system of the United States. Grants suitable to the condition of the applicant were extended to the most humble individual in the community. Those grants were made on simple application, and were guaranteed under the simplest forms. A right was often secured by mere occupancy, under the acquiescence of the provincial functionaries. Indeed, possession, without interfering with the claims of others, was a title under this generous policy which secured the claimant from intrusion or the inquisition of a legal tribunal. The lands were never held by the Government as a source of public revenue, and, of course, were liberally distributed to the honest settler, who was never compelled to resort to the ordinary modes of speculation and fraud to obtain a species of property which he could acquire by more simple means. The only equivalent for a concession of any necessary portion of the royal domain, was, in general, some evidence of an honest and sincere intention of occupying and improving it. In fine, the system yielded every encouragement to the population of the province, by furnishing modes of conceding the domain to settlers, which were best calculated to carry its first designation into complete effect.

The General Assembly are sensibly impressed with the conviction that those considerations go to show, in a very forcible manner, how few claims would have been really entitled to rejection, had they been fairly tested by the liberal spirit of the ancient system. Adjudications formed by such a general standard, modified in their application to the precise equity of the case, the General Assembly are induced to believe, would have given a very different result to the proceedings on this subject.

Resolved, That copies of the foregoing memorial be forthwith transmitted by the Governor to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, and that the former be instructed, and the latter requested, to lay the same before their respective Houses of the National Legislature, and that they use their best exertions to promote the views of the General Assembly set forth in this appeal.

CAHOKIA COMMON APPROPRIATED FOR THE SITE OF ILLINOIS CITY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 30, 1820.

Mr. THOMAS, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the inhabitants of the village of Cahokia, reported:

That the citizens of Cahokia, to whom, by an act of Congress passed on the 20th February, 1812, certain tracts of land were confirmed as a common, being desirous to establish a town upon a site more eligible than that of their former village, which had become unhealthy, appointed and authorized Messrs. Jesse B. Thomas, John Hay, John Hays, Nicholas Jarret, and Francis Turcotte, citizens of the said village, to lay out a town upon one of the tracts of land confirmed as a common to the citizens of Cahokia. That the said agents, in pursuance of the powers vested in them, proceeded to lay out the said town, which they called Illinois city. That they divided the lots so laid out among the said citizens of Cahokia, according to their respective interests therein, and to the universal satisfaction of the whole of them. That many of those lots have been sold; and that, in consequence of doubts having been entertained, contrary to the anticipations of the citizens of Cahokia, as to the validity of those proceedings and sales, much litigation is likely to take place, unless Congress shall pass a law confirming those proceedings. Therefore, the committee beg leave to report a bill.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN VINCENNES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, APRIL 12, 1820.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: The memorial and petition of the inhabitants of Vincennes and its vicinity, in the State of Indiana, descendants of French parents, and first settlers of the country on the Wabash and adjacent waters, respectfully sheweth:

That their ancestors, natives of France, and subjects of His Most Christian Majesty, as well as many of the present settlers, came, at a very early period of the last century, under the authority and protection of the Government of that nation, to establish themselves in trade and commerce with the natives possessing and inhabiting the country on the Wabash and adjacent waters. That, on their arrival, they made one of their principal establishments at a place afterwards called Post St. Vincents, possession of which, with a large district of country considered necessary for promoting the object of their establishment, was granted them by the nation, proprietors of the country, in their arduous, hazardous, and dangerous enterprise, and fully confirmed to them by the then usual mode of transfer of the nations and people possessing the country; and was ever after so considered and believed, both by the grantors and grantees, as fully vested in the said settlers as any grant ever made by any nation or tribe of Indians whatever to any Government, society, or people, either before or since known to your memorialists. And further, that, from the time of their establishment, for the greater part of the last century, they held quiet and undisturbed possession of said lands and establishment; nor was their right ever questioned by any power or authority whatever through all this lapse of time or vicissitudes, which, by the convulsions of the belligerent Powers and fate of war, had occasioned a transfer of your memorialists and their country from one Power to another. On the contrary, some years after the country was ceded, at the treaty of Paris, in 1763, by the French to the British Government, a company of British subjects, under the authority and co-operation of the Earl of Dunmore, then Governor of Virginia, in the year 1775, were about making, and did conclude a contract by their agent, Lewis Viviat, for a large section of country for their account and use. The chiefs and nations, among whom your memorialists were settled, and held the district before alluded to, expressly reserved to your memorialists the aforesaid grant therein described, lying between two parallel lines running through Point Coupée and the mouth of White river, on the Wabash, for the use of the French inhabitants of Post St. Vincent's; at which treaty or meeting a number of your memorialists were present, and can testify the desire of the chiefs and natives to preserve a country and residence for the French inhabitants that had settled among them.

When the predecessors of your memorialists arrived on the banks of the Wabash, their first object was to fix a station or factory for the accommodation of their trading and commercial pursuits, as well as a place of residence. This was effected by consent of the natives at the spot whereon Vincennes now stands, immediately adjoining the Piankeshaw village. Subsequently, a parcel of ground surrounding the towns, the upper and lower prairies, was apportioned for the use of individuals, around which one common fence was erected for a general enclosure; but, for the more convenient accommodation of many of the inhabitants, it was, by agreement, divided, and, under the direction of Colonel St. Ange and other commandants, portions of one, two, and seldom more than three arpents in front, and forty deep, were allotted to those that applied: not that the commandants or their sovereigns ever pretended to any right to the soil, but merely to regulate and confirm to such as desired establishments of this kind, the whole right of soil being in the settlers, admitted, protected, and cherished by the natives and chiefs, the original owners, and aided and supported by their sovereign, the Most Christian King. Numerous instances of lots in the village, and tracts in the vicinity, being thus allotted, some more and some less definitely designated, which are held by this and no other tenure to this day. Thus far, it is with pleasure they contemplate their arrival and residence on these waters, and satisfaction derived from their honest commercial pursuits, and happy social intercourse with the natives and each other. It may not be improper here to observe, although we are assured the fact is well known to several of your honorable body, that among the early settlers were to be found characters of the first rank in the nation from which they derived their existence, as well as some opulent, not a few affluent, and by far the greater part in comfortable circumstances, not only to support themselves in the comfortable enjoyment of the blessings which a fine climate and abundant means placed within their reach, but also to provide employment, and plentiful means of subsistence for numerous engagés or boatmen, and others under their care. Thus situated, contented and happy, never troubling, by their conduct or importunities, the Governments under which they, by the vicissitudes of human events, which have transferred them from one Government to another; never requiring any aids or assistance, but always ready and willing to furnish them whenever the just rights of the nation, or security of the frontiers, and protection of the people, required them. Confiding in the security they had always experienced under the crowns of France and Great Britain, though but subjects and colonists, their pleasure was increased, their joy was heightened, their happiness was complete, when they heard of, and were furnished with an opportunity of participating in the glorious struggle for, and enjoyments of, the rights and privileges of freemen and an independent Government. When their brethren of the Illinois apprized them of the contemplated attempt on the British station at this place, by General Clark, the garrison were kept in profound ignorance of the measure; when the army arrived several of your memorialists discovered them at an impassable bayou, they joyfully, promptly, furnished them the means of crossing. When the same army approached the town, then surrounded by water, occasioned by the usual overflows, and most of them nearly up to their necks in water, they were discovered by a number of your memorialists, their situation was concealed from the garrison, your memorialists united with the invading army, besieged and captured the whole of the British force, and obtained full possession of all this section of the country. Further, when the American settlers in this neighborhood were making efforts to establish themselves, they were compelled to secure themselves in a fort on the prairie; the natives were determined on extirpating them, but your memorialists resisted the measure, and protected them from the fury of the natives, (the two villages being separated only by a stockade and gate to pass into each other's towns.) The Indians, jealous of the connexion between the French and American settlers, fell upon the property of your memorialists, and deprived them of all their horses, killed upwards of sixty head of cattle, beside other considerable damage, for this protection and friendly preservation. It is within the recollection of many, that when the call of the country was made to make an attack on the Weaw towns, your memorialists were among the foremost in that expedition: when they were required to march to Tippecanoe, there was no hesitation, they cheerfully complied. In these and other exposures, they hazard nothing in saying, that there are few families among them who have not to deplore the loss of more or less of their connexions. But it were a waste of time to detail to your honorable bodies either the services or sufferings, the cheerfulness with which they furnished the former, or the patience with which they sustained the latter. So far for our active services. It is well known they never troubled the courts of justice with either civil or criminal business, and it is as well known they never called upon the public for the support of any among them: they furnished no paupers to burden society, nor mendicants to trouble the public tranquillity.

Information of the services, sufferings, and privations of your memorialists, coming to the knowledge of the Government of Virginia, His Excellency Patrick Henry, then Governor of that State, authorized and directed his agent, Colonel Todd, to acknowledge them, and to assure your memorialists that they should be compensated by grants of four hundred acres each, of which, however, they have never heard more on the subject since. Some time after this, your memorialists were informed that Samuel Baird, the surveyor for the Government, was about surveying and laying out lots of four hundred acres within the limits of the before described tract, which was resisted by all reasonable means in their power, and he requested to go to the lands of the Government; for, at this time, they were ignorant of the proceedings of your honorable body on the subject; but, by some management unknown to your memorialists, the measure was effected, and they were afterwards informed that it was in pursuance of an act of Congress, of March, 1791, conditioned that these lots were to be distributed as donations to the people of Vincennes upon their relinquishing their claim to a certain tract of country already described, which your memorialists respectfully represent they were wholly ignorant of, for it was scarcely to be believed they would relinquish their claim to so large a district for so small a pittance: the lots, at the time, having neither intrinsic nor productive value, and a very remote prospect of their ever possessing any whatever. This act, it will appear, took place soon after the adoption of the Federal Constitution. Your memorialists, inhabitants of a recently captured country, ignorant of your language, unacquainted with your laws, or the nature of your Government; having no representative entitled to a vote in your honorable body; distant from the seat of Government, having no one to represent their cause, or to inform them of your proceedings; without a friend, and without an advocate, and without crime, or charge, or even suspicion: all their services and sufferings were in a moment forgotten or disregarded, and your faithful friends and fellow-citizens at once deprived of the last means of supporting themselves, and their numerous offspring and dependants, and left to deplore their situation in a wilderness; not having retained even the friendship of the savages to console them, having lost this by their fidelity and attachment to a cause and country they so ardently and faithfully aided to support. Their trade and commerce nearly annihilated, scarcely a vestige of it left, they now have little to look for but a wretched old age for themselves, and a miserable existence for their posterity, in a country they once proudly conceived to be their own, under a Government they so ardently aided to establish, and which they trusted would have protected them from these impending evils. But they dare yet to hope; they yet still confide in the wisdom, the justice, the humanity, and sympathy of the Congress of the United States.

After long patiently waiting, and reflecting on their various services, sufferings, and privations, they were not a little encouraged by the conviction that, if a fair, correct view of all these circumstances was respectfully laid before your honorable body at this present auspicious period, when all the jarring conflicts of the powers of Europe were tranquillized; when our happy country is enjoying every blessing which a free and enlightened people can desire, and the Government anxiously solicitous for securing the tranquillity, and promoting the happiness of its citizens, that their voice would be heard, their situation considered, and that ample relief would be afforded them; that they might be permitted to participate with their numerous fellow-citizens whom they, with pleasure, are daily witnessing flowing, by thousands, to the enjoyment of the blessings and benefits which this fertile and promising section of the Union is offering, and which your memorialists have so long and faithfully been exerting themselves to preserve and prepare for them. Under these impressions a number of the ancient French inhabitants, many of whom have resided in this country for a considerable portion of the last century, assembled, and duly deliberated on their situation and prospects, agreed to call a meeting of the citizens, descendants of French parents, in this vicinity; which was had, and a general expression of their views obtained, greatly encouraged by the repeated expressions of sympathy and regard of the natives, chiefs, and others, of the Miami tribe, their former friends and neighbors, who have long been anxious for a renewal of their former habits of friendship and kind offices, and again enjoying that friendly intercourse which had so long uninterruptedly subsisted between them, as well as to enable them more effectually to co-operate with the proposals of the Government often made them, through their agents, of discontinuing their wandering habits of life, and of adopting those of industry and civilization. In evidence of which, they have made a voluntary offer, as will more fully appear by a speech and other documents herewith communicated, of a district or parcel of land lying within the limits of their possessions, for the accommodation and use of your memorialists and their descendants, should it meet the approbation of the Government to enable them more satisfactorily to effect this long desired object, as well as to compensate your memorialists for the injury done them by the sale of the land above stated, which had been granted them, but which was disposed of and conveyed to the Government of the United States.

As a further confirmation of the abovementioned desire and disposition, at a subsequent meeting or conference held with the Government agent, Thomas Posey, Esq., and the chiefs of the Miami tribe, these sentiments were fully and freely communicated; an account of which we are assured has been forwarded on to the proper Department for their information. Your memorialists have now only respectfully to add, that, in full reliance on the wisdom and justice of your honorable body, they will take the subject under their serious consideration, and that provision may be made authorizing the constituted authorities, at the next treaty to be holden with the Miami and neighboring tribes for the purchase of land and other purposes, to appropriate and secure, for the use of your memorialists and their descendants, such portion of land as the natives may be willing gratuitously to convey or otherwise, and which your honorable body may judge proper to compensate them for their various losses, privations, services, fidelity, and sufferings; and your memorialists and petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray:

H. LASSELLE,
JOSEPH LAVIOLETTE, his + mark.

No. 319.

[1st Session.]

APPLICATION FOR THE RETURN OF CERTAIN PAPERS FILED WITH THE COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED TO ADJUST THE YAZOO CLAIMS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, APRIL 13, 1820.

To the Senate of the United States:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, April 10, 1820.

The SECRETARY OF STATE, to whom, by a resolution of the Senate, of the 3d instant, the petition of Susannah Stewart was referred, to consider and report thereon, has the honor of submitting to the Senate the following report:

That it appears the certificates claimed by the petitioners were, on the 30th of December, 1814, deposited in the Department of State, annexed to a release, assignment, and power to the United States, given conformably to the first section of the "Act providing for the indemnification of certain claimants of public lands in the Mississippi Territory," passed on the 31st of March, 1814.

That, by the second section of the same act of the 31st of March, 1814, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Attorney General of the United States, were constituted and appointed a Board of Commissioners, with power to adjudge and determine upon the sufficiency of the releases, assignments, and powers thus deposited; and, upon their decision, the President of the United States was, by the third section of the same act, authorized and required to cause to be issued from the Treasury certificates of stock payable from the proceeds of the sales of the public lands in the Mississippi Territory.

That, by virtue of an act passed on the 23d of January, 1815, supplementary to the above, another Board of three commissioners was substituted, with all the powers of the original Board, and with the power to appoint a Secretary to receive, file, and preserve the papers, documents, and claims presented to, and received by, the Board, and to enter and record all their orders, proceedings, judgments, and determinations. That, by the sixth section of an act passed on the 3d of March, 1815, "further supplementary to the act of 31st of March, 1814," it was prescribed that the releases, assignments, and powers thus received, should be recorded by the secretary of the said commissioners, and the said records returned, with all other papers and documents in relation to said claims, when the business of the said commissioners should be closed, to the office of the Secretary of State.

That the papers now claimed by the petitioner are among those which had been returned to this office, conformably to this provision of the law. But as neither that act, nor any subsequent act or resolution of Congress has authorized the Secretary of State to dispose of any of the papers, the attorney of the petitioner was informed, upon his application to obtain them, that the authority of Congress was alone competent to warrant the restoration of them to the petitioner.

The petitioner alleges that the certificates referred to in her petition are her property, and that she has never parted with her right; upon which it is to be observed, that she did, conformably to the act of the 31st of March, 1814, release and assign to the United States all her right, title, interest, and demand, in the trust and benefit of the lands for which the certificates were issued; and the certificates themselves are believed to have been thereby made the property of the United States, and that the petitioner could thenceforth have no claim to them either in law or equity.

But, by the decisions of the Board of Commissioners, the proportion of indemnity allowed by them for the claim of Susannah Stewart, and in support of which these certificates were the vouchers, was assigned to the Directors of the New England Mississippi Land Company, and they were required to transmit all the certificates of that description, as soon as practicable, to the Secretary of the Board; it being expedient that they should be cancelled, on their holders receiving the indemnity allotted to them. The only object, therefore, for which the directors of that company can exact the production of the certificates by the petitioner, is, that they may be enabled to transmit them to the Secretary of the Board, by whom they must, according to the direction of the act of the 3d of March, 1815, be again deposited at the Department of State.

As the certificates are already in the Department, and can be taken from it only for the purpose of being ultimately brought back to it, the inflexibility with which the directors are represented to require that the petitioner should produce them, is, perhaps, unnecessary for their security. But as, while they adhere to it, the petitioner is debarred from receiving the proportion of indemnity to which she is entitled, which they, as her trustees, have received, and which she represents them ready to assign to her, on her producing the certificates, it is respectfully submitted that an act of Congress, authorizing the delivery of the certificates to her, and prescribing that they shall be returned by the directors of the company, conformably to the decisions of the commissioners, would be subservient to the purposes of justice.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

LANDS ALLOTTED TO THE CULTIVATION OF THE VINE AND OLIVE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, APRIL 21, 1820.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 18, 1820.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate, of the 17th instant, referring to this Department the memorial of John M. Chapron, and others, in behalf of the French emigrants engaged in the cultivation of the vine and olive, praying that the act of the 3d March, 1817, authorizing the grant of four townships of the public lands, in the then Territory of Alabama, to the said emigrants, upon the conditions therein expressed, may be modified so that each emigrant, upon complying with the conditions of the contract, made in pursuance of that act, and upon the payment of the purchase money in proportion to his separate interest, may be entitled to receive a patent for the land separately allotted to him in that contract, I have the honor to report that such a modification of the said act does not appear to be expedient. The principal object of the grant is not that a small number of tracts of land should be cultivated in vines and olives, but that the whole tract should be settled by persons understanding the culture of those plants. Such a settlement would furnish the means of rapidly extending the cultivation, at least of the vine, so as to supply the United States with the wine necessary for their consumption. The reservation is directed to be made in favor of an association, and not to individuals. The condition that the whole of the purchase money shall be paid previous to the issuing of any patent, is in strict conformity to the general object of the act. If the prayer of the petitioners should be granted, the tracts, of but little value, would be suffered to revert to the Government, whilst all those of great value would become individual property. The terms of the grant are conceived to be sufficiently liberal to induce its acceptance without further relaxation.

The intimation of the petitioners that there is an apparent ambiguity in the condition of which they complain, does not seem to be well founded. A bare inspection of the act must have convinced them that the whole of the purchase money is to be paid before a patent can issue. The petitioners have, therefore, engaged in this enterprise with a full knowledge of the terms and conditions, so far as they are expressed in the act, upon which their eventual interest was to depend.

The same cannot be said of the terms and conditions of the contract. Many of them had advanced money, and incurred responsibilities before the contract was made.

It has been represented to this Department that about one-fourth of the tracts are not cultivable, and that the condition that each allotment or tract shall be settled and cultivated will be extremely onerous. From an examination of the act it may be inferred that settlements were not necessarily required but upon each half section, as the number of associates were to be equal to the number of half sections in four townships.

If the contract should be modified so that the whole number of settlements should be equal to the number of half sections, the intention of the act would be carried into effect. This modification, however, can only be made by law, as the Secretary of the Treasury, after having made the contract, has no power to change its conditions.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The honorable the PRESIDENT of the Senate.

LAND CLAIMS WEST OF PEARL RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 12, 1820.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 11, 1820.

I have the honor to transmit, herewith, a copy of the report of the Land Commissioners at St. Helena, and a copy of their list of actual settlers, dated 24th December, 1819, and 17th March, 1820.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

The honorable SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE, ST. HELENA, C. H., December 24, 1819.

Enclosed we have the honor to transmit you a list of the settlers who have entered their claims since the 23d August, 1819, the time when the Register's office was opened. By reference to the list it will appear that many claims have been entered, originating from settlements made in 1818 or 1819.

We have received entries of settlements made since the 20th April, 1814, because, in the first place, we thought it probable that pre-emptional rights would be extended to the time of the passage of the law (3d March, 1819,) and we know no reason why such extension of the time should not be granted; and, in the second place, we did not feel ourselves authorized to reject any applications which were made for the entries of claims. From our acquaintance with this our district we do believe that rights of preference extended to the 3d of March, 1819, under the provisions of the law of that time, would be essentially serviceable to its population, and would completely meet the views of Congress, which governed them at the passage of that law.

As to persons who settled anterior to the 15th of April, 1813, or prior to the time to which pre-emptional claims extended, we do not conceive it necessary to make any remarks. As to claims posterior to that date, we have respectfully expressed our opinions.

We have the honor to be, sir, with considerations of esteem, most respectfully yours,

FULWAR SKIPWITH, Recorder.

Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS, Commissioner General Land Office.

N. B.—Accompanying you have a list of the certificates issued for complete and incomplete titles for settlement claims.

CHARLES S. COSBY, Register.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE, ST. HELENA, March 17, 1820.

We have the honor, herewith, to forward you an abstract or analysis of such titles, complete and incomplete, as have been exhibited to us since the opening of our offices. In making this analysis, we have adopted the form used by the former commissioner, (J. O. Cosby.) We believe it embraces all the essentials requisite to enable Congress, in their investigations, to discover, at one view, the character and description of each individual claim. In relation to imperfect titles, dated posteriorly to the 20th of December, 1803, and reported by us for confirmation, we have been governed entirely by an affirmative answer to this inquiry, would the claimant, under the law of the 3d of March, 1819, be entitled to a section of land in virtue of his settlement? We do not recognise any right in the Government of Spain to dispose of the lands of a Territory of which she held tortuous and illegal possession, but we do consider that the fair and bona fide inhabitation and cultivation of a tract of land under her auspices ought, in justice and equity, to entitle the party claiming to a recognition of his title by the Government of the United States.

Register A, No. 2, embraces Spanish titles consummated by the legitimate authorities anterior to 1803, and a few British patents confirmed by the Government of Spain. In relation to those claims we conceive it unnecessary to make any remarks. They are certainly entitled to an unqualified confirmation.

Register B, No. 2, embraces orders of survey. Plats and certificates, &c., such as emanated from the Spanish Government prior to 1803, we considered as of right entitled to perfection by the Government of the United States; and, as to those which are dated subsequently to that time, we have already stated our reasons why we think them entitled to the liberality of our Government. In every case where we have reported favorably, in consequence of the inhabitation and cultivation, we have required and received, in establishment of those material facts, satisfactory testimony.

Register E comprehends such claims as were reported for rejection by the former commissioner, and have been renewed by the parties interested. By reference to that report (the present Register designates the No.) it will be discovered that, generally, no inhabitation or cultivation was mentioned. It was a prevalent opinion with such as claimed under complete titles, that their patents required no collateral support; and, hence it is, that they were wholly indifferent as to proofs of occupancy. They have now discovered their mistake, and again exhibited their claims accompanied by those proofs. Our opinion, in relation to titles dated subsequently to the 20th December, 1803, we presume is applicable here. We beg leave, respectfully, to state that, in our estimation, the claims contained in register E ought to be confirmed under the provisions and limitations of the law of the 3d of March, 1819.

We have the honor to be, sir, with considerations of high esteem, most respectfully yours, &c.

FULWAR SKIPWITH, Receiver.

Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

No. 322.

[2d SESSION.]

LAND CLAIMS EAST OF PEARL RIVER, AND IN THE TOWN OF MOBILE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, NOVEMBER 17, 1820.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 16, 1820.

I have the honor to transmit, herewith, copies of the reports of the land commissioners at Jackson court-house, and a copy of a letter, dated 17th of August, 1820, which accompanied them; the reports are numbered 1 to 9, inclusive.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

The Hon. the PRESIDENT of the Senate.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE AT JACKSON COURT-HOUSE, August 17, 1820.

In conformity with a requisition of the 9th section of the act of Congress, entitled "An act for adjusting the claims to land, and establishing land offices in the districts east of the island of New Orleans," I have the honor to report lists or registers of all the claims to land which have been filed in this office, with the substance of the evidence in support thereof, and such remarks upon the claims as appeared to me to be proper.

In consequence of the suggestion in your letter of the 15th of November last, evidence of claims to lots in the town of Mobile has been received, which you will find in register No. 7.

Register No. 9, and the accompanying papers, contain a full report of the evidence, and the opinion of the Register and Receiver in relation to the conflicting claims of Joseph McCandless and Regis Bernody.

I have the honor, &c.

W. BARTON, Register.

Hon. J. MEIGS, Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington city.

Remarks by the Register.—None but persons who have both inhabited and cultivated have been considered by the Register and Receiver as actual settlers; although many others, who have only either inhabited or cultivated, claimed to be registered as such. It is believed that some of the settlers are upon lands claimed by other persons under written evidence of title, but it is impossible to particularize them, as so few maps or plats accompany the claims.

* During French and British Governments.

Remarks by the Register.—Some of the preceding claims have emanated from commandants whose authority to grant permission to settle did not extend beyond eight hundred arpents, to which quantity it is conceived such should be limited. The instructions of Gayoso and Morales seem to recognise a right in the settler after three years' inhabitation and cultivation, commenced within one year from the date of the permission or order of settlement, and continued for three consecutive years. In all such cases it is supposed the claim ought to be confirmed, although the land has not been regularly inhabited and cultivated afterwards, if it has not been subsequently granted by the Spanish Government.

Remarks by the Register.—Most of the preceding claims have been forfeited under the Spanish law, for want of inhabitation and cultivation; nor do they appear to be entitled to confirmation under any law of the United States. A few are granted by persons whose authority to grant is doubted, or at most upon so extensive a scale. In some cases the inhabitation and cultivation have not been commenced within the time required by the Spanish regulations; and, in others, have not been continued the requisite period by the original claimant or grantee, who had no power to alienate before he had complied with the conditions specified in the grant.

These claims were all reported against by the former commissioner, the most of them as having been forfeited under the Spanish law, for want of inhabitation and cultivation. They have been revived under the seventh section of the act of the 3d March, 1819, and additional testimony has been offered in their support. But the testimony, in most cases, does not amount to satisfactory proof of inhabitation and cultivation, according to the Spanish regulations; and in those cases where the proof of inhabitation and cultivation is satisfactory, there are other reasons apparent which invalidate the claims, as in the following, viz: Nos. 96, 99, 89, 93, 101, in report No. 6, which claims are founded on sales, the terms of which do not appear to have been complied with by the purchasers. Claim No. 104, rep. 3, was reported for confirmation by the late commissioner, but not confirmed (in the opinion of the Register and Receiver) by the act of the 3d March, 1819. It should not, therefore, have been revived, and was acted on only through inadvertence. W. BARTON, Register.

W. BARTON, Register.
WM. BARNETT, Receiver.

Remarks by the Register on the preceding claims.

The evidence in relation to the above mentioned claims to lots in the town of Mobile, has been collected in compliance with a suggestion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, by whom the Register and Receiver were instructed that town lots, where the titles were incomplete, were not within their jurisdiction, but that it was desirable the evidence in such claims should be collected in order to enable Congress finally to dispose of them.

Many of these claims were reported against by the former commissioner, and have been revived in virtue of the seventh section of the act of the 3d March, 1819, and additional testimony offered in their support. Grants of town lots, it is believed, were made in a manner, and upon conditions, essentially different from those of country tracts or farms. In grants of the latter, cultivation as well as inhabitation was required, as much for the comfort of the settler, who derived his subsistence therefrom, as by the policy of the State, which demanded the strengthening of the province by a population of actual settlers—residents upon the soil which they cultivated. The same reason does not apply to town lots, which are never granted in sufficient quantity to admit of cultivation to any useful extent. Town lots, it is believed, were granted only on condition (if any condition were annexed) of being built upon and inhabited within a limited time, and for a continued period. By the thirty-fourth article of the instructions of Morales, it is declared that all lots or public places which should be found to be vacant, either in New Orleans or in the bourgs or villages, or those which might thereafter be established, should be sold for cash. Most of the above claims have originated since the date of the instructions, (17th July, 1799,) are founded on gratuitous concessions, not on actual sales for cash, as required, and are therefore void. A rigid adherence, however, either to the letter or spirit of the instructions, seems not to have been observed even by the Intendant himself, who, as will appear by a reference to the claim of William E. Kennedy, No. 23, subsequently made that concession in violation of his own rule, and without assigning even a plausible reason therefor. If it were consistent with the nature of his duty, the Register would endeavor to show the impolicy of holding the claimants of lots in Mobile to strict proof of compliance with the Spanish regulations for the allotment of lands. He will only remark, that it has come within his personal observation that a very large proportion of the granted lots has been built upon, and is inhabited by the grantees, and those claiming under them, who are generally the ancient native inhabitants; and the circumstance of the uninterrupted possession they were permitted to hold of them under the Spanish Government, would seem to entitle them to the favor of Congress in quieting them in their claims. The Register will only further add, in relation to this branch of the subject, that the lots granted by the French and Spanish authorities, whilst those Governments respectively held possession of the country, do not conform in their limits or bounds with the original British map or plan of the town, certified by the Spanish Surveyor General, Trudeau, and now in possession of the principal deputy surveyor, Mr. Dinsmore; which fact appeared from the survey recently made by him of the public ground on which Fort Charlotte stands. Should it be determined to adhere rigidly to this or any other plan, great confusion must inevitably ensue in attempting to reconcile the conflicting boundaries, and serious injury result to many whose principal property consists in their lots and habitations. In relation to actual settlers, it will be sufficient to remark, that they comprise the principal mercantile population of the place; that their improvements are generally the most expensive; and that they cover the most valuable vacant ground in the town, with the exception of that around Fort Charlotte. The unsettled and uncertain tenure by which the granted lots are held has deterred most of the considerate settlers from purchasing, and determined them to build on public ground, and depend on the liberality of Congress to grant them a right of pre-emption at a reasonable price.

No. 1.—A grant from the Spanish Government, issued the 20th June, 1804, by John V. Morales. This grant is void under the fourteenth section of the act of 26th March, 1804, which enacts that all grants for lands within the territories ceded by the French republic to the United States, by the treaty of the 30th April, 1803, the title whereof was, at the date of the treaty of St. Ildefonso, in the crown, Government, or nation of Spain, and every act and proceeding subsequent thereto, of whatsoever nature, towards the obtaining any grant, title, or claim to such lands, and under whatsoever authority transacted or pretended, "should be, and the same were thereby, declared to be, and to have been, from the beginning, null, void, and of no effect in law or equity." Nor can it derive any relief from the equity of the provisos contained in the said section, which require, first, that the grantee should be an actual settler upon the land so granted; secondly, that such grant should not secure to the grantee more than one mile square of land, together with such other and further quantity as therefore had been allowed for the wife and family of such actual settler, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government. It is further to be remarked, in relation to the merits of this claim, first, that, from the date of the application for the purchase, the Spanish authorities in Louisiana must have been apprized of the cession of the province by France to the United States, and could not, in good faith, make grants of lands, and especially such excessive sales, after such knowledge; secondly, the title in form was not issued until the 20th June, 1804, more than fourteen months after the cession of the province, and six months after its actual delivery to the United States.

No. 2.—This claim is founded on an order of survey issued by Governor Miro in favor of Louis Boisdore, confirmed to his widow, Marguerite Daussin, by the Intendant Morales, 4th April, 1808. Although a map or conjecture plan of the limits of the above claim, made by the Surveyor General, Pintado, the 30th May, 1810, accompanies the title papers, yet it does not appear to be the result of an actual survey, nor to have been made with geometrical precision, but merely intended for the direction of such persons as might be employed to make the survey: no survey appears to have been made. This claim extends from the bay of St. Louis to the mouth of Pearl river, and is supposed to cover several hundred thousand acres.

No. 3.—This claim was recommended for confirmation by the former commissioner, William Crawford, Esq., as will appear by reference to his report No. 6, claim No. 103, [see page 11] which report he was afterwards induced to alter, as appears by his letter, dated the 23d November, 1816, annexed to the record of the claim, in consequence of his belief "that it was fraudulent, and ought to be rejected." Although we have received no instructions from the General Land Office concerning the claim, yet the intimation conveyed by the annexation of Mr. Crawford's letter was too strong to be disregarded, and we assumed the responsibility of refusing to grant a certificate of confirmation, and to consider the claim in the light of a rejected one, which might be revived, and additional evidence adduced in its support. The claim hath been revived, and additional evidence adduced, which amounts to a full proof of its inhabitation and cultivation according to the Spanish regulations; and the claimant disavows that his grant does, or ever was intended to, include Fort Charlotte or any of the public buildings. In order to obtain a full view of the merits of the claim, and more especially to ascertain whether it would actually encroach on the fort, and the other public grounds and lots in Mobile, we have deemed it advisable to direct the principal deputy surveyor, Silas Dinsmore, Esq., to make an accurate survey and plat of the said land; upon the return of which, we will make a supplemental and full report of the claim, accompanied by our opinion of its justice and validity.

Report 3, claim 48.—The claim of Joseph McCandless is founded on the certificate of Cayetano Perez, commandant of Mobile, dated the 28th November, 1811; a copy whereof is hereto annexed, which states "that the Intendant General sent to him, for information, a memorial presented by Charles Proffit, soliciting a tract of land at Mobile Point, and the tract of land above mentioned, which he had solicited at the time I. de Osorno was commandant of Mobile; which memorial, with the information required, said Perez returned to Pensacola to the Intendant. This inchoate claim of Charles Proffit, (if it deserves the appellation,) on the 1st day of April, 1812, was transferred by said Proffit to James Bready, who, on the 14th of the same month, transferred the same to the claimant. It is alleged by the claimant that the title papers under which he claims were destroyed by fire, which consumed the records of Pensacola in 1811; but it does not appear that any subsequent proceedings had taken place in relation to the memorial of the said Proffit in the office of the Intendancy, after its reference to the commandant of Mobile for information, and the transmission of such information to the office of the Intendancy. According to the Spanish regulations, the information required by the Intendancy in relation to applications for land, is the incipient proceeding which serves as the basis for such subsequent proceedings as may be determined upon by the Intendancy; and this information is directed in most cases to the ascertaining whether 'the lands solicited be vacant,' and whether the grant of them would not operate to the detriment and prejudice of third persons." Commandant Perez certifies that he returned to Pensacola the information required, in obedience to the order of the Intendant; but he does not state whether the information forwarded was favorable or adverse to the application of Proffit. Admitting, however, that the usual proceedings had taken place in relation to this claim, it is in proof, from the testimony of James Innerarity, hereto annexed, marked (A, No. 3,) "that Proffit never did, either by himself or agent, at any time before or subsequent to his application, much less within three years, (the time required by the instructions of Gayoso and Morales,) establish himself upon or cultivate the said land; and, consequently, having entirely failed to comply with this essential requisite in all gratuitous concessions, this concession, according to the accustomed stipulations and limitations, became void, and the alienation of it by Proffit, the grantee, must have been in direct opposition to both its letter and spirit.

Report 10, claim 11.—The claim of Regis Bernody is founded on a conveyance made to him by Joseph Gaspar Munora at Pensacola, which passed through the office of the commandant, as all authentic conveyances must have done in the Spanish posts of the Intendancy, and recognizes the original grant or concession of the same made by the Baron de Carondelet in favor of said Munora, on the 3d March, 1792; which grant was produced by Munora on the day of the execution of the conveyance to Bernody. The proof of the inhabitation and cultivation by Bernody (until forcibly expelled by McCandless) is complete, and the inference is strong that Munora, the grantee, did comply with the essential conditions of the grant, inasmuch as the instructions of Morales expressly charge the "notaries and commandants not to pass any conveyances of lands, where the conditions of the grant were not previously proved to have been complied with;" and, independently of this consideration, the declaration of Munora, in the conveyance to Bernody, that it was "the same land that Antonio Espejo worked with his permission;" made, too, at a time when it could not be imagined that any rival claim would arise, furnishes a violent presumption that the land was inhabited or cultivated by or for Munora agreeably to the Spanish regulations. A full report of all the evidence presented by the conflicting claimants is herewith presented.

Upon the best view we have been able to take of the relative merits of these claims, we are decidedly of opinion that the claim of Joseph McCandless ought to be rejected, and that of Regis Bernody confirmed.

APPENDIX.

Report of evidence in relation to the conflicting claims of Joseph McCandless and Regis Bernody.

DISTRICT EAST OF PEARL RIVER, February 28, 1820.

To the Register of the Land Office, and Receiver of Public Moneys for the district east of Pearl river, acting as commissioners, &c. You will be pleased to take notice that I protest against a certificate issuing to Joseph McCandless for the place whereon the said McCandless resides, called the Brickyard, situate on the west side of Mobile bay, about one mile below the city of Mobile; the said place having been confirmed to me under the report of the late commissioner, William Crawford, Esq., by the act of Congress passed the 3d of March, 1819, for adjusting the land claims of this district.

REGIS (R. B.) BERNODY, his x mark.

A.—No. 1.

Testimony in support of the claim of Regis Bernody.

Be it known that I, José Gaspar Munora, inhabitant of the city of Havana, and at this time of this place, acknowledge that I sell, bona fide and effectually, to Regis Bernody, free mulatto, of the town of Mobile, fifteen arpents of land front, on the eastern side of the river, and on the river and marshy lands, with forty deep, to the west; bounded on the south by lands belonging to Mr. Francis Fontanillas, on the north by those said to belong to Mr. Favre, formerly interpreter for His Majesty, of the Choctaw nation; it being the same tract of land that the late Antonio Espejo cultivated with my permission, and which was granted to me by His Excellency the Baron de Carondelet, formerly Governor General of these provinces, as may be seen by the title therefor, which I deliver to the purchaser, bearing date the 3d of March, 1792. And the said land I sell to the aforesaid Regis Bernody, free from incumbrance and mortgage, neither of which there is in this Government, for and in consideration of the sum of $1,130, to me cash in hand paid, the receipt whereof I do hereby acknowledge; wherefore, I give up and relinquish all right, title, and claim, which, to the said land, I had or held, and the whole thereof I yield, renounce, and transfer to the purchaser, his heirs and assigns, in order that, as legitimate owner thereof, he may possess, exchange, sell, or alienate it at pleasure, by virtue of this writing, which in his favor I give, whereby he may be seen to have acquired legal possession, without the necessity of any other proof, wherefrom I exempt him, and oblige myself to guaranty, in every lawful form, the legality of this sale to the extent of all my property, present and to come, with submission to the power and justice of His Majesty, whereby I may be compelled to the fulfilment thereof; whereupon I relinquish the laws in my favor, with the general in form that forbids it.

And I, Don Peter Palao, captain of the Louisiana regiment of infantry, attorney for the aforesaid Regis Bernody, accept, in his name, for him, his heirs, and successors, the present deed of conveyance, and, by virtue of it, and of my instructions, I also accept the purchase of the fifteen arpents of land front, by forty deep, for the price and on the conditions herein before stipulated, with which, in his name, I acknowledge myself to be satisfied. In testimony whereof, these presents are executed in Pensacola, this 24th day of March, 1813.

I, Don Mauricio de Zunega, colonel of the army, political and military Governor pro tem. of this place, and of the province of West Florida, certify that the parties have agreed as above.

Witnesses: Antonio Molina, Ignatio Cruzat, and Anastasio Montesdevid.

Witnesses of assistance, for want of a notary public: Domingo Sausa and José Ignacio Rebollar, who have signed with me, José Gaspar Munora, Peter Palao.

Before me, Mauricio de Zunega, Domingo Sausa, José Ignacio Rebollar.

I certify this to be conformable to the original, which exists in the archives of this Government; and, at the request of the party interested, I give the present on the pages of common paper, the sealed not being in use.

Peter Lorendine, being sworn, saith that the land claimed by Regis Bernody, and lying on the east side of Mobile river, has been occupied by said Bernody about four years, for the purpose of making bricks.

Though the papers call for the land on the east side of Mobile river, claimant and witness say the land lies on the west side of said river.

NEW EVIDENCE.

Land Office east of Pearl river.

Before the undersigned, Register and Receiver of said office, personally appeared James Innerarrity, of this town, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, as far back as 1802, in the month of October or November, knew the lands claimed by Regis Bernody and by Joseph McCandless, and that there was then a small brickery worked thereon, but by whom he did not inquire; that he afterwards knew Antonio Espejo to have worked it, and subsequently, in 1809 or 1810, he knew Regis Bernody to be in possession of the land, who was supplanted by McCandless, under a conveyance from Charles Proffit; that he, the deponent, knew Proffit, and was, for some time, intimate with him, but never heard from him that he had any claim to this land; that he learned it, however, by public report that he had obtained some species of permit from Commandant Osorno, who was commandant here till towards the close of 1805, or beginning of 1806; that said permit must have been irregular in its nature, or surreptitiously obtained, on account of the land being in previous occupancy, and that, allowing it to have been regular, it must have become forfeited by the non-occupancy of Proffit, who never, to this deponent's perfect knowledge, struck a hoe into the ground, or made any improvement thereon, by himself, or by others on his account; that the certificate given by Lasada, recorded in the commissioner's books, is irrelevant and irregular, inasmuch as even allowing them to have been burnt, some notice of them would have remained in the office, through which they had to pass previously, viz: the Intendancy; and, moreover, the originals ought to have remained in Mobile, the regular course being to keep them in the archives, and to furnish copies to the parties interested for their purposes; that the claim of Proffit, such as it is, was offered for a trifling consideration to this deponent, by James Bready, previous to its conveyance to McCandless, but was rejected under an impression of its irregularity.

MOBILE, March 23, 1818.

I certify that, shortly after Mobile was taken possession of by the United States, I was an officer of the United States' service, and employed in and about Mobile; that I applied to Regis Bernody, living in Mobile, to purchase from him some brick for Fort Charlotte, which were made, with the exception of burning, and which were on a place now occupied by Mr. McCandless, and that the said Regis told me that he could not supply me, in consequence of the said McCandless beating and driving off all his hands which were sent to work at the said brickyard.

[TRANSLATION.]

I, Don John Miguel de Lasada, minister of the royal revenues of the Indies, honorary Contador and Treasurer of the royal coffers of the principal ministry of West Florida, commissary of war, and officer of the royal revenues, certify that Mr. Charles Proffit preferred a memorial some years past, (en los años ultimos,) soliciting a tract of land in the district of Baton Rouge, which, having been submitted to the inspection of the officer of the revenue, was returned in order that the ordinary steps might be taken thereon to a conclusion, and not having read the said memorial throughout, I cannot affirm positively that he solicited the eighteen thousand arpents expressed in the memorial now presented by him soliciting that quantity, although I can certify that he preferred that petition wherein he alleges that he sold the lands he possessed in the said district to defray the expenses he incurred during the time he was employed in making a map of the coast of Florida, for the use of Don Vincente Folch, commandant thereof, which, in the month of September, 1811, was submitted to my inspection, with another petition of the said Proffit, wherein he solicited a small tract of vacant land lying in the district of Mobile; but there happened, unfortunately, a fire early in the morning of the 24th of October following, whereby the books and public records of this Government were burnt, without the possibility of saving a single paper, in consequence of the rapidity of the flames, and in which was also burnt the petition of Proffit, the titles therein solicited not having been issued previously to that event.

In testimony whereof, and in order that it may answer the purposes of said Proffit, I give this certificate, at his request, in virtue of a marginal decree, passed on the 1st instant, by the Intendant and Superintendant General, sub-delegate of the royal revenues of this province, in the practical ministry of Pensacola, this 7th of August, 1812.

I, Don Cayetano Perez, captain of the Louisiana regiment of infantry, civil and military commandant of the town of Mobile, and of the jurisdiction thereof, certify that the Intendant General of this province sent to me, for information, a memorial preferred by Mr. Charles Proffit, soliciting a tract of land on Mobile point, and another betwixt the lands of Mr. Favre and Messrs. John Forbes & Co., which he had solicited at the time when Don Jonquin De Osorno was commandant of Mobile; which memorial, with the information required, I returned to Pensacola to the Intendant.

QUANTITY OF LAND PURCHASED FROM THE INDIANS; THE QUANTITY SURVEYED AND SOLD; THE QUANTITY REMAINING UNSOLD; THE AMOUNT EXPENDED FOR PURCHASING, SURVEYING, AND SELLING THE PUBLIC LANDS; AND THE AMOUNT OF SALES SINCE THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, NOVEMBER 17, 1820.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 16, 1820.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate of the United States, of the 3d of April, 1820, directing that the Secretary of the Treasury "cause to be prepared and laid before the Senate at the commencement of the next session of Congress, a statement of moneys annually appropriated and paid, since the declaration of independence, for purchasing from the Indians, surveying, and selling the public lands, showing, as near as may be, the quantities of land which have been purchased, the number of acres which have been surveyed, the number sold, and the number which remain unsold; the amount of sales, the amount of forfeitures, the sums paid by purchasers, and the sums due from the purchasers, and from Receivers in each land district," I have the honor to submit the enclosed letter of the Register of the Treasury, with the documents to which it refers, marked from A to F inclusive, which contain the several statements required by the resolution.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

Hon. JOHN GAILLARD,

President of the Senate pro tempore.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, REGISTER'S OFFICE, November 8, 1820.

I have the honor to transmit certain statements which have been formed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office under your instructions; also, by the Second Auditor, and the Register of the Treasury, for the purpose of complying with a resolution of the Senate of the United States, passed the 3d April, 1820.

The Second Auditor of the Treasury, in his statement marked A, shows the sums which have been paid, and remain to be paid, under treaties made with the Indian tribes, to indemnify them for their cessions of lands to the United States, and otherwise, amounting to - - - $2,542,916

Statement B exhibits the annual appropriations made by law on account of the surveys of public lands, from the 4th March, 1789, to the 31st December 1819, amounting to - - -	$1,802,140 22
From which are deducted so much thereof, carried to surplus fund - - -	125,651 14
		1,676,489

The payments for the surveys of land from the declaration of independence to the 4th March, 1789, were - - -		24,227
		$4,243,632

Statement C shows the amount of lands sold before the opening of the land offices, and comprises a period from the declaration of independence to that time, amounting in acres to 1,536,552, in money or public sales - - - $9,44,244

Statements D and E show the total amount of land sold at the several land offices from their institution to 30th September, 1819, - - - 18,601,930, sold for 44,054,452

Total sales - - -	Acres 20,138,482	$45,098,696
-------------------	------------------	--------------

The said statements also exhibit—

The total amount of lands surveyed in the several land office districts at	Acres 72,805,092
Whereof sold - - -	18,601,930

To be sold - - -	54,203,162
------------------	-------------------

And that there have been surveyed for military bounties, - - -	Acres 12,315,360
Of the sales made to the 30th of September, 1819, there had been paid by purchasers - - -	$22,229,180
And remain to be paid - - -	22,000,657

The Commissioner of the General Land Office, in his statement marked F, estimates the whole amount purchased from the Indians, under the various treaties and cessions, at one hundred and ninety-one millions nine hundred seventy-eight thousand five hundred and thirty-six acres. This statement exhibits the date of the treaties, and the places where held; the tribes with whom made; the estimated number of acres ceded by each tribe, with remarks in relation to the cessions.

I have the honor to be, sir, with great respect, your most obedient and most humble servant,

JOSEPH NOURSE.

[2d SESSION.]

CLAIM TO LAND IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, NOVEMBER 22, 1820.

Mr. COOKE, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Nicholas Jarrott, of the State of Illinois, reported:

That, as the legal representative of one François Arcort, the petitioner states he is possessed of a certificate of confirmation for four hundred acres of land in said State. That the confirmation is in virtue of an improvement made in the year 1780 on a valuable tract of land near Fort Peoria, on the Illinois river. That he supposed himself entitled to the land upon which the improvement was made, and that he accordingly made application to the Surveyor General to have his land surveyed, and his claim located accordingly; but that, when he applied, he was informed that the time had expired within which such locations were required to be made; that his claim has, therefore, never been located, and prays for relief.

The committee, upon an examination of the documents accompanying the petition, find that a certificate of confirmation did issue to the petitioner, as is set out in his petition, and that, by the certificate of William Rector, Surveyor General, bearing date the 20th of September, 1820, it appears that no location thereof had at that time been made.

The committee also find that all such locations were required to be made within a specified tract of country, reserved for the purpose of satisfying such claims, which tract did not embrace the improvement of the petitioner.

The committee, deeming it inconsistent with the spirit of the Government to take advantage either of the ignorance or unintentional laches of any of its citizens, are of opinion that the petitioner is entitled to relief, and report a bill accordingly.

CLAIM OF THE MARQUIS DE MAISON ROUGE, ON THE WASHITA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 22, 1820.

Mr. LOWRIE, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Daniel W. Coxe, one of the owners of the claim of the Marquis De Maison Rouge, on the Washita river, in the State of Louisiana, made the following report:

On the 17th of March, 1795, the Governor of Louisiana entered into a contract with the Marquis De Maison Rouge, of which the following is a copy:

We, Francis Lewis Hector, Baron de Carondelet, knight of Malta, brigadier-general of the royal armies of His Catholic Majesty, military and civil governor of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, Don Francis Rendon, Intendant of the army, and deputy superintendent of the royal domains in the said provinces; Don Joseph de Orue, knight of the royal and distinguished order of Charles the Third, principal accountant for the royal chests of this army, exercising the functions of fiscal of the royal domains, declare, that we agree and contract with the Senor Marquis de Maison Rouge, an emigrant French knight, who has arrived in this capital from the United States, to propose to us to bring into these provinces thirty families, who are also emigrants, and who are to descend the Ohio for the purpose of forming an establishment with them on the lands bordering upon the Washita, designed principally for the culture of wheat, and the erection of mills for manufacturing flour, under the following conditions:

1st. We offer, in the name of His Catholic Majesty, whom God preserve, to pay out of the Royal Treasury, two hundred dollars to every family composed of two white persons fit for agriculture, or for the arts useful and necessary to this establishment, as house or ship carpenters, blacksmiths, and locksmiths; and four hundred to those having four laborers; and, in the same way, one hundred to those having no more than one useful laborer, or artificer, as before described, with his family.

2d. At the same time we promise, under the auspices of our sovereign monarch, to assist them forward from New Madrid to Washita, with a skilful guide, and the provisions necessary for them, till their arrival at their place of destination.

3d. The expenses of transportation of their baggage and implements of labor, which shall come by sea to this capital, shall be paid on account of the royal domains, and they shall be taken on the same account from this place to the Washita, provided, that the weight shall not exceed three thousand pounds for each family.

4th. There shall be granted to every family containing two white persons fit for agriculture, ten arpents of land, extending back forty arpents, and increasing, in the same proportion to those which shall contain a greater number of white cultivators.

5th. Lastly, it shall be permitted to the families to bring, or to cause to come with them, European servants, who shall bind themselves to their service, for six or more years, under the express condition that, if they have families, they shall have a right, after their term of service is expired, to receive grants of land, proportioned, in the same manner, to their numbers. Thus we promise, as we have here stated; and that it may come to the knowledge of those families which propose to transport themselves hither, we sign the present contract with the aforesaid Senor Marquis de Maison Rouge, to whom, that it may be made plain, a certified copy shall be furnished. New Orleans, the 17th of March, 1795.

THE BARON DE CARONDELET.
FRANCIS RENDON.
JOSEPH DE ORUE.
THE MARQUIS DE MAISON ROUGE.

On the 14th of July, in the same year, this contract was laid before the King of Spain, by whom, as appears by the following, it was duly approved.

Having laid before the King what you have made known in your letter of the 25th of April last, No. 44, relative to the contract entered into with the Marquis of Maison Rouge, for the establishment on the Washita of the thirty families of farmers destined to cultivate wheat for the supply of these provinces, His Majesty, considering the advantages which it promises, compared with the preceding, has been pleased to approve it in all its parts. By his royal direction I communicate it to you for your information. God preserve you many years. Madrid, 14th July, 1795.

GARDOQUI.

To the INTENDANT of Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, November 13, 1795.

To be transmitted to the principal office of accounts (contaduria,) of the army and royal domains, for their information, and two certified copies to be provided for the secretary's office.

RENDON.

On the 14th of June, 1797, Carlos Trudeau, Surveyor General, certifies to have measured thirty superficial leagues in favor of the Marquis de Maison Rouge, by order of the Governor General, the Baron de Carondelet. It will be seen by the certificate of the Surveyor General, attached to this report, (No. 1,) that the land in question was surveyed in four separate tracts, and designated by natural and artificial marks, with great care and precision.

On the 20th of June, 1797, a few days after this return of survey, the following patent, or "titulo," as it is called in the original Spanish, was granted to the Marquis de Maison Rouge.

The Baron de Carondelet, knight of the order of St. John, marshal de camp of the royal armies, governor general, vice patron of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, inspector of troops, &c.

Forasmuch as the Marquis de Maison Rouge is near completing the establishment of the Washita, which he was authorized to make for thirty families by the royal order of July 14, 1795, and desirous to remove, for the future, all doubt respecting other families or new colonists who may come to establish themselves, we destine and appropriate, conclusively, for the establishment of the aforesaid Marquis de Maison Rouge, by virtue of the powers granted to us by the King, the thirty superficial leagues marked in the plan annexed to the head of this instrument, with the limits and boundaries designated, with our approbation, by the Surveyor General, Don Charles Leveau Trudeau, under the terms and conditions stipulated and contracted for by the said Marquis de Maison Rouge; and that it may at all times stand good, we give the present, signed with our hand, sealed with our seal at arms, and countersigned by the underwritten honorary commissary of war and secretary of his Majesty for this Commandancy General. New Orleans, the twentieth of June, 1797.

THE BARON DE CARONDELET.

ANDRES LOPEZ ARMISTO.

NOTE.—That, in conformity with his contract, the Marquis de Maison Rouge is not to admit or establish any American in the lands included in his grant.

THE BARON DE CARONDELET.

On the 5th of August, 1803, Don Gilbert Leonard, and Don Manuel Gonzalez Armirez, Spanish officers in the province of Louisiana, gave a certificate, (No. 2,) stating that the Marquis de Maison Rouge complied punctually with the terms he proposed in said contract.

On the 14th December, 1812, the commissioners acting under the directions of the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1807, by their report, (No. 3,) placed this claim among a class of cases which, in their opinion, ought to be confirmed; and, by the act of Congress of the 29th April, 1816, all these cases, not exceeding a league square, were confirmed accordingly. The present claim, on account of its magnitude, being excluded by the act of 29th April, 1816, application, that it might be confirmed, was made to the next succeeding Congress by the owners of the grant. A committee of the House of Representatives reported in favor of the petition, and, on the 10th of February, 1817, presented a bill confirming the title of the Marquis de Maison Rouge. The bill was not then acted upon, and, until the present session, the attention of Congress has not been called to the subject.

From a careful examination of the foregoing documents, the committee have come to the conclusion that the title is legal and formal, according to the laws and usages of the province of Louisiana, and that the same ought to be confirmed; and, for that purpose, report a bill.

NEW ORLEANS, June 14, 1797.

Carlos Trudeau, Surveyor General, &c., certifies to have measured, in favor of Marquis of Maison Rouge, the several tracts of land represented in those parts of the plat shaded with vermilion, which may contain thirty superficial leagues, to wit, the tract No. 1, on the right bank of Washita river, to be taken five arpents below the mouth of the bayou de la Cheniere au Toudre, and thence descending to the bayou Calumet, with a corresponding depth to complete one hundred and forty thousand superficial arpents; the tract, marked No. 2, on the left bank of the same river, commencing two leagues below Fort Miro, and at the point called Laine, and extending one league below the Prairie de Lee, with a corresponding depth to complete seventy thousand superficial arpents; the tract marked No. 3, to be taken in front of the bayou Loutre, and thence on a line south seventy-five degrees east to the bayou de Liar, which line, to the bayou de Liar, the bayou Bartelemy, and the river Washita, are to include the tract No. 3; tract No. 4, on the right bank of Washita river, to be taken in front of the entry of bayou Bartelemy: thence descending the river to bayou la Loutre, with such depth as that the tracts, Nos. 3 and 4, shall include the quantity of eight thousand three hundred and forty-four superficial arpents, which, added to the two first tracts, makes a total superfice of two hundred and eight thousand three hundred and forty-four superficial arpents, equal to the above said thirty leagues, at the rate of two thousand five hundred toises for the side of a league, the land measure in this province. Being well understood that the land which may be included in the above, either by title, in form, or first decrees of concession, are not to be counted in computing the preceding thirty leagues; on the contrary, the Marquis de Maison Rouge promises to be of no detriment to the settlers occupying previously any part of the land, but will maintain and support them in their rights, in consideration that, if the said thirty leagues shall suffer any diminution on account of previous occupants, the Marquis de Maison Rouge has the right, and there will be no objection to his supplying the deficiency in any other part where the land is vacant. And, that it may so appear, I give this, by order of the Governor General, Baron de Carondelet; all which I certify.

CARLOS TRUDEAU, &c.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 12, 1820.

I certify that the above, and the preceding page, is a true copy from the report of the Land Commissioners of the western district of Orleans, dated the 14th December, 1812; and that the plat attached hereto is a copy of the plat attached to the said report. The original papers, copied in pages 67, 68, and 69, of the book entitled Land Laws, are not in this office.

Don Gilbert Leonard, treasurer of the army, exercising the functions of royal accountant, and Don Manuel Gonzales Armirez, exercising those of treasurer par interim, of the royal chests of this province of Louisiana:

We certify that the two foregoing copies are conformable to the originals which remain in the archives of the ministry of the royal domains under our charge, and that the contractor, the Marquis de Maison Rouge, complied punctually with the terms which he proposed in the said contract; and, that this may be made manifest, conformably to the order above inserted of this Intendancy General, we give the present in New Orleans, the 5th of August, 1803.

No. 16. The undersigned commissioners have compared the documents of title filed in this claim, with the translation of them in pages 67, 68, and 69, of the appendix to the book entitled "Land Laws," &c., and find the said translation to be correct so far as it goes. The certificate, or procès-verbal which the Surveyor General has annexed to his plat, not appearing in said book, a translation of that document, together with a copy of the plat, is transmitted for the further elucidation of the claim. No oral or other testimony has been adduced before the Board to establish the occupancy of any part of these lands, or that there has been a compliance upon the part of the grantee with the conditions stipulated in the contract, except the certificate, under date of the 5th August, 1803, signed by Gilbert Leonard and Manuel Armirez, to the translation of which, in page 69 of the appendix of said book, the commissioners beg leave to refer.

The undersigned have observed a remark in the 25th page of the introductory part of the book, entitled "Land Laws," that no patent has issued on the claim under consideration. With great deference for that authority, the undersigned commissioners cannot but be of opinion that the instrument, under date of the 20th of June, 1797, is a patent (or what was usually, in Louisiana, denominated a title in form) transferring to the Marquis de Maison Rouge the title, in as full and ample a manner as lands were usually granted by the Spanish Government, subject, however, to the conditions stipulated in his contract with the Government. The plat of survey above referred to will be found subjoined to this report.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

I certify that the foregoing is a true copy from the report of the Land Commissioners of the western district of Orleans, dated the 14th December, 1812, and that the above claim, with others marked B, are "the second class, comprising claims which, though not embraced by the provisions of the said acts, ought, nevertheless, in the opinion of the commissioners, to be confirmed, in conformity with the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government." Witness my hand, this 6th of December, 1820.

LAND CLAIMS WEST OF PEARL RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 3, 1821.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 1, 1821.

I have the honor to transmit, herewith, a copy of the report of the Land Commissioners at St. Helena, dated 18th November, 1820, with lists of claims marked A, B, and C, and a list of settlers; also, a copy of a letter from the commissioners, dated 18th November, 1820.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

The Hon. the PRESIDENT of the Senate.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE, ST. HELENA, November 18, 1820.

We have the honor to transmit you a final list of settlement claims, with our corresponding opinions thereupon, marked C, No. 1. On the subject of claims founded on titles complete or incomplete, and reported by us favorably, we have conceived it unnecessary to subjoin any comments. A majority of them were granted by the Government of Spain prior to 1803. Such as bear date subsequently to that time have the collateral aids of actual occupancy and cultivation. They will be found under registers A and B, Nos. 2 and 3.

Register C, No. 4, comprehends British patents. No proof has been exhibited by the claimants that there ever was, on their part, a compliance with the requisitions of the law of the 3d of March, 1819. They are respectfully submitted to the consideration of Congress.

A few anomalous claims remain yet in our office, on which we have not yet reported. They were entered within the time limited by law, but unaccompanied by the original title papers; the claimants not having them in their possession when they made their entries, they solicited a short time to enable them, if possible, to procure those titles. We deemed it prudent to grant them this indulgence. They will be reported in time to meet the examination of the present session of Congress. All of which is respectfully submitted.

We have the honor to be, sir, with considerations of high esteem, most respectfully, your obedient servants,

CHARLES S. COSBY.
FULWAR SKIPWITH.

The Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS,
Commissioner General of the Land Office.

LAND OFFICE AT ST. HELENA, November 18, 1820.

CHARLES S. COSBY,
FULWAR SKIPWITH.The Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS, Commissioner General Land Office.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE, ST. HELENA, November 18, 1820.

We have the honor, herewith, to enclose you a final list of all the settlement claims entered in this land office since our last report of a similar nature. In that report we respectfully submitted our opinions relatively to the extension of pre-emptional claims down to the 3d of March, 1819. We again beg leave to repeat our conviction that such a provision would essentially aid the population and prosperity of this section of Louisiana. A major part of the claimants, who have settled subsequently to 1814, are poor, and, consequently, would be unable to maintain a competition with a rich bidder. Although the lands on which they have made their improvements are generally poor, still those very improvements on which they have expended their time and labor, will, in many cases, be sufficient to excite the cupidity of their wealthy neighbors. They cannot require the recognition of their claims of right; but we hope that, where they are only opposed by the United States' title, that title will be relinquished for the present established prices. Such a provision, we believe, will give general satisfaction, and interfere but very partially with the revenue of the Government. Such are our opinions on this subject, in which we are joined by a large majority of the inhabitants of our district. In relation to settlements made anteriorly to the 15th April, 1813, we conceive it unnecessary to make any remarks. Under the present law, they are, when fairly made, entitled to donations. Whether the entries which they have made contain a fair representation of their several claims, is a fact which can only be ascertained by a future investigation. We have found it necessary to note all applications for entries, and to report them accordingly. We trust that no difficulty can grow out of this course, inasmuch as the person who applies for a certificate under any future law which may be passed, will, of course, be required to show, by sufficient testimony, that he is entitled to it. To designate absolutely at this time every claim which was settled before the 15th of April, 1813, would be paving the way for the commission of many errors. When the temptation is great, it is frequently dangerous to trust a man's own evidence, or even the evidence of his witnesses. Poverty and the seductions of interest are powerful instigators to the commission of perjury. We have experienced the truth of this proposition, in exercising the power which the law gives us of issuing certificates to settlers. This class of claimants exhibited their claims to the former commissioner (acting under the law, 25th April, 1812,) under the obligation of an oath. In issuing certificates on such entries, we also required the best testimony that could be procured. Notwithstanding all the care we could possibly exercise, we have been frequently subject to the grossest impositions. For this reason we have thought it prudent to report the late entries provisionally. Any law confirming positively designated entries would most probably require frequent revision and alterations. To most of the settlers reported by our predecessor, James O. Cosby, certificates have issued. They have been numbered and registered agreeably to the requisitions of the law, and the forms which we had the honor to receive from you at the time that we commenced our duties. For the first five or six months after the opening of our office, the daily multitude of applications which were made required our undivided and unremitting attention. We frequently had twenty and thirty persons waiting at the same time. Under this continued press of business it was impossible to make the monthly returns required by the law. So soon as it was practicable, a list of the certificates issued was made out, and accompanied our first report of settlement claims. Of the fate of that report, as well as of the last, containing the abstract or analysis of claims entered with us, said to be derived from the French, British, or Spanish authorities, and also of such claims as had been renewed, we were entirely ignorant, until we ascertained from the National Intelligencer, that these reports had been forwarded by you to the Speaker of the House of Representatives. We presume that this circumstance is to be attributed to the many failures of the mail. After the expiration of the time mentioned, every day presented some remonstrance or protest against particular certificates which had been granted. Aware that the Government of the United States wished to make an equal and impartial distribution of the lands, which had been thus liberally and voluntarily given away, we thought it proper to notify the persons against whom such complaints were lodged, to come forward and establish their pretensions by sufficient testimony, or consider their certificates as null and void. In doing this we considered ourselves pursuing strictly the spirit of the law in attempting to render that justice which it contemplated. Hence this necessity of frequently revising our acts rendered it impossible to make monthly returns without committing innumerable blunders, which would have required continual communications to you requesting their correction. Unwilling to assume power on the one hand, and anxious on the other to accomplish as far as possible the ends of our appointment, we deemed it prudent to issue certificates even on doubtful grounds, but to direct the surveyors not to survey any settlement claims, even if the applicants had certificates, without previously obtaining from our office a catalogue of such certificates as we considered, after giving time for scrutiny, unquestionably valid. This course we believed would give time to all parties interested to enter their opposition, and also leave in our hands a controlling check upon the designing and dishonest. Were the surveyors, in every instance, to take our certificates immediately after they issued, as full proof of title, many errors would be committed, and the foundation laid for much future trouble and perplexity. The monthly returns, requiring a strict correspondence with the register, can only be made accurately when time and examination has tested the correctness of each individual certificate. We trust, sir, this course will meet your approbation. It was adopted under the belief that it would add many facilities to the final and satisfactory adjustment of land claims in this important section of the Union. The law of the 3d of March, 1819, establishes our offices permanently and unconditionally at St. Helena court-house. This provision was doubtless predicated on the belief that that place would meet the general convenience of the district. Such was then the fact, but it no longer exists. By a reference to the report of the former commissioner, James O. Cosby, it will be seen that a very large proportion of the claims emanating from titles either British, or Spanish, complete or incomplete, are situated in the parishes of Feliciana and East Baton Rouge. The most of the settlement claims lie in St. Helena and St. Tammany. For the last, certificates have generally issued; for the former, but a few.

In relation to entries made under the late law, nothing can be done until the decision of Congress shall be known. From the Mississippi river, the western boundary of the first named parishes (Feliciana and East Baton Rouge) to St. Helena court-house, is a distance of from fifty to eighty miles. Believing that an office in the town of East Baton Rouge would be a general accommodation to all persons who are now interested in it, and complying with the general expression of their wishes, we have thought it advisable provisionally to establish the office there. Four-fifths of the claimants now concerned live within thirty miles of Baton Rouge. We trust, sir, the reasons assigned are sufficient to justify the step we have taken. There are others, of a local nature, which have given us much perplexity. As many of the claimants speak the French language only, and most of the original written evidences of claim are in the Spanish, a translator, in whose capacity and fidelity the utmost confidence may be placed, is indispensably necessary. The gentleman whom we employed, (Francis Herault,) possesses those qualifications in an eminent degree: he is liberally educated, has resided long in this country, and is extensively acquainted with the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government. Possessing such recommendations, and standing high in the estimation of the district generally, he rendered us, in the discharge of our duties, essential and valuable services. He has left us, and to procure such another would certainly be extremely difficult, if not impossible. He resigned because he could not be reconciled to what he conceived were the many impositions practised on him by the person with whom he boarded. The village (St. Helena court-house) is situated in a very poor country, and the accommodations afforded by it very indifferent. The owner of the only public house where it is practicable to live, is a man whose habits are very irreconcilable with the enjoyment of quiet or comfort. In his sphere he may be a very useful man, but he is not qualified to entertain boarders who are unwilling to participate in the noise and devilry of a boisterous landlord, continually surrounded by a company of drunkards and blackguards. Educated in the course of life which he pursues, he is not sensible, perhaps, that his conduct is objectionable, and therefore may be excused; but this is no diminution of the relative evil. Our local objections to a permanent residence at St. Helena court-house may possibly seem trivial, but we really have experienced them to be of the most unpleasant and harassing nature. A wish to escape the imputation of rashness induces us to be thus minutely particular. In Baton Rouge we can obtain again the services of Mr. Herault as a clerk. Without a clerk, agreeably to the forms and instructions which we had the honor to receive from you, no certificate can issue, his attestation being necessary. The population of our district (Feliciana and Baton Rouge excepted) is dispersed over a considerable extent of country: from ten to twenty miles frequently intervene between the settlements in the same parish. A large proportion of the settlers whose claims have been reported by us are poor, and find it both difficult and expensive to travel any distance, even on imperative business: we would, therefore, with deference, suggest that the law which Congress may pass for the adjustment of the last entries, as well as for the final conclusion of such as have been acted on, should authorize the Register and Receiver to hold their respective offices in each parish successively. Such a provision would certainly accelerate the termination of the business, and would be a general accommodation to the people concerned, as each parish would require a continuance in it proportioned to the business to be done: that continuance would have to be regulated by the Register and Receiver. The exercise of this discretionary power would, of course, be restrained and governed by the time which the law may allow for the entire completion of the business. When the sales of land take place a permanent office in St. Helena would be ineligible because dangerous: neither the village nor parish afford any safe depository for the moneys which may be received. As commissioners, as well as citizens of this district, we feel it our duty to impart any information which may even collaterally assist in effecting (what is so desirable) the conclusive and satisfactory arrangement of its land claims. For this reason we respectfully submit the following remarks relatively to the situation, soil, and character of the different parishes constituting our district: Feliciana is bounded on the west by the Mississippi river; on the south by a line running due east and west, commencing on the Mississippi, and intersecting the Amit river, its eastern boundary, at right angles. This line separates it from the parish of East Baton Rouge, its southern boundary. For its northern boundary it has the line of demarcation dividing it from the State of Mississippi. The lands in this parish are generally fertile, affording, in every respect, the most flattering encouragement to agricultural and commercial pursuits. The western boundary (the Mississippi) supplies a speedy and safe transportation for its produce to New Orleans. The principal staple commodity is cotton; the soil is also excellently adapted to the production of corn, esculent roots, and generally to vegetables of every description. This parish, with the exception of a few sterile spots, is thickly settled. The inhabitants are generally farmers, and many of them wealthy: they are almost entirely Americans; in their respective pursuits they are persevering and industrious, hospitable, and generally well affected towards the General Government. The first settlers were mostly adventurers for fortune's favors, poor and illiterate; of course the accumulation of wealth alone arrested their attention, and gave energy to their efforts. Having proved successful in acquiring a competency, they now evince a laudable anxiety to give their children an education, the serious wants of which they have so often and painfully experienced. The present rising generation having their views enlarged by education, connected with each other by a variety of ties and relations, amalgamating their interest and policy, will, in a few years, form an excellent state of society.

East Baton Rouge is situated on the Mississippi river, (western boundary,) bounded by the parish of Feliciana on the north, east by the river Amite, and on the south by the river Iberville, which opens a communication with lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain. Between the soil of this parish and that of Feliciana there is but a partial difference. Their productions are nearly the same, except, perhaps, the sugar cane, which is supposed to succeed better in the former than the latter. The lands, though extremely rich, require the aid of ditches before they can be rendered completely susceptible of cultivation. When this object is accomplished, their fertility is almost inexhaustible. The population of this parish bears no proportion to the many inducements which it offers to the industrious and enterprising. This fact, we presume, is materially attributable to the large grants of land which were made by the Spanish Government from (as we suppose) sinister views, during the years 1804, '5, '6, and '7. Few persons were willing to adventure their time and labor on a plantation from which they knew not at what moment they might be evicted. Their entire want of confidence also in the honor and integrity of the Spanish Government induced them to remove as far as possible from its capital, (East Baton Rouge;) hence this parish, with the exception of the margin of the Mississippi river, is but thinly settled. The population is of a mixed character, Americans, French, and Spaniards: the Americans have a majority. The French and Spaniards reside principally in the town of Baton Rouge and its immediate vicinage: they are inoffensive people, principally engaged in agricultural pursuits, and disposed to contribute their share to the support of a Government which protects them. Though they may not boast of all the refinements of cultivated society, they are equally removed from that barbarism of which they have been accused. Their posterity will, no doubt, coalesce with the Americans, and, in a few years, the line of division, which now gives them a specific distinction, will be forgotten. Hospitality to strangers, and kindness towards each other, are their prominent characteristics. The American inhabitants are generally poor, and such as claim their lands by virtue of settlements: they are a hardy, honest, adventurous race of men, warmly devoted to their farms, submitting, with cheerfulness and alacrity, to all the requisitions of the law, and ready, at all times, to prove themselves Americans. The state of society has been indifferent, but is now improving. Societies, composed of emigrants and foreigners from different quarters of the world, require a considerable length of time to produce a complete coalition. The materials are too incongruous to harmonize at once. The town of Baton Rouge is a flourishing village, and the seat of justice for the parish. A large proportion of its occupants are engaged in the mercantile business. It is usually considered the most healthy site on the Mississippi river. St. Helena lies between the rivers Amite and Tangipahoe, (western and eastern boundaries,) having for its northern boundary the line of demarcation, and its southern, lake Maurepas. Travelling from the Mississippi, eastwardly, upon entering this parish the country assumes a new and widely different appearance. In the parishes already described, the face of the country is occasionally broken, and the growth principally cypress, magnolia, different species of oak, ash, walnut, hickory, holly, sassafras, and poplar. In the latter parish the lands are uniformly level, and the soil, generally speaking, of very inferior quality. The only lands which are now cultivated lie on the margin of the different water courses bounding and running through the parish. The growth is almost entirely pine. The time may possibly arrive when those lands will sell. At present they are mostly unclaimed, and, we presume, will continue so for many years. Nothing but a monopoly of the rich territories of the United States can render them saleable. Stock, tar, and pitch are the only commodities which can be expected from pine woods. There are, probably, on the lake some eligible places, commanding an extensive range, and affording an easy communication with Orleans, which will be purchased. We speak of the lands generally. This parish is almost entirely inhabited by Americans: they are poor, but constitute a very valuable class of citizens.

St. Tammany is bounded on the east by Pearl river; on the west by Tangipahoe; north by the line of demarcation, and south by the lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain. The remarks made relatively to St. Helena, both as to the soil and inhabitants, are equally applicable to this parish. The only cultivable lands are situated on the different streams by which it is watered; the only principal streams are its eastern and western boundaries, and the rivers Bogue Chitto and Tchefonti. The latter is navigable fifteen or twenty miles from its confluence with lake Pontchartrain. The other, it is presumable, might be rendered so for small craft, if proper exertions were made for that purpose. The lands lying on the margin of lake Pontchartrain, embracing Tchefonti as far as it is navigable, are generally covered by English and Spanish grants which have received the confirmation of the United States. The settlement claims are to be found wherever there are tillable lands. The section of the country, which we have thus attempted to describe, is probably as healthy as any part of Louisiana, or of the western country. The climate is equable and the atmosphere generally clear. Its humidity (occasioned, probably, by extensive swamps on the Mississippi,) is not sufficiently great to generate disease, except immediately on that river. After passing the Amite river, the boundary between the river and interior parishes, the inhabitants are scarcely acquainted with disease, except occasional intermittents of the mildest character. We trust that these remarks will not be deemed inapplicable, when it is recollected that they may tend, in some degree, to elucidate the history of a part of Louisiana which we do conceive to be of great importance, not only to the State of which it is an integral part, but also to the General Government. It is here only that we can rationally expect, for many years, to find a pure and united American population. Agricultural pursuits are certainly better calculated to form a bold and virtuous yeomanry than the speculations of the merchant, or the avocations of the learned. Agriculture here must necessarily be, for a long time, the almost exclusive object of interest and energy. It is of essential concern to Louisiana that there should be, in some part of her interior, a force sufficient to protect her from a domestic foe whose numbers and force are daily accumulating. The General Government is also interested; on Louisiana, as an outward sentinel of the Union in times of invasion and danger from a foreign or domestic foe, much has depended, and may depend again. To be prepared for such an event, is certainly the dictate of wisdom and sound policy. Towards the accomplishment of those important objects a compact and numerous population in Florida will, we believe, materially contribute. It will aid the arm of its own Government, and give to her a genuine American character devoted to the constitution, and well prepared to defend it. Influenced by these considerations we have made this digression, and will conclude it by respectfully, but earnestly, recommending the Government to pursue such a course as will speedily terminate all uncertainty about land titles, and encourage emigration to this country so long harassed by doubt and inquietude. The daily acquisition of territory making by the United States renders such a course an object of peculiar interest to the people of our district; emigration to our country has already been checked by its reputation for uncertainty in its land titles. The only antidote to this evil is the extinction of that uncertainty. Great uneasiness has been excited among the settlers in consequence of the confliction of their claims. It was a prevalent custom with them, when about to occupy unappropriated lands, to agree with the adjoining settlers upon what they called conditional lines. By these lines they were governed in the improvements which they made; where the lands are tolerably fertile, the settlements are so thickly made that it will be impossible for each claimant to obtain the number of acres conceded him by the Government, without comprehending in his survey his neighbor's farm. There are frequently as many as three settlers (all having certificates) on the same section. In some instances the oldest settler identified the place where a subsequent one might fix himself. In others the settlement was made violently. In laying off the lands into sections it frequently happens that the sectional line runs through a man's farm, and sometimes through his house. This difficulty confines itself exclusively to such settlers as have received donations. The surveys of pre-emptional claims will, of course, be governed by such as have been confirmed. We will conclude by expressing our belief that the late liberal and judicious act of Congress, altering and regulating the prices of public lands, will prove equally beneficial to the revenue of the United States, and to the interest of the purchasers.

We have the honor to be, sir, with considerations of esteem, respectfully, your obedient servants,

CHARLES S. COSBY.

[2d Session.]

CLAIMS TO LOTS IN THE VILLAGE OF PEORIA, ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 10, 1821.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 10, 1821.

In conformity with the provisions of the act of the 15th of May, 1820, for the relief of the inhabitants of the village of Peoria, in the State of Illinois, I have the honor to submit the report of the Register of the district of Edwardsville upon the claims exhibited under the said act, with the substance of the evidence in support thereof.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Hon. the PRESIDENT of the Senate.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE AT EDWARDSVILLE, November 10, 1820.

In compliance with an act of Congress entitled "An act for the relief of the inhabitants of the village of Peoria, in the State of Illinois," I have the honor to transmit to you a report of seventy claims to lots in Peoria, and the substance of the evidence in support thereof, which have been received, and now remain on file in my office; to which I must add my regrets at the insurmountable difficulties I have met with in complying with a provision of this law which requires me to make out a list of such claims as, in my opinion, ought to be confirmed. The law not having defined the nature of the claims intended to be confirmed, nor prescribed any rule of adjudication, nor referred to any laws or usages by which I was to be governed in forming an opinion, I have been at a loss to determine upon what principles to decide, and have, therefore, been compelled to omit making out a list of such claims as, in my opinion, ought to be confirmed. I have, however, added to the report a tabular statement showing at one view the character of all and each of the claims from which, after having decided what date or length of possession shall give a title to the occupant, it will be easy to select the particular claims which should be confirmed.

Believing that the chief object of Congress in passing the law was to obtain information as to the nature of the claims to lots in Peoria, I have endeavored to collect all the information which could be obtained, and to transcribe it in detail in the report of evidence herewith transmitted. And to guard as far as possible against inaccuracies or frauds, and to obtain as full and correct information as practicable, I desired that the testimony should be taken in my presence, except where advanced age or infirmity, or the remoteness of the witnesses, rendered their attendance at my office inconvenient. With a few exceptions, all the depositions have been thus taken, and the evidence, though sometimes contradictory, and no doubt often inaccurate as to dates, will, in general, be found as consistent as could reasonably have been expected, considering the length of time which has elapsed, and the illiterate character of most of the deponents.

The old village of Peoria was situated on the northwest shore of lake Peoria, about one mile and a half above the lower extremity or outlet of the lake. This village had been inhabited by the French previous to the recollection of any of the present generation. About the year 1778 or 1779, the first house was built in what was then called La Ville de Maillet, afterwards the New village of Peoria, and of late the place has been known by the name of Fort Clark, situated about one mile and a half below the old village, immediately at the lower point or outlet of lake Peoria. The situation being preferred in consequence of the water being better, and its being thought more healthy, the inhabitants gradually deserted the old village, and, by the year 1796 or 1797, had entirely abandoned it, and removed to the new village.

The inhabitants of Peoria consisted generally of Indian traders, hunters, and voyagers, and had formed a link of connexion between the French residing on the waters of the great lakes and the Mississippi river. From that happy facility of adapting themselves to their situation and associates, for which the French are so remarkable, the inhabitants of Peoria lived generally in harmony with their savage neighbors. It would seem, however, that, about the year 1781, they were induced to abandon the village from the apprehension of Indian hostility; but soon after the peace of 1783, they again returned, and continued to reside there until the autumn of the year 1812, when they were forcibly removed from it, and the place destroyed by a Captain Craig, of the Illinois militia, on the ground, as it was said, that he and his company of militia were fired on in the night while at anchor in the boats before the village, by Indians, with whom the inhabitants were suspected by Craig to be too intimate and friendly.

The inhabitants of Peoria, it would appear, from all I can learn, settled there without any grant or permission from the authority of any Government; that the only title they had to their land was derived from possession, and that the only value attached to it, grew out of the improvements placed upon it; that each person took to himself such portion of unoccupied land as he wished to occupy and cultivate, and made it his by incorporating his labor with it; but as soon as he abandoned it his title was understood to cease with his possessions and improvements, and it reverted to its natural state, and was liable again to be improved and possessed by any one who should think proper. This, together with the itinerant character of the inhabitants, will account for the number of persons who will frequently be found, from the testimony contained in the report, to have occupied the same lot, many of whom, it will be seen, present conflicting claims.

As is usual in French villages, the possessions in Peoria consisted generally of village lots, on which they erected their buildings and made their gardens, and of out-lots or fields in which they cultivated grain, &c. The village lots contained in general about one-half of an arpent of land; the out-lots or fields were of various sizes, depending upon the industry or means of the owner to cultivate more or less land. As neither the old nor new village of Peoria were ever formally laid out, nor had defined limits assigned them, it is impossible to have of them an accurate map. I have, however, sketched off one [see plate 2, fig. 3;] founded on the testimony received in support of the claims, and from the information obtained from the most intelligent of the former inhabitants of the place; and though I am aware of its inaccuracy, yet I am induced to forward it along with the report, as it will tend to show the claims, and elucidate the testimony in support of them. I have not been able to ascertain with precision on what particular quarter sections of the military survey these claims are situated. It is believed, however, that the greater part of the land covered both by the old and new villages are in fractional quarter sections, and that the out-lots or fields are included in quarter sections which have been granted as bounty lands to the soldiers of the late war.

I am, very respectfully,

EDWARD COLES,

Register of the Land Office at Edwardsville.

To WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury of the U. S.

REPORT:

In obedience to an act of Congress, entitled "An act for the relief of the inhabitants of the village of Peoria, in the State of Illinois," approved May 15, 1820, the Register of the Land Office at Edwardsville has the honor of laying before the Secretary of the Treasury the following report of claims, and the substance of the evidence in support thereof, which have been received, and now remain on file in his office.

No. 1. Etienne Bernard claims a lot in the village of Peoria, containing about one arpent of land, situate about forty or fifty yards south of the lot of Joseph Graveline, and bounded eastwardly by a road or street, separating it from the lower part of lake Peoria; southwardly by a road separating it from a lot occupied by John Baptiste Maillet, and westwardly and northwardly by commons or prairie.

Proof. Tousant Soulard and Joseph Graveline testify, on oath, that Etienne Bernard improved and cultivated a lot of one or two arpents of land in Peoria, which they describe as above, about the year 1778, and continued to cultivate the same for about ten years, when he was driven off the premises by the depredations of the Indians.

Remark. The evidence in this case was not taken in the presence of the Register; the deponents being (it was said) too old and infirm to attend at his office. Judging from its situation, the above lot must have been afterwards built upon and occupied by Francis Wilette, and now claimed by Louis Pilette. See claim No. 11.

No. 2. Augustine Roque claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a lot occupied by John Baptiste Maillet, eastwardly by a road separating it from the Illinois river, and southwardly and westwardly by the prairie.

Proof. Etienne Bernard testifies, on oath, that Augustine Roque, deceased, did, the year before the conquest of the country by Colonel Clark, build a house on and improve the above described lot in Peoria, which lot contained about one arpent of land; and that the said Roque continued to reside thereon for ten or twelve years, when he was driven from it by the depredations of the Indians. And the said Bernard further testifies that the above named Augustine Roque, who claims this lot, is the son of the late Augustine Roque of Peoria. And Tousant Soulard testifies, on oath, that one Augustine Roque did settle and cultivate (but at what time is not stated) a lot described as above in Peoria, and continued to reside on the same for at least ten years, when he was forced to remove by the depredations of the savages.

Remark. The above described lot must have been afterwards improved and cultivated; and it is probable it covered a part of the land embraced by the lots which are now claimed by Forsyth and Mett . See claims, No. 7, and No. 14.

No. 3.—Gabriel Latreille, as guardian of Charlotte Troge, who has lost her reason, and who was wife to Pierre Troge, deceased, and daughter of the late Antoine Saint Francis, claims a lot containing about two arpents of lands situated about two miles above Fort Clark, and near the old fort of Peoria, and bounded eastwardly by lake Peoria, northwardly by a lot of Francis Novelle, (or Lovel,) southwardly by Pascal Chevalier, and westwardly by prairie.

Proof. Baptiste Graza and Charlotte Lonigo testify, on oath, that Antoine St. Francis, deceased, did settle and cultivate a lot containing near two arpents of land, situated and bounded as above described, and, to the best of their recollection, resided on the same, above twelve years, when he was driven from the premises by the depredations of the Indians, which they state was, to the best of their recollection, about forty years since.

Remark. The evidence in this case was not taken in the presence of the Register, the deponents being very old and infirm. This lot, like the two preceding ones, must have been covered land, which has been since improved and occupied by others; but who now claims it, it is impossible to say with precision.

No. 4.—The heirs of Gabriel Cerr , by their agent Pascal L. Cerr , claim, under Louis Chatellerean, in the old village of Peoria, a double lot of one hundred and sixty feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) bounded on the north by a street separating it from a lot occupied by Pierre La Vassieur, dit Chamberlain; on the east by a street separating it from a lot of John Baptiste Emelin; on the south by a street separating it from the lots of Parent and Sibinger; and west by the cultivated lands of the old village of Peoria.

Proof. Hyacinthe St. Cyr testifies, on oath, that Louis Chatellerean, in the year 1778, built a house on, and cultivated the above described lot in the old village of Peoria, and continued to occupy the same until the year 1781, when he, and all the inhabitants of Peoria, were induced to leave the place from fear of Indian hostility; but that he, Chatellerean, returned to Peoria soon after the peace of 1783, and continued to reside on the said lot until his death, (the year of his death he, St. Cyr, could not recollect,) after which, the said lot was occupied by one Chorette and his wife, Marie Joseph Tieriereau; and he, St. Cyr, well recollects that the said lot was afterwards sold at auction by Chatellereau's administrators, and bought by Gabriel Cerré, and that the said lot contained about one arpent of land. Marie Josephe Tieriereau testifies, on oath, that in the year 1795 she removed to Peoria, and settled on a lot, the property of Louis Chatellereau, in the upper town, which she described as above.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by Louis Chatellereau, as the son of the late Louis Chatellereau of Peoria. See claim No. 6.

No. 5.—The heirs of Gabriel Cerré, by their agent Pascal L. Cerré, claim an out-lot or field situated immediately in the rear of, and adjoining to, the last described lot.

Proof. Hyacinthe St. Cyr testifies, on oath, that, previous to the military expedition commanded by Captain Montgomery, which Colonel Clark sent up to Peoria in the year 1780, he well recollects seeing Louis Chatellereau cultivate an out-lot or field in the rear of, and adjoining to, the lot on which he lived in Peoria, and to the best of his (St. Cyr's) recollection, the said lot or field contained between thirty and forty arpents of land, which the said Chatellereau continued to cultivate until his death, after which it was occupied for a time by one Chorette and his wife, Marie Josephe Tieriereau, and then sold by Chatellereau's administrators, and bought by Gabriel Cerré; he, St. Cyr, could not recollect at what time Chatellereau died, or how long Chorette and his wife lived on the said lot. Marie Josephe Tieriereau testifies, on oath, that she well recollects that, about the year 1795, Louis Chatellereau had in his possession, and cultivated a certain lot or portion of land in a common field, which she describes as lying to the west, in the rear of his town lot; the size of the lot or portion of land is not stated by her.

Remark. The quantity of land contained in this out-lot or field is not stated by the claimants.

No. 6.—Louis Chatellereau claims a lot in the old village of Peoria, containing about two arpents of land, and bounded northwardly by a street, eastwardly by a street, southwardly by a lot of Willette, and westwardly by a field.

Proof. Pascal L. Cerré testifies, on oath, that he well knows that Louis Chatellereau resided on a lot in the old village of Peoria, from the year 1790 to the year 1795, when the said Chatellereau died on the said lot, which was bounded on the north by a street which separated it from the lot of Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, on the east by a street, and on the west by a common field.

Remarks. This lot is also claimed by the heirs of Gabriel Cerré. See claim No. 4.

No. 7.—Thomas Forsyth claims a lot of three hundred feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, French measure, in the village of Peoria, and bounded eastwardly by a street, separating it from the Illinois river, northwardly by a cross street, westwardly by a back street, and southwardly by a lot claimed by Jacques Metté.

Proof. Hypolite Maillet testifies, on oath, that he is now about forty-two or forty-three years of age, and he always understood he had been born in a stockaded fort which stood on the above described lot, in the new village of Peoria, and that his father, John Baptiste Maillet, had lived on the said lot for a long time. And Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, in like manner, testifies that, when he first went to live in Peoria, in the year 1790, he found John Baptiste Maillet occupying and cultivating the above described lot. And further, both Maillet and Chamberlain testify, that the said John Baptiste Maillet continued to live on, and cultivate the said lot until he was killed, in the year 1801; after which they understood the said lot was sold to one John M. Coursoll, by whom it was sold to the above named Thomas Forsyth, who continued to occupy and cultivate the said lot until the year 1812, when the inhabitants were expelled from Peoria by a Captain Craig of the Illinois militia.

Remark. A part of this lot must have been embraced by the lot claimed by Augustine Roque. See claim No. 2.

No. 8.—Thomas Forsyth claims a lot in Peoria of three hundred feet square, French measure, and bounded to the east by a street separating it from the last described lot; to the north by a cross street, to the west by unoccupied land, and to the south by a lot claimed by Jacques Metté.

Proof. Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, testifies, on oath, that he went to live in Peoria in the year 1790, when he found John Baptiste Maillet cultivating the above described lot; and Hypolite Maillet testifies, on oath, that he is now about forty-two or forty-three years of age, and that he recollects that his father John Baptiste Maillet cultivated the above described lot for a long time; and both Chamberlain and Maillet testify, that the said John Baptiste Maillet continued to cultivate the said lot until he was killed, in the year 1801, after which they understood it was sold to one John M. Coursoll, who, they also understood, sold it to Thomas Forsyth, who continued to cultivate the same as a garden until the inhabitants were expelled from Peoria by Captain Craig, in the year 1812.

No. 9.—Thomas Forsyth claims an out-lot or field, containing twenty arpents of land, situated about two miles southwardly from the village of Peoria, at the river Gatinan, now called Kickapoo creek.

Proof. Jacques Metté and Felix Fountain testify, on oath, that Thomas Forsyth, in the year 1806, made the above described lot or field, which, to the best of their recollection, contained about fifteen or sixteen arpents of land; and Metté well recollects that Forsyth cultivated the said field at least two years.

No. 10.—Thomas Forsyth claims an out-lot or field, containing about twenty arpents of land, situated in the Little prairie, about two miles from Peoria.

Proof. Jacques Metté and Felix Fountain testify, on oath, that Thomas Forsyth commenced the improvement of the above described lot or field in the year 1807 or 1808, and that he cultivated it for one year; and that the said lot or field contained, to the best of their belief, not more than about seven arpents of land.

No. 11.—Louis Pilette, in right of his wife, Angelica, the daughter of the late Francis Willette, of the village of Peoria, claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a street, eastwardly by a lot of Antoine Deschamps, southwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Drezy Blondeau testifies, on oath, that Francis Willette built a house on, and improved the above described lot in Peoria, in the year 1788 or 1789, and lived thereon until his death, in the year 1806 or 1808. Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that he went to live in Peoria about the year 1793, at which time he found Francis Willette living on the above described lot in Peoria, where he continued to reside until his death; and both Blondeau and Roi testify that the said lot contained about one-half of an arpent of land, and that Francis Willette died, leaving but one child, who, to their certain knowledge, is now the wife of the above named Louis Pilette.

Remark. It is believed there is an unintentional mistake in the boundaries of the above described lot. For, to correspond with the descriptions given of the other lots in Peoria, it should have been northwardly by Antoine Deschamps's lot, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, and to the south and west by streets.

This lot is also claimed by Felix Fountain, who contends that Francis Willette sold it, as will be seen by reference to his claim No. 41.

No. 12.—Louis Pilette, in right of his wife Angelica, the daughter of the late Francis Willette, claims a lot containing one-half of an arpent of land in the village of Peoria, immediately in the rear of the last described lot, and separated from it by a street, and adjoining to the east [north] a lot of Antoine Deschamps, and bounded on the south and west by streets.

Proof. Drezy Blondeau testifies, on oath, that Francis Willette built stables and other out-houses on the above described lot in the year 1788 or 1789, and continued to use the same until his death, in the year 1806 or 1808. Simon Roi in like manner testifies, that, when he went to live in Peoria, about the year 1793, he found Francis Willette in possession of the above described lot, which he continued to occupy till his death. And they both testify that it contained about one-half of an arpent of land, and that Francis Willette and his wife, on their decease, left but one child, who is now the wife of the above-named Louis Pilette.

No. 13.—Louis Pilette, in right of his wife Angelica, the daughter of the late Francis Willette, claims an out-lot or field, containing fifteen or twenty arpents of land, situated about three-fourths of a mile northeastwardly [northwestwardly] from the village of Peoria.

Proof. Drezy Blondeau testifies, on oath, that Francis Willette commenced improving and cultivating an out-lot or field, of from fifteen to twenty arpents of land, situated as above described, about the year 1786, which he continued to cultivate until his death, in the year 1806 or 1808: and Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that, when he went to live in Peoria, in the year 1793, he found Francis Willette in possession of, and cultivating, the above described out-lot or field, which he supposed to contain about fifteen or twenty arpents; that he (Roi) had often assisted Willette to harvest his grain, and that he well knows that Willette continued to cultivate it until his death; and they both testify that the wife of the above named Louis Pilette was the only child left by the said Willette and his wife at their death.

No. 14.—Jacques Metté claims a lot in Peoria, of eighty feet front, by three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) and bounded on the east by a street separating it from the Illinois river, on the north by a lot claimed by Thomas Forsyth, on the west by a back street, and on the south by a lot of Francis Buché.

Proof. Hypolite Maillet testifies, on oath, that he is now about forty-two or forty-three years of age, and that, from his earliest recollection, the above described lot was possessed and cultivated by his father, John Baptiste Maillet, who continued to cultivate it until his death in the year 1800 or 1801: and Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, also testifies, on oath, that, when he went to live in Peoria, in the year 1790, he found John Baptiste Maillet in possession of, and cultivating, the above described lot; and they both testify that they always understood that the above named Metté had purchased the said lot, (but when is not stated,) which they well recollect he continued to occupy until the spring of year 1812; and that the said lot was, they thought, about eighty feet in front, by about three hundred feet in depth.

Remark. The land embraced by this lot must, in part, have been covered by the lot of Augustine Roque. See claim No. 2.

No. 15.—Jacques Metté claims a lot in Peoria, of eighty feet in front, by three hundred in depth, (French measure,) situated immediately in the rear of the last described lot, and separated from it by a street, and bounded north by a lot of Thomas Forsyth, and to the west and south by unoccupied lands.

Proof. Hypolite Maillet testifies, on oath, that he is now forty-two or forty-three years of age, and that, from his earliest recollection, his father, John Baptiste Maillet, had cultivated the above described lot; and Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, testifies, in like manner, that he went to live in Peoria in the year 1790, at which time he found John Baptiste Maillet in possession of, and cultivating, the above described lot; and both testify that the said Maillet continued to cultivate the said lot until his death, in the year 1800 or 1801, and that they had always understood that the above named Metté purchased it, and they well recollect he cultivated it until the spring of the year 1812, and that it was about eighty feet in front, by about three hundred in depth.

No. 16.—Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, claims a lot or square of about two arpents of land in the old village of Peoria, bounded northwardly by a hill, to the south and east by streets, and to the west by an out-lot, also claimed by him.

Proof. Joseph Lapatré and Hypolite Maillet testify, on oath, that Augustine Fiaiteau, in the year 1789, "established himself on four lots, of eighty by three hundred feet each," which lots they describe as being bounded on the north by a hill, south by a cross street, east by a street, and west by an out-lot, then possessed by the said Fiaiteau, and that the said Fiaiteau sold the said lots to the above named Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, in the year 1794.

Remark. The testimony, in this case, was not taken in the presence of the Register. This lot is also claimed by Augustine Fiaiteau. See claim No. 21.

No. 17.—Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, claims an out-lot or field, containing about twelve arpents of land, near, if not adjoining to, the old village of Peoria, and adjoining, to the south and west, the field of Louis Chatellereau.

Proof. Joseph Lapatré and Hypolite Maillet testify, on oath, that Augustine Fiaiteau "established" the above described lot or field, which contained about twelve arpents of land, in the year 1789, and that he sold it, in the year 1794, to the above named Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain.

Remark. The testimony, in this case, was not taken in the presence of the Register.

No. 18.—Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, claims a lot in Peoria, bounded northwardly and westwardly by unoccupied lands, eastwardly by a street separating it from the lot of Louis Bisson, and southwardly by a cross street.

Proof. Hypolite Maillet and Michael La Claire testify, on oath, that Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, fenced in, and built a house on, the above described lot, about the year 1798, but they do not know that he ever occupied the house or cultivated the said lot. They describe the lot to have been about the usual size, that is, about one-half of an arpent of land.

No. 19.—Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, claims a lot in Peoria, of eighty feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) and bounded northwardly by a lot of Michael La Croix, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by a lot of Augustine La Roche, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Hypolite Maillet and Michael La Claire testify, on oath, that Francis Jourdan made an improvement on the above described lot, in Peoria, about the year 1800 or 1801, where he resided about one year, when he (Jourdan) sold the said lot to Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, who resided on it until he was forced from it by Captain Craig, who destroyed the village of Peoria in the fall of the year 1812; that the said lot was about eighty feet in front, by about three hundred in depth.

No. 20.—Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, claims an out-lot or field, containing about seven arpents of land, situated near half a mile to the southwest of Peoria, and adjoining, on the north, the field of Antoine Lapancé.

Proof. Hypolite Maillet and Antoine Lapancé testify, on oath, that Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, did, in the year 1810, enclose and cultivate the above described lot or field, and that he continued to cultivate it until he and all the inhabitants were forced to leave Peoria, by Captain Craig, in the year 1812.

No. 21.—Gabriel Lattraile, as administrator of Augustine Fiaiteau, claims a lot in the old village of Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded eastwardly by a lot of one Lapierre, southwardly by a street separating it from a lot claimed by Louis Chatellereau, and to the north and west by unoccupied land.

Proof. Etienne Bernard testifies, on oath, that he saw Augustine Fialteau living on, and cultivating the above described lot in the old village of Peoria, about the year 1791, on which he, Fialteau, had a blacksmith's shop, and that he continued to reside on the said lot for about five or six years, when he abandoned it; and that the said lot contained about one-half of an arpent of land. Tousant Souliere testifies, on oath, that Augustine Fialteau, deceased, lived on, and cultivated the above described lot, (but when is not stated,) and that he continued to reside on it for at least ten years, when he was driven off by savage depredations.

Remark. The testimony of Tousant Souliere was not taken in the presence of the Register. This lot is also claimed by Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, who contends that he purchased it, in the year 1794, of Fialteau. See claim No. 16.

No. 22.—Thomas Lusby claims a lot in the old village of Peoria, containing about four hundred arpents of land, and bounded on the east by a street or road, at the distance of about one hundred and twenty yards from lake Peoria, on the south by a street separating it from the lot of Joseph Leframbroise, west by unoccupied lands, and, on the north, by the lot of one Parent.

Proof. Joseph Lapattré and Louis Coinoi testify, on oath, that Thomas Lusby purchased, about the year 1795, a lot, which they describe as containing four arpents of land, and situated in the upper town of Peoria, from one Saint John, who, they state, had resided on the said lot for near fifteen years. Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that, when he went to live in Peoria, in the year 1794, he found one Saint John living on a lot, which he describes as it is above described by Lusby, and that he had been informed that Saint John sold the said lot to Thomas Lusby. Michael La Croix testifies, in like manner, that, in the year 1797, Thomas Lusby purchased the said lot from one Saint John, who had previously lived thereon; and that the said Lusby lived on the said lot for one or two years, when he abandoned it; and both Roi and La Croix testify that the lot contained about four arpents of land.

No. 23.—Thomas Lusby claims a lot in the old village of Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded on the east by lake Peoria, south by a lot of one Bouché, west by a street separating it from the lot of Louis Chatellereau, and north by the lot of one Lapierre.

Proof. Joseph Lapattré and Louis Coinoi testify, on oath, that Thomas Lusby purchased of one Laroach a lot on which he, Laroach, resided seven years, and which they merely describe as being in the upper town of Peoria, and containing about one-half of an arpent of land. They do not state when Lusby purchased, or how long he retained possession of the lot.

Remark. The above testimony was not taken in the presence of the Register.

No. 24.—Thomas Lusby claims a lot in the new village of Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded eastwardly, by a street separating it from the Illinois river; southwardly, by a lot once occupied by Chorette, afterwards by Louis Defond; westwardly, by a back street; and, northwardly, by a lot of one Champlaine.

Proof. Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that, when he went to live in Peoria, in the year 1794, he found one Urquette living on the above described lot; that he, Roi, does not know whether Urquette sold it or not, but that he well recollects seeing one Castion afterwards living on it, who sold it to Thomas Lusby about the year 1798 or 1799, and that when he, Roi, removed from Peoria, in the year 1802 or 1803, he left the said Lusby living on the said lot. Louis Coinoi and Joseph Lapattré testify, on oath, that they knew of Thomas Lusby's purchasing a lot of about one-half of an arpent in the lower town, about the year 1794, from one Castion, and that the said Castion purchased the said lot the year before of one Urquette, who had lived on the said lot, they thought, for nearly twenty years.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by Antoine La Claire, who contends that Thomas Lusby sold it. See claim No. 25. Coinoi and Lapattré's testimony not taken in the presence of the Register.

No. 25.—Antoine La Claire claims a lot in Peoria of eighty feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) and bounded eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by a lot of John Baptiste Defond, westwardly by unoccupied lands, and northwardly by a lot which he, La Claire, purchased of J. B. Champlaine.

Proof. Francis Racine testifies, on oath, that one Lablond made an improvement on the above described lot in the year 1798 or 1799, and that the said lot was afterwards in possession of several persons, among whom he well recollects Joseph Castion and Thomas Lusby; that Lusby sold the said lot in the year 1805 to him, (Racine,) who sold it to Joseph Dejeney, who sold it to the above named Antoine La Claire in the year 1809, who occupied said lot till the year 1812, when Peoria was destroyed by Captain Craig. Jacques Metté testifies, on oath, that Thomas Lusby was in possession of the above described lot in the year 1801, when he, Metté, went to live in Peoria, and that Lusby continued to reside thereon for about two years, after which he, Metté, saw the said lot in possession of one Joseph Dejeney, who, he understood, sold it to the above named Antoine La Claire in the year 1809, who continued to occupy the same until the year 1812. Both Racine and Metté testify, that the lot was about eighty feet in front, by about three hundred feet in depth.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by the above named Thomas Lusby. See claim No. 24.

No. 26.—Antoine La Claire claims a lot in Peoria of eighty feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) and bounded eastwardly by Main street, separating it from the Illinois river, northwardly by a lot of Francis Racine, westwardly by unoccupied land, and southwardly by a lot on which he, La Claire, lived.

Proof. Francis Racine and Jacques Metté testify, on oath, that John Baptiste Champlaine made an improvement on the above described lot in the year 1801 or 1802, and that he, Champlaine, sold the said lot, in the year 1810, to the above named Antoine La Claire, who cultivated it as a garden until the year 1812. Both Racine and Metté testify that said lot was about eighty feet in front, by about three hundred feet in depth.

No. 27.—Michael La Croix claims a lot in Peoria of eighty feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) and bounded eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by a lot occupied by Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, westwardly by a back street, and northwardly by a cross street.

Proof. Antoine Deschamps testifies, on oath, that Louis La Bossieur had the above described lot in possession, and was living on it in the year 1794, and that La Bossieur sold it to Michael Coursoll. And Jacques Metté testifies, in like manner, that, when he went to live in Peoria in the year 1801 or 1802, he found Michael Coursoll living on the above described lot; that Michael Coursoll sold the said lot to John M. Coursoll, who he, Metté, understood sold it, about the year 1808 or 1809, to the above named Michael La Croix. Antoine Saint Dennis, as well as the above named Metté, testify, on oath, that Michael La Croix, very soon after he purchased the above described lot, built a large two story dwelling-house, and a large store-house, and other out-buildings, and cultivated a garden on the said lot, and continued to occupy the same until the year 1812, when the village of Peoria was destroyed by Captain Craig.

No. 28.—Simon Roi claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded on the east by a lot of John Coursoll, on the west by a lot of Louis Bisson, on the south and north by streets.

Proof. Drezy Blondeau and John Baptiste Blondeau testify, on oath, that Simon Roi went to Peoria some time during the year 1793; soon after which he made an improvement, and built a house on the above described lot, in which he lived near two years, when he abandoned it.

Remark. The above boundaries are presumed not correct. To correspond with the points of the compass, as stated in the other descriptions in Peoria, it should have been stated northwardly by the lot of John Coursoll, and southwardly by a lot of Louis Bisson.

No. 29.—Simon Roi, in right of his wife, who was the wife of Charles Le Doux, of Peoria, claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded on the south by a lot of Antoine Roi, on the north by the lot of Francis Dupré, and on the east and west by streets.

Proof. Drezy Blondeau and John Baptiste Blondeau testify, on oath, that Charles Le Doux made an improvement on the above described lot in the year 1793, and continued to reside on and cultivate the same until his death; that the above named Simon Roi married the widow of the said Charles Le Doux about the year 1799; and that they, the said Simon Roi and wife, continued to reside on and cultivate the said lot until about the year 1808 or 1809, when they removed from Peoria.

No. 30.—Simon Roi, in right of his wife, the late widow of Charles Le Doux, deceased, claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and situated immediately in the rear of the last described lot, and separated from it by a street.

Proof. Drezy Blondeau and John Baptiste Blondeau testify, on oath, that Charles Le Doux commenced an improvement on the above described lot during the year 1793, by building a stable and other out-houses on it, and that he continued to occupy the said lot until his death; that the above named Simon Roi married his widow about the year 1799; and that they, Roi and wife, continued to use the same until they left Peoria, which was about the year 1808 or 1809.

No. 31.—Simon Roi, in right of his wife, the late widow of Charles Le Doux, deceased, claims an out-lot immediately in the rear of, and adjoining to, the last described lot, containing about six arpents of land.

Proof. Drezy Blondeau and John Baptiste Blondeau testify, on oath, that Charles Le Doux made an improvement on the above described out-lot or field, in the year 1793, and that he continued to cultivate it until his death; that the widow of the said Charles Le Doux married the above named Simon Roi about the year 1799, and that they, Roi and wife, continued to cultivate the same until about the year 1808 or 1809, when they left Peoria.

No. 32.—Simon Roi claims one-third of an out-lot or field, containing about thirty arpents of land, improved and cultivated by himself, his brother, Antoine Roi, and Francis Racine, situated on the east bank of the river Gatinan, near one league southwestwardly from the village of Peoria.

Proof. Antoine Cicare and Antoine Roi testify, on oath, that, in the year 1802, Simon Roi, with his brother, Antoine Roi, and Francis Racine, improved and cultivated an out-lot or field, at the river Gatinan, containing about thirty arpents of land, which they continued to cultivate for many years.

No. 33.—Antoine Roi claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a lot of Charles Le Doux, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by unoccupied land, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Michael Le Claire and Simon Roi testify, on oath, that Antoine Roi, in the year 1793 or 1794, built a house on and cultivated as a garden, the above described lot, which contained about one-half of an arpent of land; and on which he continued to reside and cultivate for five or six years, when he abandoned it, and removed from Peoria.

No. 34.—Antoine Roi claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and situated immediately in the rear of the last described lot, and from which it was separated by a street, and to the north it joined the lot of Charles Le Doux, and to the south and west it was bounded by commons or prairie.

Proof. Michael Le Claire and Simon Roi testify, on oath, that Antoine Roi, in the year 1793 or 1794, made an improvement by building stables and other out-houses on the above described lot, which lot and buildings he continued to use for five or six years, when he abandoned them, and removed from Peoria; that the said lot contained about one-half of an arpent of land.

No. 35.—Antoine Roi claims one-third of an out-lot or field, containing about thirty arpents of land, improved and cultivated by himself, his brother, Simon Roi, and Francis Racine, situated on the east bank of the river Gatinan, near one league southwestwardly from the village of Peoria.

Proof. Antoine Cicare and Simon Roi testify, on oath, that, in the year 1802, Antoine Roi had in possession, and cultivated an out-lot or field at the river Gatinan, in partnership with Simon Roi and Francis Racine, which field they cultivated many years; that the said field contained about thirty arpents of land.

No. 36.—Francis Racine, Sen., claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, bounded northwardly by a cross street, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by a lot occupied by one Champlaine, and westwardly by a back street.

Proof. Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that, when he went to live in Peoria in the year 1794, the above described lot constituted a part of a field then possessed and cultivated by John Baptiste Maillet; that he, Roi, understood Maillet afterwards gave it to Francis Racine, Sen., who, in the year 1796, built a house on it, and continued to reside on the said lot until the village was destroyed by Captain Craig, in the year 1812. Antoine Bourbonné testifies, on oath, that, when he went to live in Peoria in the year 1803, he found Francis Racine, Sen., living on the above described lot, where he continued to reside until the year 1812. Francis Racine, Jun., testifies, on oath, that he is now twenty-six years of age, and that, from his earliest recollection, his father, Francis Racine, Sen., lived upon the above described lot, and that he continued to live on it until the year 1812. All three of them state that the said lot contained about one-half of an arpent of land.

No. 37.—Francis Racine, Sen., claims an out-lot or field, containing about twenty arpents of land, situated nearly adjoining the village of Peoria, and between the fields of Simon Roi and Antoine Bourbonné.

Proof. Antoine Bourbonné and Francis Racine, Jun., testify that Francis Racine, Sen., improved the above described out-lot or field about the year 1807, and continued to cultivate it until the year 1812; and that it contained about twenty arpents.

No. 38.—Francis Racine, Sen., claims an out-lot or field, containing about eighteen arpents of land, and situated about two miles below the village of Peoria, and bounded to the north by the out-lot of Simon Roi, to the south and west by the river Gatinan, and to the east by the prairie.

Proof. Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that, in the year 1802 or 1803, he (Simon Roi) his brother, Antoine Roi, and Francis Racine, Sen., enclosed and cultivated a field on the bank of the Gatinan river, about two or three miles below the village of Peoria; that the said field contained about thirty arpents of land, and that it was divided equally between the above named three persons; that they continued to cultivate the said field, each one his own separate portion of about ten arpents, for two or three years, when he, Roi, removed from Peoria. Hypolite Maillet and Antoine Roi testify, on oath, that, about the year 1803, Francis Racine, Sen., made a field on the bank of the river Gatinan, about two miles from Fort Clark, (Peoria,) which, they think, contained about eighteen arpents.

Remark. The above testimony of Hypolite Maillet and Antoine Roi was not taken in the presence of the Register; and it is quite certain, from the evidence received in claims No. 32 and No. 35, that this claim does not exceed above ten arpents of land.

No. 39.—Francis Racine, Jun., in right of his wife, the late widow of John Baptiste Defond, deceased, claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a lot occupied formerly by Thomas Lusby, afterwards by Antoine Le Claire, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, and to the south and west by streets.

Proof. Antoine Burbonné and Francis Racine, Sen., testify, on oath, that, about the year 1800, one Chorette made an improvement on the above described lot, which contained about one-half of an arpent; and that, soon afterwards, he, Chorette, sold the said lot to John Baptiste Defond, who resided on it until the village was destroyed by Captain Craig in the year 1812; that, since then, the said Defond has died, and his widow has married the above named Francis Racine, Jun.

No. 40.—Francis Racine, Jun., in right of his wife, the late widow of John Baptiste Defond, deceased, claims a lot in Peoria, containing about three or four arpents of land, and bounded eastwardly by a street, separating it from the lot last described, southwardly by a cross street, and to the north and west by unoccupied lands.

Proof. Antoine Burbonné and Francis Racine, Sen., testify, on oath, that John Baptiste Defond made an improvement on the above described lot about the year 1805 or 1806, and continued to cultivate it as a garden and field till the year 1812; and that the said lot contained three or four arpents of land.

No. 41.—Felix Fontaine claims a lot in Peoria of eighty feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) and bounded eastwardly by a street, separating it from lake Peoria, northwardly by a lot formerly occupied by Antoine Deschamps, but now claimed by him, Fontaine, and to the south and west by streets.

Proof. Antoine Deschamps testifies, on oath, that he saw the above described lot in possession of and cultivated by John Baptiste Maillet, in the year 1792; and that Maillet gave it to Francis Wilette, who remained in possession of it until his death, in the year 1804. Hypolite Maillet and Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, testify, in like manner, that Francis Wilette made an improvement and built a house on the above described lot about the year 1797 or 1798, where he continued to reside until his death, in the year 1804 or 1805; and all three of the deponents testify that his widow continued to occupy the said house and lot until her death, which happened about two years after the death of her husband. And the said Deschamps further testifies that, after the death of Wilette and his wife, he, Deschamps, purchased from Wilette's administrators the said lot, and occupied it until the year 1811, when he sold it to Felix Fontaine. And the said Maillet and Chamberlain further testify, that the said Fontaine continued to occupy the said lot until the village of Peoria was destroyed, and the inhabitants driven off by Captain Craig, in the year 1812; and that the lot was about eighty feet in front, by three hundred in depth.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by Louis Pilette, in right of his wife, who was the daughter of the above named Francis Wilette, as will be seen by reference to claim No. 11.

No. 42.—Felix Fontaine, in right of his wife, Josette Carsereau, dit Fontaine, claims a lot in Peoria of eighty feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) bounded eastwardly by a street, separating it from lake Peoria, northwardly by a lot claimed by the heirs of La Bonshier, westwardly by a street, and southwardly by a lot on which he, Fontaine, lived.

Proof. Hypolite Maillet and Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, testify, on oath, that Francis Wilette enclosed and cultivated the above described lot in Peoria about the year 1797 or 1798; and that the said lot was about eighty feet in front, by about three hundred feet in depth; that they had understood that the said Wilette, about two years after he had made the improvements, gave the said lot to one Josette Carsereau, who afterwards married the above named Felix Fontaine; and that, soon after the lot was given, it was built upon, and that they (Fontaine and his wife) continued either to live upon the said lot, or to cultivate it until they were driven from Peoria by Captain Craig, in the year 1812.

No. 43.—Felix Fontaine claims an out-lot or field, containing about nine arpents of land, situated about one-half of a mile to the southwest of the village of Peoria, and bounded on the south by the out-lot of Antoine Lapancé, and to the north by the out-lot of Francis Racine.

Proof. Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, and Hypolite Maillet testify, on oath, that Antoine Deschamps enclosed and cultivated the above described field in the year 1807; that he cultivated it for three years, when he sold it to the above named Felix Fontaine, who continued to cultivate it until the autumn of the year 1812; and that the said lot or field contained about nine arpents of land.

No. 44. Felix Fontaine claims an out-lot containing about two and a half arpents of land situated about one-fourth of a mile to the west of the village of Peoria.

Proof. Jacques Metté and Antoine Le Claire testify, on oath, that Felix Fontaine made an improvement in the spring of the year 1810 on the above described out-lot, and continued to cultivate it until the village of Peoria was destroyed by Captain Craig, in the autumn of the year 1812.

No. 45. Baptiste Raboin claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by a lot claimed by Antoine Lapancé, westwardly by a street, and northwardly by a cross street.

Proof. Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that, when he went to live in Peoria in the year 1794, he found the above described lot occupied by Louis Cicaré, who sold it to one Jourdan, who sold it to Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, who sold it to him, (Roi,) who sold it to Baptiste Raboin, who he (Roi) left in possession of it when he left Peoria, which was about the year 1803 or 1804. Jacques Metté testifies, on oath, that he saw Baptiste Raboin living on the above described lot in the year 1807 or 1808, and that he well recollects he continued to live on it until about the year 1809 or 1810, when he abandoned it, and that it remained unoccupied for about one year, when one Louis Binet went to live on it, which he continued to do until the village of Peoria was destroyed by Captain Craig, in the year 1812.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by Louis Pencenneau as assignee of the above named Louis Binet. See claim 69.

No. 46. Joseph Condier, for himself and the other heirs of the late Joseph Condier, claims a lot in Peoria of eighty feet in front, by three hundred feet in depth, and bounded northwardly by a lot claimed by Charles La Belle, eastwardly by a street separating it from a lot claimed by Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, southwardly by a lot claimed by Hypolite Maillet, and westwardly by an out-lot claimed by Charles La Belle.

Proof. Simon Roi, Pierre Lavassieur, and Hypolite Maillet, testify, on oath, that Joseph Condier, deceased, improved and built a house on the above described lot in the year 1796, and that the said lot was about eighty feet in front by about three hundred feet in depth; and the said Roi further testifies that Joseph Condier resided on the said lot one or two years, when he abandoned it, and removed from Peoria.

No. 47. Hypolite Maillet, in right of his wife Josette Demonchelle, the late widow of Louis Le Bonshier, deceased, claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a lot occupied by Louis Binet, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by a lot occupied by Francis Wilette, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, and Michael Le Claire testify, on oath, that the late Louis Le Bonshier improved and built a house on the above described lot in Peoria, in the year 1796 or 1797, and that the said lot contained about one half of an arpent of land, on which he (Le Bonshier) resided until his death, which happened in the year 1802 or 1803; after which his widow lived about one year on the said lot, when she abandoned it; and that the said widow of Louis Le Bonshier has since married, and is now the wife of the above named Hypolite Maillet.

No. 48. Hypolite Maillet, in right of his wife Josette Demonchelle, the late widow of Louis Bonshier, deceased, claims an out-lot or field containing about four arpents of land, situated about one-half of a mile to the west of the village of Peoria.

Proof. Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, and Michael Le Claire testify, on oath, that Louis Le Bonshier improved and cultivated, about the year 1796 or 1797, the above described lot as a garden, and which they think contained about four arpents of land; and that he continued to cultivate it until his death in the year 1802 or 1803, and that his widow cultivated it for one year after the death of her husband, when she abandoned it; and that she has since married, and is now the wife of the above named Hypolite Maillet.

No. 49. Hypolite Maillet claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a lot of Charles La Belle, eastwardly by a street, southwardly by a lot claimed by him, (Maillet,) and westwardly by an out-lot claimed also by him.

Proof. Jacques Mett  and Antoine Lapanc  testify, on oath, that Hypolite Maillet commenced an improvement on the above described lot in the year 1809, and that he continued to reside on the said lot until the year 1812, when the village was destroyed by Captain Craig, and that the lot contained about one-half of an arpent of land.

No. 50. Hypolite Maillet claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by the last described lot, eastwardly and southwardly by streets, and westwardly by an out-lot claimed by him (Maillet.)

Proof. Jacques Mett  and Antoine Lapanc  testify, on oath, that Hypolite Maillet commenced an improvement on the above described lot in the year 1809, and continued to occupy and cultivate the said lot, which contained about one-half of an arpent of land as a garden until the year 1812, when he was driven from Peoria by Captain Craig.

No. 51. Hypolite Maillet claims an out-lot immediately in the rear of, and adjoining to the two last described lots in the village of Peoria, containing about six arpents of land, and bounded northwardly by an out-lot of Charles La Belle, and southwardly by an out-lot of John Baptiste Defond.

Proof. Jacques Mett  and Antoine Lapanc  testify, on oath, that Hypolite Maillet improved the above described lot, which contained about six arpents of land, in the year 1809, and continued to cultivate it as a field, until he was forced by Captain Craig to abandon it, and the village of Peoria, in the year 1812.

No. 52. Hypolite Maillet claims an out-lot or field, containing about fifteen arpents of land, situated about one mile and a half to the north of the village of Peoria, and bounded on the north by the out-lot of one Willette, westwardly by the bluff, and to the south and east by the prairie.

Proof. Francis Racine, Sen., Francis Jourdan, and Antoine Burbonn , testify, on oath, that the above described field was "established" in the year 1797 by John Baptiste Maillet, the father of Hypolite Maillet, and that it contained, to the best of their recollection, about fifteen arpents of land.

Remark. The evidence in favor of this and the following claim was not taken in the presence of the Register.

No. 53. Hypolite Maillet claims an out-lot or field containing about fifteen arpents of land, situated about two miles below the village of Peoria, on the eastern bank of the river Gatinan, and adjoining to the south the field of Francis Montplaisier.

Proof. Francis Racine, Sen., Francis Jourdan, and Antoine Burbonn , testify, on oath, that Hypolite Maillet had the above described out-lot or field in his possession in the year 1806, and that he continued to cultivate it until the year 1812, when he and all the inhabitants were forced by Captain Craig to leave Peoria, and that the said field or out-lot, to the best of their recollection, contained about fifteen arpents of land.

No. 54. The heirs of the late Antoine Grand Bois, by their agent Antoine Lapanc , claim a lot in Peoria of eighty feet in front by three hundred in depth, (French measure,) and bounded northwardly by a lot of Raphael Belong , eastwardly by a street separating it from lake Peoria, southwardly by a cross street, and westwardly by unoccupied land.

Proof. Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain and Hypolite Maillet testify, on oath, that the late Antoine Grand Bois improved the above described lot, and built a house on it, about the year 1801, and resided on it until his death in the year 1806 or 1807, after which his widow resided on the said lot for one or two years, when she abandoned it, after which she died, leaving several children; that the said lot was about eighty feet in front by about three hundred in depth.

No. 55. Michael Le Claire claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded eastwardly by a back street, southwardly by the lot of one Gunoille, westwardly by unoccupied land, and northwardly by a cross street.

Proof. Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, and Hypolite Maillet testify, on oath, that one Whitby built a house on the above described lot in the year 1801, that the lot contained about one-half of an arpent of land; that he (Whitby) sold the said lot to one Racine, who sold it to the above named Le Claire in spring of the year 1803; and that he, the said Le Claire, occupied the said lot until the year 1806, when he abandoned it, and left Peoria.

No. 56. Francis Buch  claims an out-lot or field containing about ten arpents of land, situated at the foot of the bluff, about half a mile west of village of Peoria.

Proof. Jacques Mett  and Felix Fontaine testify, on oath, that Francis Buch  made an improvement on the above described out-lot or field in the year 1809, and that he continued to cultivate it until the fall of the year 1812, when he and the other inhabitants were driven from Peoria by Captain Craig, of the Illinois militia, and that the said lot or field contained about ten arpents of land.

No. 57.—Joseph Boucher claims a lot in the old village of Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a lot of Francis Belhumer, eastwardly by lake Peoria, southwardly by a lot of Joseph Laframboise, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Joseph Lapattr  and Pierre Lavassieur testify, on oath, that Francis Boucher, deceased, had in his possession, in the year 1795, the above described lot, on which there was a house, which they afterwards well recollect seeing in a state of decay and ruin.

Remark. The evidence in this case was not taken in the presence of the Register.

No. 58.—Joseph Boucher claims an out-lot containing about six or seven arpents of land, situated near the old village of Peoria.

Proof. Joseph Lapattré and Pierre Lavassieur testify, on oath, that Francis Boucher, deceased, had in his possession, in the year 1795, an out-lot or field at the hill near the old village of Peoria, containing about six or seven arpents.

Remark. This testimony was not taken in the presence of the Register.

No. 59.—John Baptiste Blondeau claims a lot in Peoria containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a street, eastwardly by a lot of John Demonchelle, southwardly by a lot of Francis Dupré.

Proof. Drezy Blondeau and Simon Roi testify, on oath, that John Baptiste Blondeau made an improvement on the above described lot in the year 1799, and resided on the same for more than five years, and that the said lot contained about one-half of an arpent.

Remark. The boundaries of the above lot do not correspond with those generally given of the other lots in Peoria. It should have been, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, northwardly by a lot of John Demonchelle, southwardly by a lot of Francis Dupré, and westwardly by a street.

No. 60.—The heirs of Charles La Belle, by their agent Antoine Le Claire, claim a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a cross street, separating it from a lot of Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, eastwardly by a street, southwardly by a lot of Joseph Condier, and westwardly by an out-lot claimed by them.

Proof. Jacques Metté and Antoine Burbonné testify, on oath, that Charles La Belle, deceased, built a house on the above described lot in the year 1809 or 1810, and continued to reside on it until the village of Peoria was destroyed by Captain Craig in the year 1812, and that the said lot contained about one-half of an arpent.

No. 61.—The heirs of Charles La Belle, by their agent Antoine Le Claire, claim an out-lot or field, containing about ten arpents of land, situated immediately in the rear of, and adjoining to the last described lot, and adjoining on the south an out-lot of Hypolite Maillet.

Proof. Jacques Metté and Antoine Burbonné testify, on oath, that Charles La Belle enclosed and cultivated the above described lot or field in the year 1809 or 1810, and that he continued to cultivate it until he was forced by Captain Craig to leave it in the fall of the year 1812, and that the said lot or field contained about ten arpents of land.

No. 62.—Simon Bertrand, in right of his wife Mary, the late widow of John Demonchelle, deceased, claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a lot formerly occupied by Jourdan, afterwards by Raboin, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by a lot of John B. Blondeau, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that, in the year 1799 or 1800, Francis Dupré built a house on the above described lot, and lived in the same for two or three years; that said Dupré sold the said lot to John Demonchelle, who also lived on it for two or three years, when he abandoned it, and left Peoria. Jacques Metté also testifies, that, in the year 1803 or 1804, he saw one John Demonchelle living on the above described lot, who continued to live on it for one or two years, when he abandoned it, and the house and improvements went to ruin; that the said lot was again improved and built upon in the year 1810 by Antoine Lapancé. Both Roi and Metté state that the lot contained about one-half of an arpent.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by the above named Antoine Lapancé. See claim No. 63.

No. 63.—Antoine Lapancé claims a lot in Peoria, of eighty feet in front, by about three hundred feet in depth, (French measure,) and bounded northwardly by a lot occupied by Louis Binet, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by unoccupied land, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, and Hypolite Maillet testify, on oath, that Antoine Lapancé built a house on, and cultivated as a garden, the above described lot, in the year 1810, and continued to reside on and cultivate the same until the fall of the year 1812, and that the said lot was about eighty feet in front, by about three hundred feet in depth.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by Simon Bertrand. See claim No. 62.

No. 64.—Antoine Lapancé claims an out-lot or field containing about nine arpents of land, situated about one-fourth of a mile from Peoria, and bounded on the north by an out-lot or field of Felix Fontaine, and on the south by the field of Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain.

Proof. Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, and Hypolite Maillet testify, on oath, that Antoine Lapancé enclosed and cultivated the above described lot or field in the spring of the year 1811, and cultivated it until the autumn of the year 1812, and that the said field contained about nine arpents.

No. 65.—Antoine Burbonné claims a lot in Peoria, bounded eastwardly by a street separating it from lake Peoria, southwardly by a lot of Louis Le Bonshier, westwardly by a street, and northwardly by a cross street.

Proof. Jacques Metté and Francis Racine, Sen. testify, on oath, that Louis Binet made an improvement on the above described lot in the year 1801 or 1802; that he (Binet) sold said lot to one Parquette, who sold it to the above named Antoine Burbonné, who lived on the said lot until he was driven therefrom, and the village of Peoria destroyed, by Captain Craig, in the year 1812, and that the said lot contained about one-half of an arpent of land.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by Louis Pencenneau, as assignee of the above named Louis Binet. See claim No. 68.

No. 66.—Antoine Burbonné claims a lot in Peoria, bounded northwardly by a street, southwardly by a lot occupied by Louis La Bonshier, eastwardly by a street separating it from the last described lot, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Antoine Le Claire and Jacques Metté testify, on oath, that they well recollect to have seen, in the year 1809 or 1810, Antoine Burbonné have in his possession, and occupy as an out-lot for stables, the above described lot, which contained about one-fourth of an arpent of land, and which lot he continued to occupy until the year 1812, when Captain Craig compelled him to leave Peoria.

No. 67.—Antoine Burbonné claims an out-lot or field containing four or five arpents of land, situated near Peoria, and adjoining on the north the field of Francis Racine.

Proof. Francis Racine, Sen., and Francis Racine, Jun., testify, on oath, that Antoine Burbonné enclosed and cultivated the above described out-lot or field one year prior to his being driven away from it, and the destruction of Peoria, by Captain Craig, of the Illinois militia, in the year 1812; and that the lot contained about four or five arpents of land.

No. 68.—Louis Pencenneau claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded eastwardly by a street separating it from lake Peoria, southwardly by a lot claimed by Louis La Bonshier, and northwardly and westwardly by streets.

Proof. Simon Roi testifies, on oath, that Louis Binet improved the above described lot, and built a house on it in the year 1796 or 1797, and that he continued to reside on the said lot when he (Roi) removed from Peoria in the year 1802 or 1803. Jacques Metté, in like manner, testifies that when he went to live in Peoria in the year 1801 or 1802, he found Louis Binet living on and cultivating the above described lot; and that he (Binet) continued to do so until about the year 1806 or 1807, when he (Metté) understood Binet sold the said lot to one Parquette, who afterwards sold it, as he (Metté) understood, to Antoine Burbonné, who resided on it until the year 1812. Both Roi and Metté state that the lot contained about one-half of an arpent.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by Antoine Burbonné. See claim No. 65.

No. 69.—Louis Pencenneau claims a lot in Peoria, containing about one-half of an arpent of land, and bounded northwardly by a cross street, separating it from a lot of Louis Defond, southwardly by a lot claimed by Antoine Lapance, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, and westwardly by a street.

Proof. Jacques Metté testifies, on oath, that, in the year 1801 or 1802, when he went to live in Peoria, he found one Jourdan living on the above described lot; that, afterwards, he (Metté) saw residing on the said lot one Raboin, who, to the best of his recollection, abandoned it about the year 1807 or 1708, after which, the house, being old and decayed, was pulled down, and all the improvements of the lot went to ruin; in which vacant or unoccupied state the lot remained until the autumn of the year 1810, when Antoine St. Dennis and Jacques Metté testify, that the said lot was again improved and built upon by Louis Binet, who continued to reside on the said lot until the autumn of the year 1812, when Captain Craig forced the inhabitants to leave Peoria. Both Metté and St. Dennis describe the lot as containing about one-half of an arpent of land.

Remark. This lot is also claimed by the above named Raboin. See claim No. 45.

No. 70.—Louis Pencenneau claims a lot in Peoria, bounded northwardly by a lot of Pierre Lavassieur, dit Chamberlain, eastwardly by a street separating it from the Illinois river, southwardly by a cross street, and westwardly by a back street.

Proof. Jacques Metté testifies, on oath, that when he went to live in Peoria, in the year 1801 or 1802, he found Augustine Laroche residing on and cultivating the above described lot, where he continued to reside until some time in the year 1812. Antoine St. Dennis in like manner testifies, that, when he went to live in Peoria in the year 1810, he found Augustine Laroche living on the above described lot, where he continued to live until some time towards the close of the year 1811, and that the house was destroyed by Captain Craig in the year following. Louis Pencenneau, Jun., testifies that he had always understood that Augustine Laroche gave the above described lot to his father, the above named Louis Pencenneau. And Antoine St. Dennis and Louis Pencenneau, Jun., testify, that, soon after the peace in 1815, the above named Louis Pencenneau built a house on the above described lot, and that he continued to occupy the same until the autumn of the year 1817; and all three describe the lot as containing about one-half of an arpent of land.

All which is respectfully submitted.

[2d Session.]

CANADIAN VOLUNTEER BOUNTY LAND WARRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 11, 1821.

Mr. ANDERSON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom the petition of William Pope was referred, stating that, in the year 1818, he became by purchase, for a valuable consideration, the owner and assignee of a Canadian land warrant; that, when he purchased it, he did not know that there was any law or rule creating any difficulty to his procuring a patent in his own name; that, from the recent construction of the law under which the warrant was issued at the General Land Office, forbidding the location of those warrants, except in the name of the original warrantees, he will entirely lose the benefit of his warrant, inasmuch as it is wholly impracticable now to find the warrantee, unless Congress will grant relief; he, therefore, prays that a law may pass authorizing the proper officers to issue a patent to him—reported:

That, on the 5th day of March, 1816, a law was passed for granting to certain Canadian volunteers, therein described, bounties in land. By the provisions of this law, the Secretary of War was directed to issue warrants, and the volunteers were authorized to make locations within the designated district, "subject to such rules and regulations as to priority of choice and the manner of location, as the President of the United States should prescribe;" that, on the 3d of March, 1817, an amendatory law was passed, which, besides containing other restrictions, enacted that the warrants then unlocated "should be located on such lands as have been offered for sale, and no other," and also limited the time for issuing warrants to one year from that date; that, under these laws, two hundred and sixty-seven warrants only have ever been issued.

There is no prohibition contained in either of the laws against the assignment of the warrants to be issued under them, such as had been previously introduced into the laws giving bounties in land to the soldiers of the United States' army; nor did the language in which the warrant was expressed give to the holder or purchaser any intimation that the sale and assignment would violate either law or policy. The committee is perfectly satisfied that not only the holders of the warrants, but the community generally, supposed that the warrantees had a perfect right to sell and transfer them unqualifiedly, and that the purchaser would enjoy the full benefit of the purchase by procuring a patent in his own name. This opinion prevailed not only with those persons, but at the General Land Office. It was the rule at the office to regard the assignments, and to issue patents to the assignees, until the 26th day of December, 1819, on which day the practice was discontinued under the opinion of the Attorney General, declaring that it was "the safer opinion that the warrants cannot pass by assignment or transfer." Of the two hundred and sixty-seven warrants issued, one hundred and seventy-four have been patented; of this number seventy have been patented in the names of assignees. There are, of course, now remaining ninety-three, on which patents have not been issued; it is impossible to state what proportion of these have been assigned.

The committee are of opinion that, unless some provisions shall be made by law, many persons, against whom there can be no imputation of fraud, will be injured, as in most of the cases there exists no possibility of finding the individual to whom the warrant was issued. Nor does it seem that even negligence can be imputed to them, as neither the language of the law nor the face of the warrant gave to them any indication that the purchase was improper. But if he sought further information, the practice of the Land Office would seem not only to approve and countenance the purchase, but to have given an official construction of the law on which he might safely rely. A sudden departure from that construction would injure those who had been deluded by the previous practice.

The omission, in two successive laws on this subject, of any clause prohibiting the assignment of these warrants, seems clearly to indicate that the Legislature did not intend to transfer to the case of these volunteers the policy of the previous laws. It is perhaps not material for the committee to inquire into the reasons of that change of policy; but it is probable that the facts that these warrants were to be issued to officers as well as to soldiers; that they were all volunteers; and that the land was a mere donation on the part of Congress, created a belief that it was unnecessary to annex any fetters to the donation. It may be mentioned, too, as an evidence of the general opinion on this subject, that the practice of withholding the warrant, and issuing a notification to the soldiers, never prevailed under these laws; the original warrant was, in every case, delivered to the owner.

Upon a consideration of the circumstances, the committee are of opinion that the petitioner is fairly entitled to relief; but as it is a fact, with which they are acquainted, that other cases depend on the same ground, they have thought proper to report a bill embracing all of them.

APPLICATION OF A LAND PURCHASER TO CORRECT AN ERROR IN HIS PURCHASE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 17, 1821.

Mr. ANDERSON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Benjamin Freeland, reported:

The petitioner states, that, with his family, in the year 1818, he emigrated from the State of Maryland to the State of Indiana, with a view of settlement for life, and with the hope of obtaining a small tract of land for each of his children, some of whom are married. That, with this view, he attended the late sales of public lands at Terre Haute, having made several selections, which he describes. That he attended during the first week of the sales, waiting an opportunity to purchase the quarter sections he wished; that he was a few minutes absent at the time a new township was offered for sale, and being informed by a friend that the lands he wished were then "crying," he instantly bid for them, and purchased them, when, in fact, there was a mistake of a whole range, the lands which he wanted being in range two, and not in range one, which he purchased. That, as soon as he discovered his mistake, he applied to the Register and Receiver for redress, but, having paid for the lands, they declared it out of their power to afford relief. That his object was not speculation, but cultivation; and that, if the lands he purchased were fit for that purpose, he would not trouble Congress with his misfortunes, but that they are utterly unfit for farming purposes. He prays for permission to locate lands within the same district, to the amount of those purchased through mistake.

It appears, by a letter of the Register of the district to one of the members of the committee, that, if it had been within the power of the Register and Receiver to have rescinded the purchases, it would have been done; but, the money having been paid, and the receipts given, they concluded they had no such power. It is believed that, in the crowd and bustle of a public auction, the most vigilant and intelligent may sometimes mistake, particularly where the description of an article, not exhibited, is materially and altogether changed by the mistake of a single word. The committee cannot believe that the Government will be disposed to take any advantage of a mistake which a liberal merchant, in favor of his customer, would instantly correct.

They, therefore, report a bill for his relief.

POWER OF J. B. MORALES AND THE BARON DE CARONDELET TO GRANT LANDS IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 20, 1821.

To the Senate of the United States:

WASHINGTON, January 18, 1821.

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, of the 14th instant, "requesting the President of the United States to communicate to the Senate any information he may have as to the power or authority which belonged to Don John Bonaventure Morales, and to the Baron Carondelet, to grant and dispose of the lands of Spain in Louisiana previously to the year 1803," I transmit a report from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting a letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the document to which it refers.

JAMES MONROE.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 16, 1821.

The Secretary of the Treasury, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate, of the 4th instant, requesting the President of the United States "to communicate to the Senate any information he may have as to the power or authority which belonged to Don John Bonaventure Morales, and to the Baron Carondelet, to grant and dispose of the lands of Spain in Louisiana previously to the year 1803," has the honor to submit the letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, which is hereto annexed, and the document to which it refers.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JAMES MONROE, President of the United States.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 16, 1821.

A resolve of the Senate of the United States, of January 4, 1821, "that the President of the United States be requested to communicate to the Senate any information he may have as to the power or authority which belonged to Don John Bonaventure Morales, and to the Baron de Carondelet, to grant and dispose of the lands of Spain in Louisiana previously to the year 1803," having been referred to me by the Secretary of the Treasury, with directions to "furnish such information as the records and documents of this office afford," I have the honor to report that, previously to the year 1790, the Governor General of Louisiana had power to divide and grant the lands of his sovereign; that, by an ordinance given at San Lorenzo, October 22, 1798, the power of dividing and granting lands was vested in the Intendancy of the Spanish province; that the Intendant, Don John Bonaventure Morales, acting by the authority of the ordinance of October 22, 1798, above mentioned, published at New Orleans, on the 17th of July, 1799, rules and regulations relative to the disposal of the public lands of Spain, consisting of thirty-eight articles, amply describing and declaring all that his Government required to be done for the disposal of those lands. Of those rules and regulations, a copy in the original Spanish, with a translation into the French and English languages, is now in this office. An English translation is herewith transmitted. Those rules and regulations were published at St. Louis, on the 6th of January, 1800.

From this document, together with the articles Nos. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, and 22, in the appendix to the volume of Land Laws, all the information can be obtained which the records and documents in this office can furnish.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Don John Bonaventure Morales, Intendant pro tem., and sub-delegate of the General Superintendency of these provinces, Judge of the Admiralty of the crown lands, &c. &c.:

The King, whom may God save, having vouchsafed to declare and order, by an ordinance given at San Lorenzo, the 22d of October, of last year, 1798, that the Intendancy of these provinces, to the exclusion of all other authority, should be put into possession of the privilege of dividing and granting all kinds of lands belonging to his Crown, which right, by his order of the 24th of August, 1770, was in the hands of the civil and military Government, and wishing to fulfil this important trust, not only according to the 81st article of the ordinance of the Intendants of New Spain, the regulations of the year 1754, quoted in said article, and the laws concerning them, but, also, according to local circumstances, and to what may, without injury to the King's interests, contribute to the encouragement, and promote the greatest welfare of his subjects already settled, or who may settle in those parts of his possessions. After having, with the strictest attention, examined the regulations made by his Excellency the Count of O'Reily, the 18th of February, 1770, those which have been made by the present Governor, Don Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, the 1st of January, 1798, and the information given to me on that subject by Don Manuel Serrano, assessor to the Intendancy, and by other persons learned in those matters, in order that all those who wish to get lands may know in what manner they are to solicit them, and the conditions on which they may be granted or sold to them; that those who, being already possessors, and not having the necessary titles, may know what steps they are to take in order to come to an arrangement; that the commandants, as sub-delegates of the Intendancy, may be informed of what they are to observe; that the Surveyor General of this capital, and the other surveyors under him, may be informed of the formalities with which they are to proceed to the surveying of the lands granted, sold, or let; that the clerk of the Treasury may know what fees he is entitled to, and what duties he will have to fulfil; and that none may be ignorant of any of the requisites most effectually calculated to promote so important an object as the security of landed property; under the reservation of augmenting, altering, or annulling, as time and circumstances may render necessary to accomplish the benevolent purposes of His Majesty, I have resolved that the regulations explained in the following articles shall be observed:

ARTICLE 1. To each new family, which may have all the necessary requisites to be admitted into the number of cultivators of these provinces, and who shall have leave from Government to settle on the place they may have chosen, it shall be granted for once, if it is on the banks of the Mississippi, four, six, or eight arpents in front of the river, on the usual depth of forty. And, if in some other place, the quantity they may be deemed able to cultivate, and which may be thought necessary for them, for the pasture of their cattle, in proportion to the number of heads in said family. It is to be understood that the grant is never to exceed eight hundred superficial arpents.

ART. 2. If, in order to get these grants, they go to the chief town to solicit, to the petition shall be subjoined the permission granted, by the surveyor to settle on the place they may have thought convenient; and, if it be in the posts, the commandants, at the same time that they give information that the lands petitioned for are vacant, and belong to the Crown, will also add that the petitioner has leave from Government to settle, mentioning the date of the letter or advice they may have received.

ART. 3. Those who may have obtained their grants on the banks of the river will be bound, in the first year of their taking possession, to erect sufficient dams to prevent the overflowing of the waters; and to dig the necessary ditches for the running off of the water which may drain off during the time of high water. They are bound, besides, to cut open and keep the King's highway in good order, and which shall be at least thirty feet wide, and also bridges, fifteen feet wide, over the canals or ditches that may cross it. The same rules shall be observed, according to the custom of the respective districts, by every owner of granted lands, in whatever place they may have obtained them.

ART. 4. The new settlers who may have obtained lands shall likewise be bound to clear and improve, in the precise term of three years, the whole front of their grant, on the depth of two acres, at least, under the penalty (this condition not being fulfilled) that the lands shall revert to the Crown. The commandants and syndics shall see that this, as well as what is directed in the preceding article, be strictly complied with, and will give to the Intendancy timely information of what they may remark, and will be answerable to His Majesty for not doing so.

ART. 5. If lands belonging to minors should remain without being cleared, either entirely, or as much as is ordered, and the dams, road, ditches, or bridges, should not be made, the commandant or syndic of the district will see whose neglect it is, and if it be the tutor's, he will urge him to obey the orders, and, in the event of his failing so to do, will give notice of it. But, if the neglect arises from the minor's not being able to support such expenses, the commandant or syndic will make a summary report of it, which he will send to the Intendancy, that they may order such land to be sold for the benefit of the minors, to whom alone such a privilege is granted, provided that, in the course of six months, a purchaser may be found; otherwise, it shall be granted gratis to whoever may petition for the same, or sold for the benefit of the Treasury.

ART. 6. During the aforesaid three years no owner of granted lands shall be allowed to sell or barter the same; and, even after that term, it shall not be allowable to do so, if he has failed to fulfil the conditions explained in the foregoing articles. And, in order to avoid all abuses and impositions, all sales of granted lands shall be deemed void which shall not have been made without having previously obtained from the Intendancy a written permission, which shall only be granted after having most scrupulously examined whether the conditions have or have not been fulfilled.

ART. 7. In order to avoid, for the future, all confusion and law suits, of which we have daily examples, it has been considered useful that the prothonotaries of this town, and the commandants of the posts, should not sign any deed of sale of granted lands, unless the settler should give to the purchaser the formal deed, which may have been given to him, taking care besides to mention in the deed the fixed number of acres, the boundaries, and other circumstances proceeding from the act of survey, which shall be subjoined to it.

ART. 8. In case the small depth of the points of land on the banks of the river should prevent from granting to those who might settle upon them the usual quantity of forty arpents, they will be allowed, as a compensation, a more extended front, or, if nobody should wish either to purchase or solicit the grant of them, they shall be proportionably divided between the neighboring settlers, that they may keep in order the dams, roads, bridges, &c., as is above prescribed.

ART. 9. Although the King gives up the property of the lands which may be sold, distributed, or granted in his name, the purchasers or owners of granted lands are to know that His Majesty reserves to himself the right of taking from the forests, known by the name of Cyprières, all the timber which may be requisite for his service, and especially that which his navy may stand in need of; and that, in the same manner, and with the same liberty to the undertakers, as they have enjoyed to this day; but they will not think themselves in anywise authorized to cut down more timber than may be necessary, nor to make use, by splitting, of that which they may have cut down and found unfit for masts.

ART. 10. In the posts of the Opelousas and Attakapas, the greatest quantity of lands to be granted shall be one square league; and where the depth shall only be forty arpents, half a league more in front shall be granted. It is established as a general rule, that, in order to get in the above posts half a league in front, the petitioner must prove that he owns one hundred head of cattle, some horses, some sheep, and two slaves; and so on, in proportion, for a larger quantity, without, however, exceeding the quantity above mentioned.

ART. 11. They will, as much as possible, and as far as the nature of the lands will allow, avoid leaving intervals between the concessions, for it is advantageous that all the concessions should adjoin each other, either that the settlers may mutually assist one another, or for the easier administration of justice and better observance of the regulations of police, indispensable in all places, and more so in new settlements.

ART. 12. If, notwithstanding what has been above prescribed, swampy grounds or any other cause should render it necessary to leave some lands vacant, the commandants and syndics will take care that the settlers of that district alone take the firewood necessary for their consumption, and only as much as they may want: for, should they take more, or should any individual from another post come and cut down timber and firewood without leave from the Intendancy, he shall, besides the indemnity which he will be bound to pay to the Treasury for the damage he may have done, be fined, the first time, twenty-five dollars, the second double, and the third time be put in prison, according to the degree of offence. The aforesaid fines shall be divided between the Treasury, the judge, and the informer.

ART. 13. The new settler, to whom lands may have been granted in a settlement, will not be allowed to get any in another, unless he has previously made it appear that he has owned the former during three years, and fulfilled the above prescribed conditions.

ART. 14. The alluvions brought on by the current of the river are often the cause that a part of the concessions becomes useless, so that we have examples of proprietors having given up to the Crown the most expensive part of their lands for bridges, ditches, &c. and reserve for themselves the only good part; and if such an abuse was not stopped, the greatest evil might result for the neighbors; it is hereby declared, that the Treasury will not admit of the giving up of any part of the land, unless it does include all the space comprehended in the concession or act in virtue of which he has obtained the property of the land he is desirous of giving up.

ART. 15. All concessions shall be granted in the name of the King by the General Intendant of this province, who will order the Surveyor General, or the sub-surveyor named by him, to make the survey and fix the boundaries of said land not only upon the front, but also upon the depth. This operation shall be performed in presence of the commandant or syndic of the district, and of two neighboring settlers, and these four will sign the proceedings which shall be drawn up by the surveyor.

ART. 16. The aforesaid proceedings, with a certified copy of the same, shall be sent by the surveyor to the Intendancy, that from the original a suitable deed may be made out in conjunction with the King's attorney. To this deed shall be joined the certified copy given by the surveyor. The original shall be deposited in the office of the clerk of the finances; and a fit book shall annually be made, with an alphabetical list, in order to facilitate its use when the case may require, and for the greater security. And that at all times, and notwithstanding happening events, the wanted information may be obtained, the surveyor shall likewise keep another numbered book, in which he will enter the verbal-procès of the surveys which he may make. And he will note the folio of the book in which he has entered the plan of survey, both on the original which shall be deposited in the office of finances, and on the copy joined to the deed.

ART. 17. There shall also be another numbered book in the office of finances, in which shall be entered the titles of gratuitous grants, in which, besides the usual forms, shall be mentioned the folio of the book on which they are transcribed. It is, moreover, necessary that notice of it should be taken in the office of accounts of the armies and finances, and that under the penalty of being null. The office of accounts will also have another book similar to that of the office just mentioned, and, at the time of entering the notice, shall mention the folio of the book in which it is registered.

ART. 18. Experience has proved that a great number of those who have petitioned for lands, have thought themselves true possessors of them from the time they obtained the first decree, by which the surveyor was ordered to survey them, and to put them into their possession; others, after the survey made, have neglected to apply for the deed; and as such abuses, by still keeping on, would increase the confusion and disorder necessarily resulting from them, it is declared that those who have obtained the aforesaid decrees, although the survey has been made in virtue of them, and that they have been put into possession, shall not look upon himself as proprietor of said lands until a real deed, vested with all the formalities before mentioned, shall have been delivered to them.

ART. 19. All those who own lands in virtue of formal deeds given by the Governors of this province since the period it has become part of the Spanish dominions, and the owners of them at the time it belonged to the French, far from being disturbed, shall, on the contrary, be protected and maintained in their possessions.

ART. 20. Those who, without the deed or possession mentioned in the foregoing article, should occupy lands, shall be turned out of them as belonging to the Crown; but if they had owned them better than ten years, those who may be looked upon as proprietors shall be admitted to an arrangement; that is to say, they shall not be deprived of those lands, provided, after an information and summary proceeding, and with the intervention of the King's attorney to the office of finances, they bind themselves to pay a just and moderate retribution, according to the extensiveness of the lands, of their situation, and other circumstances; and the stipulated price once paid to the King's Treasury, a deed founded upon the proceedings shall be delivered to them.

ART. 21. Those who fail in the case expressed in the 18th article, if they have not cleared any part, nor made any sort of improvement upon the lands of which they thought themselves proprietors in virtue of the first decree of Government, not being among the number of those received in the class of new settlers, shall be deprived of them, or shall be admitted to an arrangement in the form expressed in the foregoing article. If, on the contrary, they belong to said class, they are to observe what is ordered in the following article.

ART. 22. In the precise and peremptory term of six months from the day on which the present regulations shall have been published in each post, all those who own lands without titles from the Governors, and those who, having obtained a grant for a certain number of acres, should have made themselves masters of a greater quantity, shall make it known, either that a title may be given to them, if possible, to admit them to an arrangement, or to declare said lands to belong to the Crown, if they have not owned them more than ten years. It is to be understood that if, after said term, it becomes known through some other means, they shall neither get the deed nor be admitted to an accommodation.

ART. 23. The informer, as to lands occupied after the expiration of the term mentioned in the foregoing article, shall have as a reward, one-fourth of the price for which they may be sold or granted by way of accommodation; or, if they should suit himself, he shall have the refusal of the purchase of them, by way of accommodation, at the estimated price, and a deduction shall be made of one-fourth of the price, which belongs to him as informer.

ART. 24. As it is impossible, considering the local circumstances of these provinces, that all the vacant lands of the Crown should be sold at auction, as it is ordered by the fifteenth law, title twelve, book fourth, of the laws of the kingdom, they shall be sold as they are called for, with the intervention of the King's attorney, at the office of finances, at the price at which shall be taxed those applied for. It is to be understood that, if the purchasers have no money to pay down, they will be allowed to purchase those lands at an extinguishable rent, during which they will pay five per cent. per annum.

ART. 25. Besides the moderate price at which the lands shall be taxed, the purchaser will be bound to pay down the right of media annatta, or half a year, and of remittance to Spain; which, according to the custom of Havana, (which has become a law,) is reduced to two and a half per cent. of the estimated price, and eighteen per cent. of the sum, to which amounts the said two and a half per cent.; they will also have to pay down the surveyors' and notaries' fees.

ART. 26. The sale of the lands shall be made on the same conditions, and under the same charges of highways, bridges, and ditches, as expressed in the foregoing articles; but the purchasers will not run the risk of being deprived of them; if, in the course of three years, they have not fulfilled the said conditions, the commandant or syndics will compel them to comply with the order in a reasonable time; and if they do not obey, the said work shall be done at their expense.

ART. 27. In said sales they will always endeavor to comply with what is directed in the 11th article, considering the advantages and utility arising from the settlements being close to one another, whenever it can conveniently be done.

ART. 28. The titles of property of lands which shall be sold or given by way of accommodation, shall be made out by the Intendant General, and legalized by the clerk of the finances; who after it is ascertained that the stipulated price, and media annatta or rent of the stipulated price, have been paid into the Treasury, shall set it down in writing, according to the summary act which shall be drawn up of it, with the intervention of the King's attorney.

ART. 29. The said summary act shall be deposited in the office of finances, and the deed shall be transcribed in another book kept for the entering of sales and of grants of lands, in the same manner as is ordered in the 17th article for the gratuitous grants. The chief office of accounts shall also keep a distinct book, to take notes of the deeds which shall be delivered for the sales and grants of land by accommodation.

ART. 30. The surveyors' fees, in all cases arising under the present regulations, shall be proportioned to his work, and to what they have been used to pay him until now. Those of the clerks of the finances, whenever there is not an extraordinary work, and when the new settlers are not poor, (for in that case he shall not take any thing from them,) shall be five dollars, including the registry and other formalities. And those of the appraisers and interpreters, if they are sometimes employed in translating some pieces, receiving declarations, or other acts, shall be regulated by the tariff of the province.

ART. 31. The Indians owning land, throughout the whole of this Government, shall not be disturbed, but, on the contrary, shall be maintained and supported, and the commandants, syndics, and surveyors, shall pay the strictest attention to it, in order to make their reports in consequence thereof.

ART. 32. There shall not be proceeded to the sale or granting of any land until previous and formal information has been received that such lands are vacant; and, to avoid prejudicial errors, they are to know that, besides the hand and seal of the commandant, or syndic of the district, that information shall also be vested with that of the surveyor and two settlers, neighbors of the land petitioned for. It is to be understood that if, notwithstanding this necessary precaution, another person should claim the land, and that there should be sufficient reasons to give it back to him, the commandant or syndic who should have signed the information, together with the surveyor and settlers, shall indemnify the sufferer for the loss sustained.

ART. 33. The settlers shall endeavor to have, as much as possible, all their petitions for land written in Spanish; in which language shall equally be written all the advices and informations which the commandants may have to give, and, in the posts in which this may not be practicable, they will follow the ancient custom.

ART. 34. All the lands belonging to the Crown which shall be found vacant, either in the towns or villages already settled, or which may be settled, shall be sold for cash, agreeably to the formalities prescribed in the 24th article, and others relating to the sale of lands.

ART. 35. The owners of lands which have been distributed, both on the front of this town and on the extremities northeast and southwest, will present within the space of three months, to the Intendancy, the titles they have obtained for them, that if any material circumstances should be wanting, their property may be secured to them in a legal manner.

ART. 36. The same thing shall be done before the sub-delegates of Mobile and Pensacola, for those who have obtained concessions of lands in their respective settlements, that this Intendancy, by being informed of it, may give the necessary orders for what they think most proper to indemnify the King's Treasury without injuring the proprietors.

ART. 37. In the office of accounts of this province, and other offices depending from the jurisdiction of this Intendancy, a separate account shall be kept of the amount of the sale of lands, in order to give yearly information to his Majesty of what this branch of the King's revenues may bring in, as it is ordered by the 13th article of the King's ordinance of the 15th of October, 1754.

ART. 38. The commandants or syndics shall be, in their respective districts, entrusted with the collection of the taxes put upon the lands. They shall receive the necessary advices, and they shall annually send to the Treasury the sums which they may have collected, that the usual receipts may be forwarded to them. And that the present regulations may come to the knowledge of every person, and that the thirty-eight articles of which they are composed may have their full effect, until it please His Majesty to dispose otherwise, it shall be translated into French by the King's interpreter, Mr. Peter Derbigny, printed in both tongues, sent into all the places and posts of the jurisdiction of this Intendancy, that their commandants, or sub-delegates of the same, may make it known to the inhabitants in the usual form. There shall also be sent copies of the same to the Governor, and most illustrious Cabilde, that they may lend their assistance to the execution of what has been above resolved, according to the laws and ordinances given on that subject, and in the full confidence that this is the best that can be done without any injury to the King's interest, and for the prosperity of His Majesty's subjects in this colony.

JUAN VENTURA MORALES.

NEW ORLEANS, July 17, 1799.

These regulations were published at St. Louis, 6th February, 1800; for proof of which, see minutes No. 3, p. 405. They are, besides, rather declaratory of principles which already existed in the colonial code, than the creation of new ones.

NEW ORLEANS, July 20, 1789.

Instructions of Governor Miro to Commandant Lozaber, as to distribution of lands.

As it is necessary that families should settle on their arrival, you will place them, without further instructions, in the following order: To each family having no negroes will be allowed six acres in front on the bayou or lake, by forty in depth, forming two hundred and forty acres. To such as have two, three, or four negroes, or have in family four or six children grown up, or able-bodied men, will be conceded as many as ten acres in front by the aforesaid depth. To such as will bring with them ten or twenty negroes, will be conceded fifteen; and to such as bring more than twenty, will be conceded twenty in front. By so many acres in front, by the customary depth of forty, I mean that they be of commodious access, as is the case on the banks of the Mississippi; for it is proper that each family shall have access to the water of the lakes on which they are settled; but if the depth be short, it will be proper to allow a larger front, and a smaller one if it is greater. You will, however, be regulated by the situation of the lands, taking care to allot the number of square acres composing the portion above mentioned according to the strength of each family. The portions of land to be conceded ought to be more or less great, as above mentioned, not only on account of the slaves each family brings with them, but also according to the property they may possess, and with which they may purchase slaves, wherefore they are entitled to more lands than those who bring nothing.

[2d SESSION.

LOCATION OF THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT OF ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 24, 1821.

Mr. COOKE, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the Legislature of the State of Illinois, respecting the title to the land upon which their seat of Government is located, reported:

The memorialists state that Congress granted to the State of Illinois four sections of land, to be selected by commissioners appointed under the provision of the 13th section of the schedule of the constitution thereof, for the purpose of locating thereupon the seat of Government of said State for twenty years. That, in making such selection, the commissioners (with three other adjoining sections) made choice of section number 16, in township number 6 north, range number 1 east, of the third principal meridian. That, by virtue of the authority vested in them by law, the commissioners proceeded to lay out a town, and, at great expense, have erected a State-house upon the said section number 16. The Legislature, fearing the title of the State to the said section may be considered doubtful in consequence of the grant previously made by the United States of the sixteenth section in each township to the State, for the use of such township for the encouragement of learning, pray Congress to pass a law declaring the validity of its title, and to direct the issuing of a patent therefor; and also to authorize the State to make a selection of another section in said township in lieu of the sixteenth, for the use of the inhabitants thereof.

The committee, upon examining the subject, find that, prior to the passage of the act entitled "An act to enable the people of the Illinois Territory to form a constitution and State Government, and for the admission of such State into the Union on an equal footing with the original States," passed the 18th April, 1818, the section number sixteen in every township was reserved for the maintenance of public schools within the township. This reservation for that purpose has at no time, however, previous to the organization of a State Government, been held absolutely to vest the title thereto in the township; on the contrary, Congress has repeatedly disposed of such sections, both by granting it absolutely to individuals who, by virtue of ancient settlement thereupon, have received donations covering their improvements, and qualifiedly to those to whom the right of pre-emption was granted, who had settled upon that section in any township. Congress seems to have acted upon the principle that a simple reservation of land for a specific purpose, does not amount to an application of such reservation to that purpose, but remains subject to the authority of the reserving power, until some positive enactment declares its application and appropriation to that object.

The sixteenth section, therefore, in Illinois was not applied to the use of, nor vested in, the township, until it became so by the compact entered into between that State and the United States; a compact which forms a part of her constitution. By virtue of that compact, the right of each township is guaranteed to the section number sixteen, or, when it "has been sold or otherwise disposed of, to other lands equivalent thereto," with the exception, however, in the opinion of the committee, of this particular case.

By the thirteenth section of the schedule of the constitution it is provided, "that the seat of Government for the State shall be at Kaskaskia until the General Assembly shall otherwise provide. The General Assembly, at their first session holden under the authority of this constitution, shall petition the Congress of the United States to grant to this State a quantity of land, to consist of not more than four nor less than one section, or to give to this State the right of pre-emption in the purchase of the said quantity of land; the said land to be situate on the Kaskaskia river, and as near as may be east of the third principal meridian on said river. Should the prayer of such petition be granted, the General Assembly, at their next session thereafter, shall provide for the appointment of five commissioners to make the selection of said land so granted; and, shall further provide for laying out a town upon the land so selected; which town, so laid out, shall be the seat of Government for this State for the term of twenty years."

This provision forms a part of that whole of which the compact above alluded to is also a part; and, inasmuch as its terms are general, and, therefore, leaving the commissioners, when authorized, as they afterwards were by Congress, to make a selection of any four adjoining sections, without restriction to those of particular numbers, the possibility that the sixteenth section might be, as it has really turned out to be, one of the most eligible for the purpose contemplated, it is conceived by the committee, constitutes an exception to the otherwise general effect of the compact; a compact which, without such exception, could not be revoked without the mutual consent of the State in its constitutional character, and of the United States.

Adopting this as the correct view of the subject, the committee conceive the State was authorized to select the sixteenth section for the purpose to which it is applied; and, as the grant of these four sections is a grant in addition to the grants previously made to the State, they are also of opinion, that it is right to authorize the State to make a selection of another section within the same township, for the use of the inhabitants thereof, in lieu of the section aforesaid, which, under such previous grant, would have been applied to that use. They report a bill accordingly.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA TO TAX THE PUBLIC LANDS AFTER SALE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 26, 1821.

Mr. THOMAS, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, praying permission to tax all lands sold by the United States on or subsequent to the first day of July, 1820; and, also, all lands sold since the first day of December, 1816, on which the payments to the United States have been completed, reported:

That the memorialists allege, as the reasons of their application, "that the United States now require cash payments for lands sold subsequently to the first of July last;" that the revenue of the State from lands is small, and that the people of Indiana are desirous that the exemption from taxation should be abolished.

The committee beg leave to remark, that the provision in the act of Congress providing for the admission of Indiana into the Union, that lands sold subsequently to the first day of December, 1816, should be exempt from taxation for five years from the day of sale, was not (as the memorialists suppose) imposed on the State by Congress as a restriction, but was, in fact, a compact entered into between Congress, on behalf of the people of the United States, and the convention in behalf of the people of Indiana, by which Congress granted to the State a full and adequate equivalent for the exemption. The United States, by that law, offered to the convention "for their free acceptance or rejection," section No. 16 in every township, for the use of schools; all the salt springs in the State, with the lands necessary for the working them, for the use of the State; three per cent. of the net proceeds of the sales of public lands for the purpose of making roads and canals within the State; one entire township "for the use of a seminary of learning;" and four sections of land for the seat of Government; and the only consideration desired for these important grants, was the exemption from taxation which the memorialists wish to have abolished. The grants were accepted by the convention, and it is impossible to suppose that the grants made by Congress were not considered, at the time, as much more valuable than the right of immediate taxation on lands to be disposed of afterwards. The State and people of Indiana are now in the full enjoyment of those grants which the General Assembly do not propose to surrender; and there is, therefore, no reciprocity in the prayer of the memorial.

It may be further observed, that the exemption from taxation for a limited time, in favor of purchasers of public lands, has been stipulated for by Congress in the admission of all the States in which the United States held lands. It was the policy of Congress to encourage purchasers to vest their funds in the public lands, and the exemption from taxation is an important inducement to do so.

The uniform perseverance of Congress in procuring the exemption, affords strong grounds to believe that it has a beneficial influence, and that it ought not to be surrendered in any case without the most cogent reasons.

The committee are of opinion that so much of the prayer of the memorial as applies to lands already sold, could not be granted without a breach of that good faith which ought always to be observed, and kept inviolate between the Government and the people. The purchases have been made with a promise of exemption from taxation, and that promise ought not to be broken. But the committee look in vain for any circumstance which ought to induce Congress to make the desired change even for the future. The fact that purchasers now pay cash for their lands, should rather entitle them to increased favor and protection; and it is the interest of the United States, instead of withdrawing any existing inducements, to increase and extend every encouragement in their power to those who will buy for cash. The situation of the revenue of Indiana could be no reason for interfering, unless Congress had withdrawn from that State some source of revenue which existed at the time the exemption was created.

From a full consideration of the memorial, and the reasons on which it is founded, your committee deem it inexpedient to grant the permission prayed for, and, therefore, recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the memorialists ought not to be granted.

[2d SESSION.]

MILITARY BOUNTY LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 1, 1821.

Mr. MONELL made the following report:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the resolution of the 19th day of December, 1820, instructing the committee to inquire whether any, and, if any, what regulations can be adopted, consistent with the interests of the Government, whereby the soldiers of the late war, who have not received their bounty lands, can be better provided for than under existing laws, respectfully report:

By statements furnished from the General Land Office, it appears that, prior to the 30th of November, 1820, 24,420 warrants had issued for single bounties, and 979 for double bounties; that patents had issued thereupon for 19,114 of the former, and for 664 of the latter, leaving unsatisfied warrants on that day for single bounties 5,306, and for double bounties 315, which, when added together and estimated as single bounties, left 6,026 warrants unsatisfied on that day. These warrants, at 160 acres each, being the amount of a single bounty, are equal to 967,500 acres.

In addition to these outstanding and unsatisfied warrants, it appears by a letter from the Adjutant and Inspector General, that there remains about 14,500 non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates, who will be entitled to warrants upon application therefor. Taking into view the number of double bounties that may be embraced by this large number of claimants, it is believed that they may be safely estimated as equal to 15,000 single bounties, which are equal to 2,400,000 acres; add this to the quantity necessary to meet the unsatisfied warrants as stated above, and the aggregate will be 3,367,560 acres. The whole number of soldiers, from these statements, it will be seen, to whom patents are yet to be issued, considering them as entitled to single bounties only, is 21,026.

To examine whether any thing can be done consistent with the interests of the Government, by which this poor but meritorious class of our citizens may be benefited, was the object of the reference to the committee; and after the experience which the committee, in common with the community at large, have had of the little good which the soldiers to whom the patents have been issued, have derived from these lands; from a knowledge of the fact, that the necessities of many, upon leaving the service, and the want of society in consequence of the location of those lands in the wilderness, induced many others to sell their lands for less than one-fourth of the amount that would have been received for them by the Government at the minimum price of the public lands, are led to the conclusion that some change can be made upon this subject mutually beneficial to the Government and the individuals. Aside from the consideration which the committee deem important, that the location of large military tracts of land in any State greatly retards its settlement, and gives rise to endless litigation, growing out of fraudulent and defective conveyances, as well as out of sales made by such State in the enforcement of its revenue laws; and aside also from all arguments drawn from the demoralizing influence which the possession of such quantities of land by an uninformed and necessitous class of the community has upon them when means are competent to the successful practice of fraud and deception, the committee are of opinion that the regularity of the receipts into the Treasury from the sale of the public lands not only recommends, but greatly demands the curtailment of that competition which must result from throwing into market such large quantities of land, which, by the unavoidable circumstances of the case, is so greatly depreciated in value.

As relates to the soldiers themselves, the committee are of opinion that great advantages can be conferred by allowing them to relinquish their warrants, and in their stead to receive Treasury certificates, to be receivable only in payment for public lands, giving to each one an amount equal to the minimum price of one-half the quantity of the public land to which they are now entitled: by this means many may obtain, within the reach of neighbors, and the consequent advantages of society, a home for themselves and families, and enjoy the reward of their toil and their patriotism, instead, as under existing regulations, of being left a prey to the wealthy, and often designing and artful speculator. By this means, also, the Government will save one-half the quantity of land which it is now bound to distribute amongst the soldiers, which, at the minimum price, will be equal to $2,104,705.

The committee are aware that it may appear, at first view of the subject, that they propose to deal out unequal justice between those who have and those who have not received their bounty land. To this objection, it might be sufficient to say that experience has developed the lameness of the present law, and that it is proper to amend it. It is believed, too, that the curtailment of this description of land will open a competition amongst the holders of the patents already granted, and, therefore, enhance the value of their lands; but the committee think the objection entirely done away when opposed by the answer, that, to those who have received their patents, the Government has performed all that it stipulated to do.

Considering, therefore, as the committee do, that the interest of the Government, the interest of the claimants, and the interest of those who have already obtained their patents, will be promoted by the passage of the bill they have agreed upon, report it accordingly for the consideration of the House.

[2d SESSION.]

NEW MADRID CLAIMANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS, FEBRUARY 8, 1821.

SIR:

OFFICE ATTORNEY GENERAL UNITED STATES, May 11, 1820.

I have examined the letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with its enclosures, referred to me on yesterday, and, after an attentive consideration of the act of Congress of the 17th February, 1815, "for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, in the Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes," I am of the opinion—

1. That the patent must, under the provisions of this act, issue to the person who was the owner at the date of the act, or, in case of his death, to his heirs or devisees. The act attaches no assignable quality to the charity which it bestows; and the act being the only warrant of authority to the commissioner to issue a patent, at all, he must pursue that authority strictly. Even if these charities (for they are nothing else) were assignable, there is no sufficient evidence of assignment in the particular case submitted to me. The certificate of the clerk of a court "that there appears of record in his office a regular chain of title" from A to Z, is an extra official act, and entirely nugatory. He is a mere recording officer, and may certify copies from his records. But the law has not made him a judge of what is a valid deed, or a valid assignment, or what the legal operation of their terms to pass title. It was not the intention of Congress to make these charities a subject of speculation. The law was passed to help the poor who had been rendered indigent by a visitation of God, not to enrich the speculator. It was not their intention to encumber the Commissioner of the Land Office with the laborious duty of tracing the genuineness of a long chain of assignments, with all their usual concomitants of fraud and oppression, if not of forgery and perjury. The act looked to the immediate relief of the sufferers; and hence, by the terms of the act, the relief is strictly confined to them; so that I see nothing either in the language or object of the law to authorize the issuing of a patent to any other than the owner at the date of the act, or, if he be dead, to his heirs or devisees.

2. I am of opinion that it was not the intention of Congress, in authorizing the sufferers "to locate the like quantity of land on any of the public lands of the said Territory, the sale of which is authorized by law," to change or affect in any manner that admirable system of location by squares which had been so studiously adopted in relation to all their Territories. This is manifest from the consideration that they have made the avowed object of the act yield to this arrangement. The avowed object of the act was to give to the sufferer the same quantity of land which he had lost by the earthquakes; yet it is provided that if he had lost less than one hundred and sixty acres of land, (the smallest subdivision of a section,) he was still to have a patent for one hundred and sixty acres; if he had lost more than six hundred and forty acres, (the exact quantity of a section,) he was still to have but six hundred and forty acres; so that, in the first instance, he is to receive more than he has lost, and, in the last, less; for no other conceivable reason than the desire of Congress to preserve the uniformity and symmetry of the system which had been previously adopted for the location and settlement of all those Territories. On your last question I am, therefore, of the opinion that the locations under this act must conform with the general plan of surveying the public lands.

I have the honor, &c.,

WM. WIRT.

Hon. W. H. CRAWFORD, Treasury Department.

SIR:

OFFICE ATTORNEY GENERAL UNITED STATES, June 19, 1820.

Major Berry's letter of the 17th instant, which you have done me the honor to submit for my opinion, proposes that patents may issue, under the act of Congress of the 17th February, 1815, "for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, in the Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes," in four classes of cases, which I shall consider in the order presented by him.

1. "That patents may issue upon locations, made upon certificates for more than one hundred and sixty acres and less than six hundred and forty, where the locator takes one or more quarter sections, and so much of an adjoining one as will make the quantity."

In the communication which I had the honor to make to you on the 11th of the last month, I expressed the opinion that it was not the intention of Congress, in this act of charity to the New Madrid sufferers, to permit them, by their locations, to break in upon the plan of sections, and their subdivisions which had been adopted for the sale of these Territories; and I inferred this from the circumstances that, where a sufferer had lost less than a quarter section, he was still permitted to locate that quantity; and where he had lost more than a whole section he was reduced, in his right of location, to one entire section; both which regulations are departures from the general and avowed object of the law, (which was to give them the exact quantity they had lost,) and for the adoption of which the manifest reason was to preserve the entire system as far as it could be preserved. I am still of this opinion. These two cases, however, of the sufferer who has lost less than a quarter section, or more than a whole section, (the only two cases in which Congress has given an explicit direction,) will not furnish an answer to the case proposed by Major Berry; which is that of a sufferer who has lost more than a quarter section and less than a whole one; and yet a quantity not coinciding with any subdivision of the section. In this case, the only guide given us by the act is, that the party shall have the like quantity of land with that which he has lost; and if to give him this like quantity it becomes necessary to subdivide a quarter section, I do not perceive that it can be avoided consistently with the avowed object of the law. In making this subdivision, however, the policy of the law should be so far respected as not to change the rectangular and quadrilateral form of the residue of the quarter section; which can be effected only by making the subdividing line parallel and co-extensive with the line of the contiguous quarter section, which forms a part of his location. Suppose, for example, the party be entitled to two hundred acres; he will take one quarter section one hundred and sixty acres; and, from either of the adjoining quarter sections of the same section, he will take forty acres, to be cut off from it by a line parallel and co-extensive with the line of the quarter section which he has previously chosen. By this means he will get the exact quantity to which he is entitled, which meets the express object of the law; and he will get it in the form which interferes the least with the admirable system of our territorial surveys, which so far respects the manifest wish of Congress apparent on the face of the act. No other method occurs which so well attains both these purposes. I proceed to consider Major Berry's second proposition:

2. "That a location may be made to take so much of a fractional section or sections as will make the quantity, where the sections are made so by the river or private claims."

The act authorizes the sufferers "to locate the like quantity of land on any of the public lands of the said Territory, the sale of which is authorized by law;" the sale of fractional sections being authorized by law, they are consequently open to the location of the sufferers; this, as a general position, appears to me unavoidable under the language of this law. If a quarter section and a fractional section, together, will make the quantity to which the party is entitled, I do not perceive that it can be refused to him; or, if a fractional section alone will make the quantity, I do not perceive that it can be refused; or if part of a fractional section will give him the quantity, I should think him entitled to it as the law now stands; but if there be any local advantage attached to such fractional section, (e. g. if one side of it be washed by a river,) he ought not to be permitted so to divide it as to monopolize the whole of this advantage to himself, but to apportion it equally between the part which he takes and that which he leaves. So, if the quantity to which he is entitled under the law would require several fractional sections to make the complement bounded by a river, or any other local advantage, the party should not be permitted to string his location along the shore so as to pass from one range of sections into another, and thereby to engross the shore to himself; for this would be to abuse the charity of the law to the public detriment. It is dangerous to give a general answer to a general and abstract question like this; for that which is true, in the general, often becomes erroneous and unjust in its application to particular cases. It is better to put the specific case, and, if necessary, to accompany it by a diagram.

3. "That locations made in a square, previous to the sectional lines being run, &c., &c., &c., shall be patented."

This is wholly inadmissible. The authority given is to make these locations on any of the public lands of the Territory, the sale of which is authorized by law; but the sale is not authorized by law until the sectional lines are run; and, consequently, all locations previously made by these sufferers are unauthorized. The circumstance of their being located in a square is perfectly immaterial to the policy of the law; for, although in a square, they may not, and most probably will not, quadrate with the sectional lines of the general survey; since squares may lie to any and to every point of the compass, no two contiguous squares quadrating together; whereas the sectional scheme calls for parallel lines throughout the whole Territory.

4, and lastly. "That where a location shall be made upon a certificate issued in lieu of a town lot, certifying that the claimant may locate any quantity not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, and the claimant shall, at his option, locate a piece of land bounded by other claims, so that the whole quantity cannot be had, a patent shall issue for the location."

As a general proposition, this, I think, is to be answered affirmatively, though a diagram in the particular case might change my opinion. The law does not say that the party who has lost less than one hundred and sixty acres shall locate that precise quantity, but that he is authorized to locate and obtain any quantity of land not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres. He may, consequently, if he chooses, take less than one hundred and sixty acres; if he can find a less quantity together coming within the description of public lands, the sale of which is authorized by law.

The law is imperfect, and requires amendment. The opinions which I have expressed appear to me to correspond with the intention of Congress, so far as that intention is discoverable on the face of this act. Yet the case is far from being one of absolute certainty.

I have the honor to be, sir, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. WIRT.

The Hon. WM. H. CRAWFORD, Treasury Department.

SIR:

OFFICE ATTORNEY GENERAL UNITED STATES, June 22, 1820.

I perceive nothing in the statement of facts made to-day by Major Berry, to change the opinion which I had the honor of expressing to you on the 19th instant. The fundamental defect still remains, that the New Madrid locations were made on lands the sale of which was not then authorized by law. Those locations were, therefore, made without authority, and are void; and patents consequently cannot issue on them.

The contemporaneous survey of these void locations, with the general survey, and the permitting them to produce the effect of causing fractions in the general survey, was unauthorized by law. On the law as it stands I should pronounce the sales of these fractions illegal and void; because the public law, of which every one is bound to take notice, authorized no fractions from such a cause. The sales ought to be set aside, and the sections still subdivided according to law. This may produce a good deal of inconvenience to individuals, but we have no power to alter the law; and, so far as I can discern, nothing less than the power of Congress can sanction the radical error which has been committed, and the consequences which have followed it.

I have the honor, &c.,

WILLIAM WIRT.

Hon. W. H. CRAWFORD, Treasury Department.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 8, 1821.

I had the honor to receive your letter of 1st instant, enclosing a resolution of the Senate, dated 22d January, relative to New Madrid claimants, and requesting me to draught a bill on the subject. Instead of draughting a bill I beg leave to submit the following facts and observations, and hope they may afford some light to the committee in framing a bill to obviate the difficulties which encumber the subject.

The act of 3d March, 1811, authorizes (vol. 4, p. 360,) the survey of lands in Louisiana, the establishment of a land office, and the sale of lands there, when surveyed. In pursuance of this act a proclamation issued on the 30th of April, 1818, for the sale of lands at St. Louis.

The act of 12th April, 1814, (vol. 4, p. 682,) gives the right of pre-emption to settlers in Missouri, on the same terms as given by the act of 5th February, 1813, to settlers in Illinois, viz: one quarter section each, bounded by sectional lines.

The act of 17th February, 1815, (vol. 4, p. 803,) gives to the inhabitants of New Madrid a right to locate on any public lands in Missouri, a quantity not less than 160 acres, and not more than 640 acres; the Recorder is directed to issue a certificate to each person entitled to a tract, and the surveyor is directed to survey the tract, and return a plat of each location to the Recorder.

This office conceived that this act gave the Madrid claimants a right to locate at their option, without being limited by sectional lines. If they were to be limited by sectional lines, the direction that the surveyor should survey their locations was totally unnecessary; if they were to wait till the general surveys were made, the relief would not be suitable to persons whose farms had been destroyed by earthquakes. Under this construction the Madrid claimants made their locations. When the general surveys were completed, the connexion of them with the Madrid claims produced a number of irregular fractions of sections, and those fractions have many of them been sold.

The Attorney General has decided that the above construction is erroneous; that the act did not authorize a departure from, or encroachment upon, the established system of surveying; that the Madrid claimants were to be limited by sectional lines, and that the sales of the irregular fractions are void.

The act of 29th April, 1816, extends the right of pre-emption in Missouri to adjoining fractional sections.

The act of 17th February, 1818, establishes three more land offices in Missouri, to be opened when the lands are surveyed; the lands to be sold when the offices are opened.

The act of 3d March, 1819, extends the right of pre-emption to the district of Howard county.

The act of 17th March, 1820, directs the officers in Lawrence district to receive claims to pre-emption rights.

Under those various laws pre-emption claims have been entered; some of the claimants have paid the purchase money.

The first act in favor of pre-emptioners gives the right to a quarter section; the act in favor of Madrid claimants, (next in chronological order,) gives a right to locate; they locate adjoining those quarter sections. The next act extends the right of pre-emption to adjoining fractional sections; and, under this act, the pre-emptioners claim the land located by Madrid claimants. Again, Madrid claimants have located in the district of Howard county; some in conformity with sectional lines, others not. Under the act extending the right of pre-emption to Howard county, the pre-emptioners claim the lands previously located by Madrid claimants. It is believed that none of the irregular sections which have been sold are claimed either by New Madrid claimants, or by pre-emptioners. If those sales are void, I presume a law to give them validity will be necessary.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

HON. JESSE B. THOMAS, Chairman Committee Public Lands, Senate.

No. 335.

[2d Session.]

PROPOSITION TO GRANT LAND TO THE OLD STATES FOR THE PURPOSES OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 9, 1821.

Mr. THOMAS, from the Committee on Public Lands, being instructed to inquire into the justice and expediency of granting land for the purposes of education within the limits of the old States, corresponding with the appropriations which have been made for the same object within the limits of the new States, reported:

That, under laws of the United States, lands have been granted for the purposes of education in the States of Ohio, Louisiana, Indiana, Mississippi, Illinois, and Alabama, in the proportion of one thirty-sixth part of all the public lands within the State, with the addition of two townships, or forty-six thousand and eighty acres in each State, and to Louisiana an additional township, or twenty-three thousand and forty acres. The quantity which is already vested in each of the above States by the operation of this system, and which will vest in them, when the Indian title shall have been extinguished, and the whole of the lands are surveyed, will be exhibited with sufficient accuracy for all practical purposes by the annexed estimate of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and is a part of this report. The committee also remark that, by an act of the 18th of April, 1806, a donation of two hundred thousand acres of land were made to the State of Tennessee for the use of two colleges and academies in each county in the State, to be established by the Legislature thereof; and six hundred and forty acres in each six miles square, where it was practicable, for the use of schools; and that a township, or twenty-three thousand and forty acres was, on the 3d of March, eighteen hundred and nineteen, granted by the United States to the Connecticut Asylum for the education of deaf and dumb persons.

The lands thus granted to the States for the above purposes are not subject to taxation by the State Government, and can only be settled in the manner pointed out by the States in which they lie. If, therefore, correspondent quantities for the purposes of education are to be granted to all the old States, (under which term the committee believe all States will be included which have not received donations of land for that purpose,) it would seem that the States and Territories which now contain public land would have an excessive proportion of their superficies taken up with such donations, leaving but a small part of the land in each subject to taxation, or to settlement, except at the will of other sovereign States. In receiving donations of land for the purposes of promoting education in the States in which they have been granted, in the opinion of the committee, a consideration has been rendered therefor, on the part of those States, by the increased value which the population and improvement of the State gave to the unsold public lands, and by the compact not to tax the lands of the United States at any time before they were sold, nor until the lapse of five years thereafter.

The lands, therefore, granted to some of the new States for the purposes of education, though distinguished in common parlance by the name of donations, were in fact sales bottomed upon valuable considerations, in which the new States surrendered their right of sovereignty over the remaining public lands, and gave up the whole amount which might have been received in taxes before such lands were sold, and for five years thereafter.

The committee are, therefore, of opinion that it is inexpedient to grant lands to the extent contemplated in the resolution; but that it is just and expedient to grant a per centum, to a reasonable extent, on the amount of sales of public lands for the purpose of promoting education in such of the States as have not received the aid of the General Government, distributing the amount among the several States according to the population of each: and that justice would require an equivalent from the United States to the States and Territories which contain public lands, if it should be deemed advisable to make the donation to the old States recommended in this report; and they are of the opinion that, in that event, it will be entirely just to subject to taxation, by such State or Territory, all lands sold by the United States therein, from and after the day on which they may be sold.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 2, 1821.

Agreeably to your letter of 30th ultimo, I transmit, herewith, an estimate of the quantity of lands in Ohio, Indiana, Louisiana, Mississippi, Illinois, and Alabama, showing the quantity surveyed in each, the quantity unsurveyed, and the amount of one thirty-sixth part of the surveyed and unsurveyed lands.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

Hon. JESSE B. THOMAS, Chairman Committee Public Lands, Senate.

Estimate of the quantity of public lands in the following States; showing the quantity surveyed and unsurveyed; also the amount of one thirty-sixth part of each.

States.	Total public lands in the State.	Quantity surveyed.	One thirty-sixth part.	Quantity unsurveyed.	One thirty-sixth part.
Ohio - -	13,824,000	12,642,000	351,166	1,182,000	32,833
Indiana - -	21,565,440	9,926,020	275,722	11,639,420	323,317
Illinois - -	34,560,000	9,330,600	259,183	25,229,400	700,816
Louisiana - -	26,496,000	1,966,720	54,631	24,529,280	681,369
Mississippi - -	26,000,600	9,040,960	251,137	16,959,040	471,084
Alabama - -	26,448,000	12,948,480	359,680	13,499,520	374,986

N. B. The estimate of the quantity in each State is obtained by calculations from printed maps, and cannot be relied on for accuracy.

LAND CLAIMS AT MOBILE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 23, 1821.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 22, 1821.

I have the honor to transmit, herewith, the reports of the land officers at Jackson court-house on claims for land. The reports are numbered 10 and 11.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

The honorable the PRESIDENT of the Senate.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE, JACKSON COURT-HOUSE, January 21, 1821.

We have the honor, herewith, to transmit our final report on the claim of William E. Kennedy, under Thomas Price, for six hundred arpents of land adjoining the town of Mobile; also, a report of evidence collected in relation to certain lots in and adjoining to Mobile, which was inadvertently omitted in our general report.

From a strict examination of the settlement claim of Samuel Haines, No. 136, in report No. 12 of the late commissioner, the certificate of which was suspended on a suggestion of fraud, we are convinced it is a bona fide claim, and have accordingly issued the certificate to the claimant.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servants,

WM. BARNETT.
W. BARTON.

Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS, Commissioner General Land Office, Washington City.

REPORT No. 10.

Supplemental report on the claim of William E. Kennedy, under Thomas Price, for six hundred arpents of land adjoining the town of Mobile. Vide claim No. 3, in report No. 8 of the Register and Receiver, page 399.

In our report on the above mentioned claim, we remarked that, in order to obtain a full view of its merits, and more especially to ascertain whether it would encroach on Fort Charlotte and other public grounds in Mobile, we should direct the principal deputy surveyor to make an accurate survey and plat of the same, according to the Spanish title under which it is claimed. This survey has been executed, and a plat thereof returned to this office on the 5th instant, by which it appears that a great many lots which have been sold by the claimant, William E. Kennedy, and which have been improved, and are occupied by the purchasers, are not included in the survey, and that a considerable number of lots were granted by the Spanish authorities previously to the real or pretended grant to Price, some of which are founded on complete grants of all within the lines of the survey.

From a strict examination of the archives of the commandancy of Mobile, no record appears of the order of survey to Price, under which Kennedy claims. But this fact is not conclusive that such a grant was not made, inasmuch as it is currently reported and credited, that many of the papers of that office which were left here at the capitulation of Mobile, are not now in the office. It certainly appears very extraordinary that a subject, having no stronger claims on the justice or munificence of his Government than Price, who was only Indian interpreter, should have received the enormous grant of six hundred arpents of land surrounding the town of Mobile, and embracing all the ungranted lots in the town. We cannot, for a moment, suppose that the then Governor of Louisiana, Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, an officer who appears to have been extremely cautious in granting lands, could have intended to give away all the ungranted lots in the town of Mobile, and the whole of its suburbs. If the grant to Price be a genuine one, it is reasonable to presume that the Governor was deceived, by the information of the commandant, as to the locality of the land intended to be granted. From a deliberate view of all the facts and circumstances connected with this claim, we have strong reasons to suspect its validity. We cannot, therefore, recommend it to be confirmed by Congress.

Remarks on the preceding claims.

No. 1 is founded on application of Francisco Collell, then commandant of the post of Mobile, for a grant of certain low marsh ground, lying in front of, and between three granted lots and the Mobile river, in consideration that he would drain and improve the same in such manner as to promote the healthfulness of the town, and was granted upon that express condition, as also upon that of his paying the regular assessed value thereof. Neither of these essential conditions appear to have been complied with by the applicant, nor those claiming under him; but the land has been since built upon, and is now occupied by a number of persons who have no title whatever to it.

Nos. 2 and 3 are also founded on an application to purchase, and were granted on condition of the applicant's paying the regular assessment. It does not appear that the condition has been fulfilled.

No. 4 is likewise founded on an application to purchase; and the confirmatory grant or title in form, issued by Don Jose de Soto, late Governor of Pensacola, recites and acknowledges the receipt of the full amount of the assessed value of the land which had been previously paid. The instructions of Morales do not require cultivation and inhabitation in cases of purchase from the Crown. The only condition annexed to such grant is the making the regular barancas, (roads.)

[2d SESSION.]

APPLICATION OF INDIANA TO TAX THE PUBLIC LANDS AFTER SALE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 1, 1821.

Mr. HENDRICKS, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, praying permission to tax all lands sold by the United States on and subsequent to the 1st day of July, 1820, and also all lands sold since the 1st day of December, 1816, on which the payments to the United States have been completed, reported:

The memorialists state that the population of that part of the State, in which the Indian title has been extinguished, is rapidly increasing, and that in that part is situated the site recently selected for the permanent seat of Government of the State: that the reason no longer exists, which influenced Congress in restricting the Legislature from taxing lands sold by the United States subsequent to the 1st day of December, 1816, for the period of five years from and after the date of such sale, such reason having been the credit system under which the lands were sold, and by which the fee remained, or might remain, in the United States for five years after the date of the purchase: that the revenue of the State from lands is small in proportion to the number of landholders; and that some counties, large and populous, formed subsequent to December, 1816, pay very little into the State treasury, owing to the exemption, by compact with the General Government, of their lands from taxation.

They pray for permission to tax all lands sold by the United States on and subsequent to the 1st day of July, 1820, and all lands whereon the payments to the United States have been completed.

The committee are of opinion that the reasonableness or otherwise of the memorial depends on the existence or non-existence of the consideration which, on the part of the General Government, induced the contract. The consideration which induced the contract on the part of the General Government could not have been the inducement to the purchase of public lands, for it has been the complaint of the General Government, for years past, that the people of the Territories and the new States have been in the habit of purchasing more lands than they could pay for. The consideration most certainly was, that the fee of the soil should not be held accountable for the taxes imposed by State authority while that fee remained in the United States. The right of taxing lands implies the right, in case of the failure of the holder to pay such taxes, of selling the lands, and vesting in the purchaser a perfect title. It is immaterial whether this right be exercised by a State or the General Government. But, for the compact, the new States would have had the right to tax, if not in the hands of the General Government, most certainly in the hands of individuals, all lands within their limits. The lands being accountable for the taxes imposed, they could have been sold by State authority, and the title thus vested in the purchaser would have been good against the General Government, though that Government had received but one instalment of the purchase money. The original purchaser, divested of the possibility of title by authority of the State, would pay nothing further, would suffer a forfeiture; the General Government would, in such cases, lose all title, while it would have, in many instances, received but a small moiety of the original price of the lands.

These seem to the committee to be the reasons which induced the General Government to the compact with the new States, not to tax lands in the hands of purchasers for five years from and after the date of sale. Do these reasons, and this consideration, on the part of the General Government, exist under the new land system requiring prompt payment? In the opinion of the committee they do not. But, inasmuch as the compact still exists, and will continue to exist, until by the consent of parties it is annulled, the committee are of opinion that it would be improper to give the cancelling of the compact a retrospective operation.

On this subject no States, save that of Indiana, have expressed their wishes or opinions to this Government; but seven new States being in the same situation, and having equal reasons and rights with that of Indiana, they report a general bill.

APPLICATION OF NEW HAMPSHIRE FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 19, 1821.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The committee to whom was referred so much of His Excellency's message as relates to a communication from the Legislature of the State of Maryland, ask leave to report:

That the communication submitted to them embraces a report and certain resolutions thereupon adopted by the Legislature of the State of Maryland; the object of which is to call the attention of Congress, and the Legislatures of the several States, to the public lands, as a fund from which appropriations for the purposes of education may with justice be claimed by all the original States, and some of the new ones.

Your committee have, with much attention, examined the grounds on which this claim is supposed to rest; and, from this examination, are satisfied that the principles contended for are just and equitable, and, therefore, do concur in the opinion expressed in the aforesaid documents. It is not, however, deemed necessary on this occasion to enter into an elaborate exposition of the principles on which this claim is founded, as this would lead merely to a recapitulation of the circumstances relied upon, and the arguments deduced by the committee, who matured the report and resolutions now under consideration. It may be proper, notwithstanding, to present for consideration a few of the points brought to view in the report of that committee.

It is alleged that, before the war of the revolution, these States were regal and not proprietary provinces, and that the right of disposing of them was claimed and exercised by the Crown in some form or other; that, by the treaty of peace in 1783, Great Britain relinquished "to the United States all claim to the government, property, and territorial rights of the same, and every part thereof;" that, between 1783 and 1802, the United States acquired an indisputable title to all the public lands east of the Mississippi, by cessions from all those States which had exclusively claimed the unsettled lands within their respective limits, except a small part of the territory which now constitutes the States of Mississippi and Alabama, which was acquired under the treaty ceding Louisiana; that all the territory west of the Mississippi river, together with the southern extremity of the States of Mississippi and Alabama, was purchased of France for fifteen millions of dollars, and that all the sums of money required to pay France to extinguish the Indian title to the public lands and the like, was paid out of the Treasury of the United States, the common fund of the whole Union. Forasmuch, therefore, as the property and jurisdiction of the soil were acquired by the common means of all, it is contended that the public lands, whether acquired by purchase, by force, or by acts or deeds of cession from individual States, are the common property of the Union, and ought to enure to the common use and benefit of all the States in just proportions, and not to the use and benefit of any particular State or States to the exclusion of the others, and that any partial appropriation of them, for State purposes, "is a violation of the spirit of our national compact, as well as the principles of justice and sound policy."

On the inquiry whether the acts of Congress in relation to the appropriation of the public lands have been strictly national, it is ascertained that, by the existing laws relating to the survey and sale of them, one thirty-sixth part thereof has been reserved and appropriated in perpetuity for the support of common schools; besides which, large appropriations have been made in the new States generally for the erection and maintenance of seminaries of learning of a higher grade than common schools, equal, it is calculated, to one-fifth part of the appropriations for the common schools.

It is said, on good authority, that all the States and Territories in whose favor appropriations have thus been and are to be made, according to the existing laws in support of literary institutions, contain 437,297,125 acres, and that the total amount of these literary appropriations in the new States and Territories will be 14,576,569 $\frac{2}{3}$ acres, which, at two dollars per acre, a sum less than the average price of all the public lands which have heretofore been sold, the amount in money will be \$29,153,139 $\frac{1}{3}$.

The State of New Hampshire contains 6,074,240 acres; of course, her proportionate share of the public lands for literary purposes, on the principles above stated, would be 202,473 acres.

It is admitted that, so far as the public lands have been sold, and the money paid into the National Treasury, or appropriated for purposes of defence, all the States have derived a justly proportionate benefit from them. Nor is a spirit of envy attempted to be cherished towards the new States on account of the bountiful appropriations made to them for literary purposes; but it cannot be denied that such appropriations in favor of any State or States, to the exclusion of the rest, where the appropriations would have been beneficial, and might have been extended to all alike, would be a departure from sound policy as well as from impartial justice. These appropriations are of such a nature that they might have been, and still may be, extended to all the States. Those States, therefore, for whose benefit such appropriations have not yet been made, will not be true to themselves if they do not make known to Congress, who alone possess the power to make them, their request for such appropriations, not as a matter of favor but of right.

Whereupon, your committee beg leave to recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire in General Court convened, That each of the United States have an equal right to participate in the benefit of the public lands as the common property of the Union; and that the States, in whose favor Congress have not yet made appropriations of land for the purposes of education, are entitled to such appropriations as will be in just proportion with those heretofore made in favor of the other States.

Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be requested to transmit copies of the foregoing report and resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with a request that they will use their endeavors to procure the passage of an act to appropriate to the use of the State of New Hampshire, for the purposes of education, such quantity of the public lands as shall be equitable and just.

Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be also requested to transmit copies of the foregoing report and resolutions to the Governors of the several States of the Union, with a request that they will communicate the same to the Legislatures thereof respectfully, and solicit their co-operation to carry into effect the just principles therein set forth.

All which is respectfully submitted by

NEHEMIAH EASTMAN, for the committee.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 24, 1821.

STATE OF RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS,

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, October Session, A. D. 1821.

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, That the resolutions of the State of Maryland upon the subject of an appropriation of the lands of the United States to the purposes of education, receive the full and cordial approbation of this Assembly.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Assembly, the apportionment of the lands of the United States for the purposes aforesaid, among such of the States of this Union as have not heretofore received the benefits of an appropriation, should be made with a reference to the exertions and sacrifices of the individual States in the revolutionary war.

Resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States be requested to use their best exertions to obtain, at the approaching session of Congress, a law of the United States for these beneficial purposes.

[1st Session.]

APPLICATION OF CONNECTICUT FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 31, 1821.

The committee to whom was referred so much of the Governor's message as relates to the report of the Senate of Maryland, and resolutions thereto annexed, report:

Your committee concur in the sentiment expressed in the report submitted to their consideration, that education and a general diffusion of knowledge in Governments constituted like those of the United States, are of great importance; and that, "in proportion as the structure of a Government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened."

It is with great satisfaction that your committee notice the general and increased efforts making in different portions of the Union for extending knowledge and the means of education to every part of the community; and that while our universities and colleges experience the kind and liberal consideration of the public and of beneficent individuals, the common schools, which afford all needed instruction to every one, alike to the poor and the rich, have become objects of great interest, and receive the peculiar regard of Government. The philanthropist and benevolent statesman can now indulge the aid of the General Government, and every individual in the United States may receive all the moral and intellectual improvement of which he may be susceptible.

During the struggle of the revolution, and at the final establishment of the independence of the country, the question was much agitated, to whom the vacant lands should belong, whether to the United States or the individual States within whose nominal limits they were situated? The States contended that, being within their boundaries, the vacant lands belonged to the States within whose nominal limits they might be located. The United States claimed that, as these lands, before the revolution, were vested in the Crown, and were acquired by the united exertions of all the States, they ought, and did of right, belong to the United States. This question at one time endangered the peace and independence of the country: it was finally settled in a spirit of mutual concession and forbearance, and resulted in the cession of the principal part of the vacant lands to the United States, while the States in whose limits the lands lay were secured in considerable portions of Territory, much of which has been appropriated to the support of the public schools in the several States. By the laws of the United States one thirty-sixth part of the public lands in the new States and Territories has been appropriated for the support of public schools; and it is believed that a further appropriation has been made for colleges and seminaries of a higher grade, equal to one-fifth of the appropriation for common schools. A number of the States, in which the State of Maryland may be included, from their location and chartered limits, have not been benefited by the public lands, excepting so far as their avails may have come into the public Treasury, and their schools and colleges have languished from the want of that aid derived from the public lands, from which many of the States have profited. In this State our institutions of learning need the fostering hand of Government.

The State of Maryland early resisted the claim of the several States; and, on account of their refusal to cede the vacant lands to the United States, refused for a time to accede to the confederation; yet, from a high sense of her duty to the Union, and the danger to which the cause of independence would be subjected from further continuing her opposition, she yielded to the necessities of the country. This State became a very efficient member of the Union, and, from her local situation, and her exertion in the public cause, was made to suffer great privations and repeated ravages of the enemy, which she sustained with a spirit and fortitude proportionate to her trials. The individual States must be considered as branches of the great family of the Union, and have an equal interest with the United States, that provision should be made for instruction in every part of the country. This is a subject of common concern.

An appropriation of a small portion of the national domain would be sufficient for this important object, but as the public lands are, for this and other purposes, by the constitution of the United States, wholly at the disposition of Congress, the committee respectfully submit the annexed resolution.

SETTLERS ON FRACTIONAL QUARTER SECTIONS IN ILLINOIS ENTITLED TO THE RIGHT OF PRE-EMPTION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 3, 1822.

Mr. RANKIN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of James McFarland, Hampton Pankey, and William Frizzell, reported:

The petitioners settled in the State of Illinois previous to the passage of the act granting the right of pre-emption to the settlers on the public land in that State; but it appears, by their petition, that they were settled on fractional quarter sections, and not on quarter sections of the regular extent. They made application at the proper time to purchase their lands as pre-emption settlers, but were told, by the Register of the Land Office at Shawneetown, that they could enter quarter sections only, and not fractional quarter sections. Under this interpretation of the law, they were compelled to purchase their land at the public sale, when, in consequence of the improvements made upon it, it was run up to four dollars and six cents per acre.

Without inquiring into the correctness of the construction of the act, as adopted by the Register, it will only be necessary to advert to the act of 1816, made in aid thereof, to show that they came clearly within its provisions, and ought to have been allowed to enter their lands at the minimum price. It is in these words: "Any person, and the legal representatives of any person, entitled to a preference in becoming the purchaser from the United States of a tract of land, at private sale, in the State of Louisiana, and in the Territories of Missouri and Illinois, according to the provisions of the act entitled 'An act giving the right of pre-emption in the purchase of lands to certain settlers in the Illinois Territory,' passed February the fifth, one thousand eight hundred and thirteen, and the fifth section of the 'Act for the final adjustment of land titles in the State of Louisiana and Territory of Missouri,' passed April 12, 1814, who is settled on the fraction of a section, or fractional quarter section, containing less than one hundred and sixty acres, shall have the privilege of purchasing one or more adjoining fractional quarter sections, or the adjoining quarter section, including their improvements, or the fraction improved by them, at their option; and the provisions of the said recited acts are hereby made applicable to them so far as they are consistent with the provisions of this act."

The petitioners prove their settlement on the land described in their petition, viz: Fractional sections Nos. 26 and 27, in township No. 12, south of range No. 8, east of the third principal meridian, prior to the 5th of February, 1813; their application to purchase as pre-emption settlers, and the refusal of the proper officer to receive their application. They also show that they were required to bid their improvements off at $4 06 per acre; and, under this statement, they pray that what they have paid of the first instalment shall be applied to their credit, and that they be discharged from the payment of all, except two dollars per acre, the then minimum price of the public lands; and, believing them entitled to such remission, the committee report a bill accordingly for the relief of James McFarland, who was the agent of the other two petitioners in making the purchase at the public sale.

APPLICATION OF NEW JERSEY FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 7, 1822.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

The committee, to whom were referred a certain report and resolutions of the Legislature of Maryland, and a certain other report and resolutions of the Legislature of New Hampshire, recommending an equitable appropriation of a portion of the public lands of the United States to the purposes of education in those States which have yet received no such appropriation, respectfully report:

That they have given to the documents referred to them such consideration as the importance of the subject demanded, and their time permitted; that the facts adduced, and the arguments advanced, in those documents, in favor of grants of land for the purposes of education to those States which have not received such grants, appear to your committee correct and conclusive; that, without recapitulating those facts, or repeating those arguments at length, your committee will briefly state that the United States have acquired by conquest, cession, or purchase, an immense body of land, probably, at this time, more than four hundred millions of acres, which, as it was acquired by common valor, wisdom, and contribution, is consequently the common property of all the States; that this property is at the disposal of the General Government, which has made large grants thereof for the purposes of education to several of the States, while others, and this State among the number, equally friendly to the diffusion of knowledge among all classes of their citizens, and equally entitled to, and in need of, assistance in carrying their benevolent views into full effect, have received no part thereof; that, according to calculations made in the report to the Maryland Legislature, which appear to be founded on the best data which could be obtained, the State of New Jersey would be entitled, in a distribution to be made upon principles heretofore adopted, to one hundred and seventy-three thousand four hundred and ninety-four acres, which, at the lowest price at which Congress has heretofore sold its lands at private sale, would amount to three hundred and forty-six thousand nine hundred and eighty-eight dollars; that, although it cannot be reasonably expected that all this land could be immediately sold so as to realize at once the whole sum at which it is here estimated, yet it is probable that such sales might be made from time to time, and such payments had thereon, as would furnish a permanent and productive resource in aid of the fund already constituted in this State for the establishment of free schools; that, under these impressions, the committee deem it their duty to recommend to this House a cordial co-operation with our sister States of Maryland and New Hampshire in the object which their communications to this State have in view; and, therefore, respectfully submit to the House the following resolutions:

Resolved, unanimously, by the Council and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That each of the United States has an equal right to participate in the benefit of the public lands, the common property of the Union.

Resolved, That the States in whose favor Congress have not made appropriations of land for the purposes of education, are entitled to such appropriations as will correspond, in a just proportion, with those heretofore made in favor of the other States.

Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be requested to transmit copies of the foregoing report and resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with a request that they will lay the same before their respective Houses, and use their endeavors to procure the passage of an act to carry into effect the just principles therein set forth.

Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be requested to transmit copies of this report and resolutions to the Governors of the several States, with request that they will communicate the same to the Legislatures thereof respectively, and solicit their co-operation."

APPLICATION OF KENTUCKY FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 14, 1822.

Resolutions in relation to a portion of the public lands of the United States as a means of creating a fund for promoting education, and to the right of the several States of the Union to a part of the same for that purpose.

The Committee, to whom were referred the communications from the Legislatures of the States of Maryland and New Hampshire, ask leave to report:

That the communications submitted to them embrace reports and resolutions thereupon adopted, by the Legislatures of those States, and the objects of which are to direct the attention of Congress, and the Legislatures of the several States of the Union, to the national lands as a source from which appropriations for the purposes of education may with justice be claimed by those States for which no such appropriations have yet been made.

Your committee, highly sensible of the importance of the fact that the most effectual means of achieving or perpetuating the liberties of any country is to enlighten the minds of its citizens by a system of education adapted to the means of the most extensive class of its population, and, alive to any just means within their power for the advancement of this great object, not only within their own State, but alike to all the members of the great political family of which they are a part, and for whose common interests they are thus united, have, with much interest, examined the facts stated, and the arguments used in said reports, and do not hesitate to concur in the opinions therein expressed, that the national lands are strictly a national fund, and, in just proportions, the property of all the States of the Union; and that, from the extent and nature of the fund, appropriations may, with great propriety, be extended to all the States of the Union.

It is deemed unnecessary, in a report of this kind, to enter at large into all the arguments that might be used to establish the opinion above expressed. A few of the facts which have presented themselves in the investigation of this subject are submitted.

It is ascertained that all the States and Territories, whose waters fall into the Mississippi, have been amply provided for by the laws of Congress relating to the survey and sale of the public lands, except the State of Kentucky.

Why those appropriations should have stopped short of Kentucky, your committee are not able to see, especially when they take into consideration its situation in relation to the other States of the Union, the contest it has maintained in establishing itself, protecting, at the same time, the Western borders of the old States, and extending the more northern and Western settlements. Kentucky long stood alone in a forest of almost boundless extent, separated from her parent settlements by extensive ranges of mountains and forests, fit receptacles for her savage enemies, and by which she was cut off from the succor, and almost from the knowledge of her friends; yet maintaining her stand, and, at the same time, forming a barrier by which the more Eastern States were protected from the common enemy, she has not only established herself, but has also gone forward to the establishment and support of those States and Territories which now form the great national domain which is the subject of this report.

Notwithstanding many arguments might be used which would go to prove that Kentucky has claims to appropriations of those lands without extending the system to all the other States, yet your committee believe that such arguments are not necessary, and that a few facts here submitted will prove that those appropriations may be made general without materially affecting the national revenue.

Relying upon the apparent correctness of the able document before the committee, received from the State of Maryland, it appears that the total amount of literary appropriations made to the new States and Territories will amount to 14,576,569 acres; that the additional amount required to extend the same system to those States for which no such appropriations have yet been made, would be 9,370,760 acres; that the State of Kentucky, as her part of such appropriation, would be entitled to 1,066,665 acres, and estimating the whole quantity of unsold lands, yet owned by the United States, at 400,000,000 acres, that the additional amount required to extend the same scale of appropriation to all the States which have not received any, would not amount to two and a half per cent. upon the landed fund as above.

Relying, therefore, upon the foregoing considerations as sufficient for their purpose, and believing that the unanimity of their sister States in the West will produce a unanimity in the Congress of the United States upon this subject, your committee are prepared to close this report, and beg leave to recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, That each of the United States has an equal right, in its just proportion, to participate in the benefit of the public lands, the common property of the Union.

Resolved, That the Executive of this State be requested, as soon as practicable, to transmit copies of the foregoing report and resolution to the Governors of the several States, and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with a request that they will lay the same before their respective Houses, and use their endeavors to procure the passage of a law to appropriate to the use of the State of Kentucky, for the purposes of education, such a part of the public lands of the United States as may be equitable and just.

GEORGE C. THOMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
WILLIAM T. BARRY,
Speaker of the Senate.
JOHN ADAIR.

No. 344.

[1st Session.]

INDEMNITY MADE TO AN INDIVIDUAL FOR SELLING HIS LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 22, 1822.

Mr. CAMPBELL made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Colonel John Girault, with sundry documents, have had the same under consideration, and report:

The petitioners state that their late father, John Girault, was, at the time of his death, entitled to two tracts of land, situated within the limits of the State of Mississippi, in virtue of two Spanish warrants; the first for one thousand arpents, granted to John St. Germain on the 16th day of December, 1785, lying on the Mississippi river, opposite the Three Islands; the other for six hundred arpents, granted to Henry Bachelot on the 22d of March, 1785, lying below the Walnut Hills: that these claims were submitted to the Board of Commissioners, appointed under the first act of Congress, to decide on titles to lands lying west of Pearl river and south of Tennessee, and were rejected for want of evidence of settlement; that these lands were surveyed and sold as public property; that, after they were sold, the said John Girault was confirmed in his title to them by the Register and Receiver of the Land Office west of Pearl river; that they are of the first quality of land, and in a high state of cultivation: wherefore the petitioners ask an equivalent in lands in any part of the States of Mississippi or Alabama.

Louis Winston, Register of the Land Office west of Pearl river, certifies, in the year 1820, that the lands described by the petitioners had been sold. The sale of one of these tracts, it appears, was made on the 15th of November, 1815.

Nicholas Gray and Parke Walton, Register and Receiver of the Land Office west of Pearl river, and acting as commissioners for the adjustment of land titles, on the 13th of September, 1815, gave to John Girault a certificate, in which it is stated that he claims a tract of six hundred arpents, situate in Warren county, one mile and three quarters below the Walnut Hills, by virtue of a Spanish order of survey granted to Henry Bachelot on the 22d of March, 1785, and that the said John Girault is entitled to a patent therefor.

These officers, at the same time and for the same purpose, gave another certificate to the said John Girault, relating to another tract of six hundred and forty acres, which he claimed by virtue of a Spanish order of survey, granted to John St. Germain, for one thousand arpents, on the 16th December, 1785, lying near the mouth of the Yazoo river.

The committee will remark that, by the act of the 30th of June, 1812, and under which the certificate of confirmation to John Girault was granted, not more than six hundred and forty acres could be confirmed on any one claim.

Under an act passed the 31st of March, 1808, the Board of Commissioners, appointed to adjust land titles west of Pearl river, decided on the claims of Girault, and reported, as they were required to do, their decisions to the Secretary of the Treasury. This they did, and the act, passed the 30th June, 1812, confirmed those in their titles to lands in whose favor decisions had been given. This act also required the Register and Receiver to give to the successful claimants certificates of confirmation, on the production of which, at the General Land Office, the owners became entitled to patents.

It appears that, after Girault had been confirmed in his title, but before he obtained the proper certificate from the Register and Receiver, his lands, or at least one of the tracts, were sold. This sale was manifestly improper, and is, as the committee think, attributable to great neglect of duty on the part of the officers of Government.

The committee are of opinion the petitioners might recover their lands, so improperly sold, by resorting to the proper judicial tribunals of the country; but, as they appear unwilling to encounter the trouble and expense of a lawsuit, and are disposed to take lands elsewhere, it is thought advisable that they be enabled so to do.

From the best information the committee can obtain, they suppose two sections will be about an equivalent, since the location thereof is intended to be limited to lands which have been offered at public sale.

A bill is herewith reported.

No. 346.

[1st Session.]

APPLICATION OF DELAWARE FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 28, 1822.

The committee to whom was referred that part of the Governor's message which relates to the appropriations of the public lands, respectfully report:

That the matter referred to them embraces a report and sundry resolutions adopted by the Legislature of Maryland relative to appropriations of public land for the purposes of education. These resolutions declare, "that each of the United States has an equal right to participate in the benefit of the public lands the common property of the Union;" and "that the States in whose favor Congress have not made appropriations of land, for purposes of education, are entitled to such appropriations as will correspond, in just proportion, with those heretofore made in favor of the other States." The principle asserted in these resolutions appears to your committee to be founded in justice, and to be consonant to the best views of national policy.

Your committee find themselves relieved from the necessity of searching for arguments in support of the claims of those States that have not as yet received their portion of the public lands. The ground they conceive to be preoccupied by the report adopted by the Legislature of Maryland. This report is before the Senate, and it contains, in the view of your committee, a lucid and able exposition of the justice and policy of granting to each State, in proportion to its territory, its share of the public lands for the purposes of education. After the masterly manner in which this subject has been managed by the Maryland report, your committee have not the presumption to suppose that they can throw upon it any additional light. They would, therefore, venture merely to condense into as small a compass as possible the different views in which this subject has been exhibited.

That the public lands are now the common property of the Union is a truth that cannot be denied. This alone appears to your committee sufficient to overthrow the right of any particular section of our country to an exclusive benefit of those lands. The plea, then, of common property, at present, is of itself sufficient to justify each State in calling for its share of that property, without any regard to the manner in which that property was acquired. But the States that now call for their proportional benefit of the public lands need not shrink from an inquiry into the mode of the acquisition of those lands. This inquiry, it appears to your committee, would not weaken, but strengthen and confirm their claims.

The public lands appear to have been acquired in three ways; by conquest, by purchase, and by cession. The happy termination of the revolutionary war gave to the United States a fair title, by conquest, to those lands of which, under the provincial Government, the Crown of Great Britain had always exercised the right of disposing. But some difficulties seem to have existed, as to the title of the United States to those lands, soon after the close of the revolutionary war. Several of the States made claims to large portions of those lands which were embraced by their nominal boundaries. The claims of these States do not appear to your committee ever to have rested upon a good foundation. They do not, however, conceive it necessary now to inquire into the justice of these claims, as the States which made them have long since abandoned them, and surrendered all right and title to the same by cession to the United States. Whatever, therefore, may be thought concerning our titles to the public lands by conquest, there can no doubt exist as to our title by cession.

"By the treaty of peace in seventeen hundred and eighty-three, Great Britain relinquished to the United States all claims to the Government, property, and territorial rights of the same, and every part thereof."

And within a few years after the peace, the respective States, actuated by a generous spirit of conciliation and patriotism, yielded up to the United States what they conceived to be their claims to their unsettled land. Thus did the United States acquire a fair and undisputed title to all the public lands east of the Mississippi, except those held by the Indians, and the southern parts of the State of Mississippi and Alabama; a title to these was acquired by purchase, and the money paid out of the common fund. By the same title do we hold the territory west of the Mississippi; this being purchased from France in the year eighteen hundred and three, and also paid for out of the common fund.

Your committee, then, can take no view of this subject without being forced to the conclusion that, as these lands are a common property, each State should derive from them its proportional benefit; and that any appropriations of them for the exclusive benefit of any particular State, is "a violation of the spirit of our national compact, as well as the principles of justice and sound policy."

Were it necessary to search for any additional reason why Congress should grant to each State its proportional share of the public lands, your committee think that it might be found in the conditions inserted in the cessions of several of the States. With some of the States this disposal of the public lands was a special condition of cession. The act of cession of Virginia expressly states, that all lands granted to the United States by such cession "shall be considered as a common fund for the use and benefit of such of the United States as have become, or shall become, members of the confederation or federal alliance of the said States, Virginia inclusive, according to their several respective proportions in the general charge and expenditure; and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatever." The same spirit breathes through all the acts of cession.

It appears to your committee that Congress, in their disposal of the public lands, have not always acted upon the principle that these lands are a common property, and, of course, should always be disposed of for the common benefit. No complaint can be made against any appropriations of these lands for national purposes; but any appropriations for State purposes is evidently a departure from justice, and from that line of policy which the welfare of the States and the harmony of the Union most clearly prescribe.

The public lands are surveyed and sold according to the directions of Congress; and by the present laws relating to the survey and sale of these lands, it appears that one thirty-sixth part of all the public lands is reserved, and given in perpetuity for the benefit of common schools, in the States or Territories within which such lands are situated; and, in addition to this, the appropriations for seminaries of learning of a higher order, amount to about one-fifth of those for common schools. These are evidently appropriations for State, and not for national purposes. They are appropriations of a common fund of the country for the exclusive benefit of a particular section; and, of course, fully justify "those States that have not received any such appropriations in asking of Congress their proportional share, not as a matter of favor, but of justice."

Your committee are aware of the objections that have been made to the claims of those States that have as yet received no appropriations of the public lands. They have given to these objections due consideration; and the result is, in the view of your committee, that they are founded in fallacy, and are without weight. It has been objected "that the lands granted to some of the new States for the purposes of education, though distinguished in common parlance by the name of donations, were, in fact, sales bottomed upon valuable considerations; in which the new States surrendered their right of sovereignty over the remaining public lands, and gave up the whole amount which might have been received in taxes before such lands were sold, and for five years thereafter." It has been justly observed in answer to this, that, "as Congress possesses an absolute dominion over the whole territory before the creation of the new States, and makes these States, it is not to be understood how any right of sovereignty is relinquished by them." It is impossible to relinquish what never was possessed. The new States never had the right of taxing the public lands; they relinquished nothing, and of course gave no consideration for these lands. One of the conditions on which the new States were admitted into the Union was, that they should not tax the public lands; they accepted of this condition, and were of course bound to observe it. Nor does it appear to your committee how the exemption from taxation of these public lands was productive of any advantage to the old States, that was not equally enjoyed by the new; but it does most obviously appear that, the grant of the public lands to the new States for the purposes of education, does give to these States an advantage which the States that have received no such appropriations do not participate with them. This advantage, too, your committee think, is daily increasing; in a few years it would be immense. The new States will be relieved from all the burdensome expenses of education, while the other States will be laboring under these expenses, if their just claims are not now granted. Your committee cannot see by what principle of justice or rule of policy Congress can justify itself in giving to the new States so great an advantage over the others.

It has also been observed, by way of objection to the claims of the old States, that the appropriations of part of the public lands to the purposes of education for the benefit of the States in which they are situated, has increased the value of the residue by inducing emigrants to settle upon them. Your committee confess themselves unable to see the force of this objection. If the remainder of the public lands have increased in value, the benefit is obviously not confined to the old States. The new States enjoy it equally with the others. Even allowing the old States to derive advantages from this source, they are not enjoyed by them exclusively; but the benefits accruing from the appropriations of public lands, for the purposes of education in the new States, are exclusively enjoyed by these States. Your committee, however, are inclined to think that the old States derive no advantage from the increased price of the residue of the public lands. It does appear to them, that the price of the remaining public lands is raised at the expense of the old States, for the emigrations from these States to the new occasion a loss to the old States by depreciating the value of their lands, which, in the opinion of your committee, more than counterbalances the advantages which the old States receive from the increased value of the residue of those public lands.

The amount of the claims of those States that have received no appropriations of the public lands, has also been urged as an objection against them; but your committee can see nothing frightful in this amount. It has been shown by the Maryland committee, that, instead of being large, it is comparatively small. By their report, it appears that the sixteen States that have received no grants would require but 9,370,760 acres, little more than two acres out of a hundred of all the public lands unsold, and less than what has been already granted to the States and Territories in the West.

Your committee are not disposed to throw any censure upon Congress for those appropriations of public lands, for the purposes of education, to the States and Territories of the West. They believe that it was a measure dictated by a liberal and enlightened policy. It is, in their opinion, the duty of every Government to guard against the evils of ignorance, and to disseminate as widely as possible the blessings of education. This is a duty more especially incumbent upon a republican Government. Ignorance is a soil whence discords and factions luxuriantly spring. None but an enlightened people can long enjoy the blessings of freedom. That cannot be appreciated which is not properly understood. Morality and religion are essential to the continuance of a republican Government, but to these ignorance is a deadly enemy. Nothing that is sacred can flourish under its noxious breath: like a tornado it sweeps, in its desolating march, every thing that is fair and lovely.

To the appropriations, then, that have already been made for the purposes of education, your committee feel themselves bound to give their full approbation; but they think that it is contrary to the welfare of the Union, and the spirit of our national compact, that these appropriations should be partial. Their benefits should be extended to every portion of the community. Justice tells us that a common property should be expended for a common benefit, and policy tells us that it is essential to the stability of the Union that harmony should be preserved among the States. Now, it does appear to your committee that this harmony will be disturbed, and jealousies will be excited, if favors are granted to one section of the country which are denied to another. Besides, it does seem to your committee that if the claims now made are not granted, that the independence of these States will be endangered, and the beauty of our political fabric may be destroyed by the preponderating influence which the new States will possess through the means of superior knowledge and of more improved mental cultivation.

If appropriations of the public lands should be made to those States that have not as yet received any, in proportion to their respective territories, it appears from a calculation made in the Maryland report, that the share of Delaware is forty-five thousand two hundred and twenty-five acres. This, perhaps, might be valued at about ninety thousand dollars. The importance of such a sum, in aid of our school fund, your committee deem it unnecessary to urge.

Nor do they think that the smallness of our share should render us backward in urging our claim. The smallness of our territory should render us more zealous in the pursuit of knowledge. We should endeavor to acquire power of mind, in order to supply the deficiency of physical strength. Knowledge is power. Without knowledge, we must sink into insignificance; but with it, we need never fear but what we shall always be heard and respected in the councils of the nation.

Your committee, therefore, beg leave to recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Delaware in General Assembly met, That each of the United States has an equal right to participate in the benefits resulting from the public lands, the common property of the Union.

Resolved, That the States in whose favor Congress have not made appropriations of land for the purposes of education, are entitled to such appropriations as will correspond, in a just proportion, with those heretofore made in favor of the other States.

Resolved, That the Governor be requested to transmit copies of the foregoing resolutions to each of our Senators and our Representative in Congress, with a request that they will use their endeavors to procure the passage of an act to carry into effect the just principles therein set forth.

APPLICATION OF MAINE FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 29, 1822.

STATE OF MAINE, IN SENATE, January 15, 1822.

The committee, to whom was referred so much of the Governor's message as relates to certain resolutions of the State of Maryland, and of several other States of the Union, calling the attention of Congress to an equitable appropriation of a portion of the public lands for the purposes of education in those States which have not received such appropriations, ask leave to report:

That this being a subject particularly interesting to the original States of the Union, none of which have received any such appropriations, has already been so generally and fully discussed, that it is impossible for your committee to throw any new light on the subject.

Your committee will, however, suggest that such large grants of lands for the diffusion of knowledge in the new States, is highly honorable to the Congress of the United States; but, inasmuch as all the public lands were acquired by the united valor, wisdom, and contribution of all the States, it is surely equitable that each State should receive its just proportion of advantage from this common property. In the new States a quantity of land has been granted to each, respectively, in proportion to the extent of its territory, for the establishment of common schools and colleges. It is conceded, and even contended, by Maryland, and other States, which have acted on this subject, that similar appropriations should be made to the several other States which have not received their share in the same proportion. Should this principle, which appears so reasonable, be adopted, the State of Maine will be entitled to about eight hundred thousand acres, which, at the lowest rate Congress has sold the public lands, will yield a fund of about one million of dollars. The claims of Maine, on this subject, may be urged with as much force as any other State: she sacrificed her full share of blood and treasure in the war of the revolution; and, in the late war, besides supplying the army of the United States with more than her proportion of soldiers from her hardy yeomanry, she expended about three hundred thousand dollars in the common defence, which sum has hitherto been refused to be refunded. This State, wishing a general diffusion of knowledge among all classes of her citizens, and being justly entitled to the means of carrying her benevolent views into effect, your committee recommend a cordial co-operation with our sister States in effecting the object of their communications; and, therefore, submit the following resolves to be passed by the Legislature.

NATHANIEL GREEN, Chairman.Resolves relating to the Maryland Resolutions.

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives in Legislature assembled, That each of the United States has an equal right to participate in the benefits of the public lands, the common property of the Union.

Resolved, That those States, in whose favor Congress have not made appropriations of land for purposes of education, are entitled to such appropriations as will correspond in a just proportion with those heretofore made in other States.

Resolved, That the Governor be requested to transmit copies of the foregoing report and resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with a request that they will use their endeavors to procure the passage of an act to appropriate to the State of Maine, for the purposes of education, such a quantity of public lands as shall be equal to that heretofore granted to other States.

EXAMINATION OF THE SEVERAL LAND OFFICES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 30, 1822.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 28, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 4th instant, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to report to the House "the manner in which the several land offices of the United States were examined prior to the 1st of January, 1818, the names and places of residence of the persons by whom such examinations were made, the respective compensation allowed to each individual so employed, and the whole expense thereof to the United States; and, also, that he report the manner in which the same duty has been performed since the said 1st of January, 1818, together with the names, professions, stations, and place of residence, of the persons who have been appointed to make such examinations, what offices each was appointed to examine, the reports made by each, the accounts presented for their respective services, the amount of money allowed to, or drawn or retained by, each of them; whether any of them have, during the said period, been allowed, or received any other compensation from the Government; if so, how much, and for what service rendered or duty performed, and whether some plan may not be devised whereby the same duty may be performed with equal advantage and less expense to the Government;" I have the honor to submit the enclosed statements, marked A and B, which show the amount that has been paid for examining the land offices during the two periods of time described in the resolution, and exhibit the names, stations, and professions, of the persons by whom such examinations were made, as far as they are known to this Department.

I have also the honor to transmit copies of the reports of the state of those offices, which have been made from the 1st of January, 1818, to the 31st of December, 1821, as far as they have been received.

Previously to the year 1816, the land offices had been examined by persons residing in the vicinity of their location. As the examiners were generally the friends and neighbors of the officers, whose books and accounts were to be examined, and most commonly unacquainted with the forms in which they were required to be kept, the reports made by them furnished but little of the information which it was the object of the Department to obtain. They were, therefore, annually made rather as matter of form, in compliance with the injunctions of the law, than from a conviction that the information obtained was of any intrinsic value to the public service. It may be proper also to observe that, during the whole interval of time from the establishment of those offices to the year 1816, the annual receipts from the public lands were inconsiderable compared with what they have been since that time. The inducement to incur expense, in order to obtain the best information of which the nature of the case admitted, was not so strong as it has been since the great augmentation which has occurred in those receipts.

Under the influence of these considerations, in the year 1816, the late Mr. Dallas, who was then Secretary of the Treasury, directed that the principal land offices in the State of Ohio and Territories west of it, should be examined by one of the clerks of the General Land Office. The same person was permitted to examine them in 1817 upon the assurance of the commissioner that his absence from his clerical duties would not be detrimental to the public service. For this service he received in both years, at the rate of three dollars a day during the time he was thus employed, in addition to his salary as clerk, which was not effected by his absence from the office.

Since that time the offices have been examined by persons unconnected with the Department, who have been compensated for their services at the rate of six dollars a day whilst engaged in the examination, and six dollars a day for every twenty miles travel performed in the execution of this service. It has been the practice to furnish them with a letter of credit to the Receivers, who advance to them, upon their bills, such sums as may be necessary to defray their expenses. The great press of business, which the law granting relief to the purchasers of public lands has brought upon the land officers, has prevented them from making their returns, which will, when made, show the amount that has been received by the gentlemen who have examined the land offices during the year 1821. Until these returns are received, their accounts cannot be adjusted, but the compensation which will be allowed will not exceed the rates abovementioned. Owing to the delay which occurred in transmitting instructions from the General Land Office, the gentleman who has been employed to examine the southern offices has not yet forwarded his reports.

The gentleman who examined the land offices in the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, in the year 1821, whilst engaged in that duty, effected a very important service to the Treasury, by obtaining collateral security for a very large amount of the public money on deposit in the bank of Vincennes at the time that that bank stopped payment. The expectation that he would be able to effect this service formed a strong inducement to accept his offer to examine the land offices. For performing this service he has made no charge, and will receive no compensation. No additional compensation has been received in any case whatever.

From the experience which has been acquired on this subject, no doubt is entertained that the mode of examination, which has been pursued since the year 1815, is decidedly preferable to that which has been previously pursued. When a different person is employed to examine each office, the judgment which is formed of the manner and style in which the books are kept will depend upon the intelligence, the prejudices, or partialities, of the different examiners; but, when the same person examines a number of offices, the same intelligence is exercised in each case, exempt, too, from partiality or prejudice, when the examiner is not a neighbor or connexion of the officer. The impression produced upon the officers themselves, by the mode which has been practised since 1815, prove, incontestably, its superiority over the other. An examination now is not a matter of form. The time the examiner is to arrive is unknown. When he does arrive, the examination immediately commences, and is continued without relaxation until it is completed. When the examination is made by the neighbors of the officers, the time of examination depends upon the convenience of the latter, as there is nothing to induce the examiners to proceed to the examination at one time in preference to another.

It is also an object of some importance that the examiner should communicate, confidentially, many things that he would not be willing to incorporate in his report, and which it would even be improper to incorporate. The value of such communications will depend entirely upon the knowledge which the head of the Departments has of the character of the person who makes them.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

[1st SESSION.]

APPLICATION OF VERMONT FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 31, 1822.

STATE OF VERMONT, OCTOBER SESSION, 1821.

Report of a committee, and resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Vermont, on the appropriation of public lands for the purposes of education.

The committee to whom was referred His Excellency's message, accompanied with a report and sundry resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Maryland relative to the appropriations of public land for the purposes of education, and a report and sundry resolutions of the Legislature of the State of New Hampshire on the same subject, beg leave to report:

That they have attentively considered the said reports, and the resolutions respectively predicated thereon, and find them to contain the following principles, which, in the opinion of your committee, cannot be denied or resisted:

That the public lands of the United States, whether acquired by force, or by acts or deeds of cession from particular States, or by purchase from foreign Governments, are the common property of the Union, and ought to be applied to the common use and benefit of all the States in just proportions, and not to the use and benefit of any particular State or States, to the exclusion of others; and that any such partial appropriation of them, for State purposes, is a violation of our national compact, as well as of the principles of just and sound policy.

And that, as large appropriations of the public lands have been made by the United States (and, in the opinion of your committee, with perfect propriety) to certain particular States for the purposes of education, the rights of other States will be violated unless a like appropriation be made to them of the public lands, for the same purposes, in just proportion.

In these principles your committee fully agree with the Legislatures of the States of Maryland and New Hampshire, and believe the arguments detailed in the reports made to the Legislatures of those States respectively, and particularly that from the State of Maryland, to be altogether unanswerable.

The reports and resolutions referred to your committee, which have been published for the use of the General Assembly, so clearly and irresistibly elucidate and establish the principles maintained, that an attempt, on the present occasion, at further or more ample discussion, would be superfluous.

They may be allowed, however, to suggest that the claims of the State of Vermont on the subject may be urged with as much justice as those of any other State.

The burdens and sacrifices of the revolutionary war, which secured the sources of our national wealth as well as our independence, were shared, in full proportion, by the people of this State. At the same time, as this State was not then a member of the confederation, no indemnity was obtained from the United States, though, on its accession to the Union, it became subject, equally with the other States, to the burden of the public debt.

Your committee recommend to the General Assembly the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Vermont, That each of the United States has an equal right to participate in the benefit of the public lands, as the common property of the Union; and that the States, in whose favor Congress have not made appropriations of land for the purposes of education, are entitled to such appropriations as will be in a just proportion with those heretofore made in favor of the other States.

Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be requested to transmit copies of the foregoing report and resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with a request that they will use their endeavors to procure the passage of an act to appropriate to the use of the State of Vermont, for the purposes of education, such quantity of the public lands as shall be equitable and just.

Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be also requested to transmit copies of the said report and resolves to the Governors of the several States of the Union, with a request that they will communicate the same to their respective Legislatures, and solicit their co-operation to carry into effect the just principles therein set forth.

All which is respectfully submitted, by

HENRY OLIN, for the committee.

CLAIM OF THE COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED BY GEORGIA TO EXAMINE CERTAIN LANDS ON THE TENNESSEE RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 1, 1822.

Mr. EATON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Nicholas Ware and William A. Carr, executors of Thomas Carr, deceased, made the following report:

In February, 1784, the State of Georgia, with a view to ascertain the precise quality and situation of that portion of her Western territory lying in the Big Bend of Tennessee river, appointed seven commissioners, with authority to proceed there, open an office, and perfect titles, under certain limitations and restrictions embraced in the resolution. Nothing is said of the compensation to be extended to the commissioners for their services. On the 25th of December, 1785, a report was made by them, and, in August following, the Legislature resolved that "each of those commissioners, who had actually attended their duty, should be entitled to five thousand acres of land in the district as a gratuity and full compensation for their trouble;" and that they should have a warrant of survey. These facts are established by records produced from the State of Georgia, properly and legally certified.

But five of the commissioners entered on a discharge of the duties assigned them, viz: John Donelson, Stephen Heard, William Downes, Joseph Martin, together with Thomas Carr, who had been appointed in lieu of Thomas Napier, resigned. The enterprise was arduous, and full of danger, and one of the commissioners, Donelson, lost his life while in the discharge of this duty.

Subsequent to August, 1786, the acts and proceedings of Georgia furnish no information of the reason why the lands reserved and appropriated for those commissioners were not located and titles to them perfected: a deposition, however, of Zachariah Cox states that "he assigned the land claimed under the act by making special location in the Tennessee purchase;" though what authority he had from Georgia to make such location, does not appear from any proofs or documents furnished, other than the act of 1795, commonly termed the Yazoo act. In this it is provided that, within the limits of what had been sold to the Tennessee Company, of which Mr. Cox was the head, there should be "reserved 50,000 acres, to be equally divided amongst the commissioners appointed by the State for the purpose of examining the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the Great Bend of the Tennessee river."

No doubt is entertained by the committee of the correctness of this claim. The commissioners never acted under any special contract with Georgia as to the remuneration to be made them for their services. They proceeded, as they had been required under the act of 1784, upon a hazardous enterprise, in a wilderness country, and amongst savages in no wise friendly disposed, to the execution of the trust confided to them, with no security for compensation other than a confidence in the liberality of the State. Whether, then, the amount of their claim should be determined by the act of 1786, which gave to each of them 5,000 acres, or by the act of 1795, section fifteen, which enlarged it to 50,000 acres, was an inquiry with the committee. There being no special contract, it rested with the gratuity and liberality of Georgia. That State, possessing the sovereignty and soil, had a right to fix the amount as she pleased; and, having fixed it, the title became vested, and could not, as your committee conceived, be affected or impaired by any subsequent transfer to the United States. Georgia herself admits the correctness of the claim; that it has never been satisfied; and by a memorial from the Legislature of that State in the year 1818, desires that it may be satisfied: taking into view, however, that the act of 1795 was repealed by Georgia, and that her memorial is silent as to the quantity the committee have preferred, considering the claim under the operation of the act of 1786, which limited the amount to be given to each commissioner to 5,000 acres.

By the articles of compact and cession from Georgia to the United States, it is covenanted that confirmation shall be given to all perfect British and Spanish grants, and to all surveys and settlements made in that district of country over which those commissioners had been appointed to preside. Authority is also given, if exercised by the United States within a year, to set apart not exceeding 5,000,000 of acres, as a fund out of which to satisfy any other claim that might exist against that State. The United States, in pursuance of that compact, and within the time limited, created a fund to that amount, from which were to be satisfied such claims as might be preferred, founded "upon any act, or pretended act, of Georgia." From this act of Congress, in connexion with the articles of compact and cession, it seems obvious that this claim rests against the United States, and not against the State of Georgia.

The committee, under a view of all the circumstances, have reported a bill for the relief of the claimants, extending to each of the commissioners 5,000 acres.

APPLICATION FOR INDEMNITY FOR LOSSES SUSTAINED BY ERRORS OF SURVEYORS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 19, 1822.

Mr. RANKIN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the inhabitants of the eastern section of range No. 15, and township No. 2, of Canton district, in the State of Ohio, and of Robert Williams and Abraham Kroft, on the same subject, reported:

The petitioners allege they have sustained considerable loss, in consequence of certain errors committed by the surveyors of the United States in surveying the public lands, and pray Congress to give them relief. It was not to be presumed that the surveys of the public lands, made by numerous hands, should be in all respects accurate; nor that inconsiderable errors, whether against or in favor of the Government, should be rectified. A claim for deficiency, on the part of individuals, is no better founded than the claim of the Government, for compensation for an excess of quantity above the estimated quantity in any tract of land. These claims, if admitted and enforced, would, especially when examined by men of different degrees of skill and science, and by instruments more or less perfect, disturb the settled state of things which now exist in relation to almost every tract of land purchased of the United States. This must, by a large portion of the community, be viewed as a much greater evil than any partial losses sustained under the present settled state of things. Besides, it was in the power of individuals to have completely satisfied themselves, on the subject of the quantity of lands in their respective tracts, in time to have avoided any loss or injury. Nor can we believe that the Government is bound, or ever intended to warrant the quantity of land supposed to be contained in any legal division or subdivision of public land offered for sale, for the estimated quantity agreeably to the public surveys. The act of the 11th of February, on the contrary, declares that "each section, or subdivision of a section," &c. "shall be held and considered as containing the exact quantity expressed in the return by the Surveyor General," &c. It is believed that this act is general in its operation.

Your committee, therefore, recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

EXAMINATION OF THE LAND OFFICES IN 1821, AND THE EXPENSE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 19, 1822.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 18, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the House of "the several sums of public money which have been drawn for, or received by, the person who examined the land offices in the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, in the year 1821, by virtue of letters of credit to Receivers of Public Money, or otherwise, and what sum now remains in the hands of that person to be accounted for, specifying the times when, and persons from whom, such several sums, or any part thereof, may have been received; and, also, that he state who was appointed to examine the land offices in Michigan Territory, for the year 1821; whether that duty was performed, and, if not, why it was omitted;" I have the honor to state that, from the indisposition of the gentleman who had engaged to examine the land offices in Michigan Territory in 1821, those offices were not examined in that year. The papers marked A, B, C, D, and E, herewith submitted, contain all the other information required by the resolution.

The expense of examining the land offices is a legitimate charge upon the annual appropriation of six thousand dollars "for the discharge of such claims against the United States, not otherwise provided for, as shall have been admitted in due course of settlement at the Treasury." The law requires that the service shall be performed, but there never has been a specific appropriation for that object. When the accounts and vouchers are rendered, they are examined and certified as other public accounts, and are admitted in due course of settlement at the Treasury.

In my report of the 28th ultimo, [see No. 348,] I had the honor to state that the Receivers who had advanced money to the gentlemen who examined the land offices in 1821, upon the letter of credit with which they were respectively furnished, had not made their monthly returns, in which the sums so advanced were charged, and, that for that reason, their accounts had not been settled.

Those accounts have yet been but partially received. Statement E, however, contains the several sums which have been admitted to have been received. When the vouchers shall be forwarded by the Receivers, the account will be subjected to the same examination as other public accounts.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Hon. PHILIP P. BARBOUR, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

A.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 6, 1821.

You will receive from the Commissioner of the General Land Office statements of the situation of the land offices, which you are requested to examine, at the date of the last examination, or that of the last settlement, which has been made of their accounts.

A letter of credit is herewith enclosed, which you will use according to your convenience, not exceeding in the whole the amount which you will be entitled to receive for the service which you will render.

The compensation which has been allowed for this service, for the last two years, has been six dollars a day whilst engaged in the examination of the books, &c., of the offices, and six dollars for every twenty miles travel from office to office, whilst engaged in that service.

If suit should not have been brought against the Bank of Vincennes for the sum due the United States before you arrive at that place, I will thank you to ascertain, as far as practicable, what can be done to secure the debt ultimately; and I authorize you to enter into any arrangement for that purpose, which you may judge to be for the interest of the nation, which shall not stipulate for the payment of a less sum than what is actually due.

Should suit have been brought before you arrive, you are nevertheless authorized to enter into any arrangement with the bank, under the limitations herein defined, and to direct such stay or suspension of legal proceedings as may be necessary to give effect to such arrangement.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 6, 1821.

The Hon. Jesse B. Thomas has proposed to examine the land offices in Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and at Detroit. I will, therefore, thank you to transmit to him the state of the different offices according to the last examination, or date of the last settlement, whichever shall be most recent, together with such instructions as you may judge it expedient to give.

I am, &c.,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 10, 1822.

In your journey to and from the land offices which you are requested to examine, you are authorized to draw from the respective Receivers of Public Moneys such sums as may be necessary for your expenses; and the Receivers will charge the same in their quarterly accounts, transmitting your receipts as vouchers.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

HON. JESSE B. THOMAS, Edwardsville, Illinois.

SIR:

WASHINGTON CITY, February 11, 1812.

The statement hereto annexed shows the amount of money which I received in virtue of your letter of credit to the Receivers of Public Moneys, whose offices I examined, the names of the Receivers from whom I received the same, and, also, the places where, and the times when, the several sums were drawn. Having given duplicate receipts to the Receivers for those sums, I deemed it unnecessary to make any memorandum of the particular days on which they were advanced. Therefore, I cannot vouch for the accuracy of that part of the statement, it being made from recollection only. I commenced the examination of the land offices about the twenty-fifth of April, 1821, and finished on the twenty-fourth of November in the same year. Within that period I was several weeks engaged in securing the debt due from the Vincennes Bank to the United States. Not intending to charge the Government any thing more than a full indemnity for my ordinary and incidental expenses whilst engaged in this service, and believing that the sum received as stated is not more than sufficient for that object, I should do injustice to myself were I not to retain it. I cannot, however, exhibit an accurate account of those expenses, nor do I consider it important. But, inasmuch as I examined eighteen land offices, dispersed through an immense region of country, and was a considerable time seriously indisposed, it will be readily conceived that the expenses and losses incident to such an undertaking could not fall short of the sum stated.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JESSE B. THOMAS.

The Hon. WM. H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury.

No. 353.

[1st Session.]

APPLICATION OF THE "COFFEE LAND ASSOCIATION" FOR A GRANT OF TWENTY-FOUR THOUSAND ACRES IN FLORIDA, AT THE MINIMUM PRICE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 20, 1822.

Mr. RANKIN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Peter S. Chazotte and others, in behalf of the American Coffee Land Association, reported:

The petitioners state that they are the agents of a large association of American citizens, amounting to one hundred families, who are desirous of making an establishment in East Florida for the purpose of cultivating coffee, cocoa, and such tropical fruits and productions as may be found adapted to the climate and soil of the country. They allege that, encouraged by the report of a committee of this House, made at the last session of Congress, by letters and private communications from many intelligent and respectable individuals in different parts of the United States, and the known liberality of the Government, they explored, at considerable expense, Florida generally, but particularly that portion thereof best suited to their purposes. They at length selected, on account of its situation and capacity to receive and afford plantations to the several members of the association, Cape Florida or Key Largo, by them named Monroe's Presque Isle. This peninsula is connected to the main land by a narrow isthmus or neck of land, is situated between latitude $21^{\circ} 56'$ and $25^{\circ} 12'$, and contains about twenty-four thousand acres of land, twenty-three thousand of which is supposed to be cultivable. Key Largo is represented as presenting what is generally called an iron bound shore, surrounded on all sides by limestone rocks, and by shoals, in consequence of which they selected, on the south side of a small river, in latitude $25^{\circ} 48'$, a site for a town, where a convenient harbor was found for shipping, which might be employed in the exportation of the productions of the soil. They request to be permitted to purchase, at the minimum price, or at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, Key Largo, and four sections of land at the place selected for a town, for which they propose paying cash on the delivery of the patents. They state that their object is settlement solely, and not a speculation, the sincerity of which statement is evinced by a declaration of their willingness to subject the members of the association, severally, to the forfeiture of their respective grants, and of the money that may have been paid, if, in two years and one day after the land shall have been surveyed, and the patents issued, the land for which any such patent may have issued be not cultivated, and such tropical fruits and productions reared thereon as may be found adapted to the soil or climate. Two other propositions were submitted, which the committee thought unnecessary to be incorporated with their report.

While your committee highly appreciate the industry and enterprise of the individuals who explored this new acquisition of territory, the nature and value of which had been previously entirely unknown; and with feelings of the highest respect for the delicacy, intelligence, and ability, with which the cause of the association has been represented before them by examples drawn from the history and experience of other nations; by expanded and liberal views of national patriotism, wealth and aggrandizement, and independence from foreign nations for the rich tropical productions; by the prospect of protection and security which such a settlement would afford our revenue and our shipping compelled to pass that coast; the opening a settlement calculated to invite to the speedy population of the country, and the expulsion of a horde of wreckers and pirates from the coast, the former of whom are licensed by foreign powers; they are compelled, however reluctantly, on general principles, to report unfavorably to the prayer of the petitioners.

The domain is the common property of the Union, which the representatives of the people are bound, by their duty to the whole community, to dispose of to the best advantage for the common benefit. Ignorant as we must be of the value of the land proposed to be purchased, we cannot, with any accuracy, determine whether the price offered be adequate or inadequate. No better system, it is presumed, can be adopted than that which has been long practised in this Government, of offering the public land in small quantities, after suitable notice, at public auction. In this way the land is certain to bring its value in the market, while the quantity offered gives to the man in moderate circumstances a fair competition with the capitalist. It shields the representative of the people from the charge of granting exclusive privileges to some, or from being compelled to make distribution of the public land at less than its value. To preserve consistency, and avoid such imputations, the present has been adopted after an experience of the deleterious effects of a contrary system. Every departure from it has given additional proof of its excellence, and the folly of such departure in the indulgence of generosity or sympathy.

By the treaty, which ceded Florida to the United States, Congress has a discretionary power of discharging such sum as may be awarded by the commissioners appointed under that treaty, not exceeding $5,000,000, at the Treasury of the United States, or of creating a stock for that purpose, bearing an annual interest of six per cent., payable from the proceeds of the sales of public lands in the ceded territory. Should this stock be created, which is probable in the present state of the Treasury, justice to the claimants requires that the lands should be disposed of in the ordinary way, and for the best price that can be obtained for them in market. A contrary course might delay the claimants in the receipt of the several amounts due them, produce delay in the payment, or eventually render the fund wholly inadequate. From a deliberate view of the whole subject, your committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the petitioners have leave to withdraw their petition and accompanying documents.

PHILADELPHIA, January 14, 1822.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: The memorial of the subscribers, citizens of the United States, respectfully represents:

That Peter Stephen Chazotte presented to Congress, at their last session, a plan for forming a national nursery for the culture of vines, olives, almonds, &c., in the Southern States, and coffee, cocoa, and cochineal, in East Florida, [see page 460,] which was referred to a committee of the House of Representatives, who reported favorably to the general objects contemplated, [see page 466,] but the late arrival of the treaty of cession, and the pressure of other business, having delayed this report until the second day of March, no time remained to act upon it, and nothing was left to the committee but to recommend it to the favorable attention of the succeeding Congress, whom your memorialists have now the honor of addressing. In confirmation of these remarks, and for the information of Congress, your memorialists beg to refer to the accompanying documents marked Nos. 1, 2, and 3.

Your memorialists respectfully beg leave to represent that the said Peter S. Chazotte, sensible that a national nursery in Florida could, of itself, be of but little advantage to the country, without the establishment of a colony for the cultivation of the various productions contemplated, upon a more enlarged scale, and with a view to permanency, by public notice, invited his fellow-citizens to join with him in carrying the views and objects set forth in his memorial to Congress into effect.

Your memorialists, accordingly, encouraged by the favorable disposition manifested by Congress, and desirous of promoting a plan which they believe fraught with important consequences to the future commercial interests of their country, associated themselves with the said Peter S. Chazotte, raised the necessary funds, procured and fitted out a suitable vessel, in which Mr. Chazotte, accompanied by five gentlemen of the association, and a proper number of laborers, embarked, and were occupied, during an absence of nearly five months, in exploring several hundred miles of the coast and interior of East Florida, and obtaining the information necessary to enable them to judge of the practicability of the desired objects.

The result of their investigation was the selection of Key Largo (which they named Monroe's Presque Isle) as a situation suitable for the location of the intended settlement, it containing about the quantity of land originally proposed to be taken up; and it being, so far as they could ascertain, free from any prior claims, and so bounded as to make its limits easily described and defined.

This Presque Isle lies on the southeast of the peninsula of East Florida, between the latitudes of 24° 56' and 25° 12' north, bounded on the northeast by Angel-Fish creek, on the southwest by a narrow channel that separates it from Long Isle, on the northwest by Grant's lake, the continent, and Keys and Sandwich gulf, and, on the southeast, by the Gulf stream within the reef, (as by the accompanying draught, No. 5;) containing, by computation, twenty-three thousand acres, a proportion of which is broken, rocky, and barren, and as there was not a proper site on the island for a town from which their produce could be transported otherwise than in boats, there being no harbor, and the nearest place which could be found for that purpose was within the bay of Cape Florida, between the latitudes of 25° 46' and 25° 48' north, on the south bank of the river Miami or Crawford river, where they surveyed four United States' sections, and divided them into lots; (according to the accompanying plan, No. 6;) this place, though remote from the settlement, offering the nearest safe harbor from whence the produce of the island could be exported in vessels of a proper burden.

Should the application of your memorialists meet with the approbation of your honorable bodies, their design is to proceed immediately to the formation of a settlement at Key Largo, and on the main lands at the town plot, and to commence the cultivation of coffee, cocoa, cochineal, vines, olives, almonds, or such other productions as they may find the soil and climate congenial to, and in which, should their success equal their hopes and expectations they will, in a few years, be able to furnish new articles for the commerce, add largely to the resources of the country, and the fiscal means of the Government, as by proving the capability of the soil and climate of Florida to bring to perfection those valuable and hitherto foreign productions, and opening new fields for the enterprise of our citizens, they give an enhanced value to the immense domain of the public in the newly acquired Territory, and which it will be slow in obtaining until an experiment, such as your memorialists contemplate making, shall prove successful.

Your memorialists forbear to enlarge upon the probable favorable influence of a large and respectable settlement on that part of the coast of Florida, in repressing the contraband traffic which existed under the late Government, and which will continue to be conducted in violation of our laws, and to the injury of the public revenue; nor will they remark on the advantages to a large and valuable coasting trade which, in passing, as it necessarily must, in the immediate neighborhood of the proposed colony, is liable to frequent casualties, and is then dependant for assistance and relief upon the subjects of a foreign Government, who derive large annual tributes from the misfortunes of our shipwrecked mariners. These are considerations that cannot escape the observation of your honorable bodies, with whom your memorialists are persuaded they will have full weight.

Your memorialists, encouraged by the approbation of your honorable predecessors, and sanctioned in their efforts by the Executive authority of their Government, having expended considerable sums of money in procuring information and ascertaining facts which they believe valuable and important to their fellow-citizens, rely, with respectful confidence, upon the justice of their representatives for such remuneration as their exertions may seem to merit, and do respectfully solicit a grant of Key Largo, or Monroe's Presque Isle, together with the four United States' sections surveyed within the bay at Cape Florida, for a town, from whence to transport their produce, subject to such restrictions and regulations relative to its speedy settlement and cultivation as your honorable bodies may think proper to impose.

And your memorialists, as in duty bound, will pray, &c.

JOHN GILDER,
BERNARD McCREDY,
WILLIAM DAVIS,
AMOS ROBERTS,

Committee of Superintendence of the East Florida Coffee Land Association.

SIR:

WASHINGTON, February 7, 1822.

Allow us respectfully to thank you personally, and, through you, the honorable members of the Committee on Public Lands, for the favor conferred on us by calling an extra meeting for the purpose of forwarding the object for which we, the delegates of the East Florida Coffee Land Association, have repaired to the seat of Government; and, likewise, for the kind and patient attention paid to us whilst in your committee.

Whether the principle on which our prayer to Congress is grounded, is of such a character as to be incompatible with our republican form of Government, or, on the contrary, is analogous to our national institutions, we have not confidence enough to determine; nor does our modest sphere in life fit us to lay down principles, the duty of which rests on the wisdom of the representatives of the people. However, if the examples of the ancient republics of Greece and Rome; if the usages and policy of modern nations, and many precedents in our American republican empire, can justify us to view this principle as being already established, and found in almost all our national and State institutions, we beg leave respectfully to offer to your consideration a rough sketch of our ideas on this very important subject.

When the republics of Greece and Rome conquered any new territory, they sent colonies of respectable citizens amongst the conquered people, with a view to secure their conquests by introducing their language, laws, habits, and customs. They, besides, gave to these colonists cities, mansions, houses, and lands; whilst a portion of the conquered people was transplanted and intermixed amongst the citizens of the conquering power. This very wise and enlightened policy forced even a barbarian to become a modest and useful member of the commonwealth.

The modern nations of Europe have pursued different contrary policies. England bestowed large grants of lands on courtiers and distinguished individuals, in their possessions in the new world; and, had not the intolerant spirit of the priestcraft driven away from Europe millions of its respectable inhabitants, the flourishing country we now inhabit would still be a desert. Spain and Portugal granted millions of acres to favorites and courtiers, and very few acres to the only useful members of the newly discovered countries. France, thinking a difference of climate ought to form a line of demarcation, pursued two opposite policies. In Canada the feudal system was established; large grants of lands, under the title of seigniories, were made to privileged characters. This policy soon proved ruinous to the Crown; for, notwithstanding the many items of millions spent by that Government, the country remained almost a wild desert, which at last fell into the hands of the British.

In her West India possessions France pursued a wiser policy; she acknowledged no privileged character; she refused grants for seigniories; a prince was but a citizen; free grants were therefore given to every applicant. Those for sugar, coffee, indigo, &c. were from 300 to 600 acres; for grazing farms 900 acres were granted; no title of nobility was acknowledged, or rather, that title was conferred, after a residence of fifteen years, on every planter; thus, by multiplying the number, there was no title in fact; they all stood upon an equality. Besides, every grant was forfeited, if, at the end of one year and one day, a settlement for the culture specified in the grant had not actually been made; and the first comer, after that period had elapsed, was by law allowed to take possession of the same, on his accomplishing the terms and conditions of said grant. Thus speculations on lands were effectually put at rest. The Government gave freely, and the more it gave the richer it grew. A few years' trial were sufficient to prove the success of this liberal policy. The fiscal revenue of France was tripled; it gave occupation to her numerous mariners, enlivened commerce, agriculture, and manufactures. She became, in a short time, the first colonial nation of Europe—a rank she owed solely to her wise policy in the encouragement of the agricultural pursuit of tropical staples and fruits.

In our republic we have no case forming a real parallel with the monarchical precedents above cited, because neither the President nor any other officer can lawfully bestow any portion of land; this power is vested in Congress alone. Nevertheless, analogous cases are the basis of all our public institutions: the passing through a turnpike-road gate is a sure indication of an exclusive right granted to a company to retard the progress of the impatient traveller, and to lessen the weight of his purse. The banking system is a granted right, and an exclusive privilege to substitute paper for silver and gold—a power vested in hundreds of companies, which are no less hostile to a well regulated financial system than the silent and nightly false coiner. Bridges, canals, rivers, navigation, &c. all have obtained exclusive privileges; the very numerous cases of incorporations, under a thousand different names and appellations, granted for different purposes, fully prove this principle.

Whether it would be a just policy thus to sell land previous to a general disposition of the same, according to existing regulations, is a subject which the honorable members of your committee can best determine. However, it is a question already settled, in private as well as public economy, that it is wisdom in an individual to improve a portion of the land he possesses, to enhance the value of that which he wishes to sell. It is wisdom which frequently prompts him, gratuitously, to convey tracts to industrious settlers, the gift of which is more than compensated by the increasing value of the surrounding lots. This is a standing rule which is equally applicable to Governments, States, and individuals. Besides, numerous precedents are to be found in the acts of Congress to justify such national grants.

The character which stamps our request to purchase land of the United States is by far of a greater national importance than can, at first, be surmised; but which you, sir, and the honorable members of the committee will duly appreciate. It is an association of patriotic and enterprising citizens, who respectfully beg leave of Congress to be permitted to part from their friends; to forget the endearing spots of their infantile sports; to forsake their accustomed enjoyments and intercourse with their numerous relatives and fellow-citizens; to give up pleasure and the sweets of life, and to transplant themselves on the wild deserts of South East Florida. Will it be asked, what is the motive of so great sacrifices? their answer is, patriotism, and a just regard for themselves and the well being of their families. The statesman impairs his health, and shortens the period of his natural life, by his assiduity to public business; the warrior disdains the blazes of war, and fronts death in the defence of the rights and honor of his country; we, humble agriculturists, fear not to meet with the surly countenance of a tropical climate. Our chief object is to multiply the resources of our country, by introducing the culture of coffee, cocoa, cochineal, olives, capers, almonds, vines, &c., which, we believe, may successfully be cultivated there—a trial of which we are willing to make at our expense, and which requires the labors of several years ere it repays the husbandman for his troubles and sacrifices. An experiment big with so many important consequences to the present state and future destinies of these United States cannot, we presume, be disregarded by the wise men who have been selected by the people to devise schemes and form wise laws, to ensure the happiness and prosperity of this republican empire.

That the Executive, in the exercise of their power to repress, and effectually to destroy, the illicit trade carried on under the late Government in that section of East Florida, in driving from those coasts the foreign wreckers and marauders that infest them, and in securing to the fiscal revenue an item of at least $150,000 per annum, would derive aid, means, and power, to enforce the execution of the laws from a colony of respectable American citizens, is a natural consequence; and this consideration alone, separated from many others of a more national import, would justify Congress to accede to our prayer.

We beg of you, sir, to excuse us for our long digressions, and the waste of your time in the perusal of our ideas on subjects better understood by yourself and the honorable members of the Committee on Public Lands; and respectfully submit, for your and their consideration, the terms we have been empowered to offer for the purchase of the land specified in our memorial to Congress, and which we shall present to you in the following manner:

First. We offer the minimum price, fixed by law, of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, one-half cash, the other half payable at six years, without interest, for 23,000 acres of land on Key Largo, and the four United States' sections selected for a town within the bay of Cape Florida.

Second. We again offer thirty thousand dollars cash for the whole island of Key Largo, and the town plot within Cape Florida.

Third. Or forty thousand dollars for the whole island and town plat, payable in three instalments, at six, eight, and ten years, without any interest.

Remarks. The first proposal presupposes a choice of land on Key Largo, or Monroe Presque Isle, and likewise that the survey of the same shall be at the expense of Government.

The second and third proposals presuppose that the Presque Isle Monroe, or Key Largo, will be wholly included, with its good and barren lands; and that the expense of surveying the same, and its division and subdivision into lots of 100 acres, shall be at the charge of the association; thereby saving much money to the Treasury.

Having explained our ideas on the foregoing three terms, we shall proceed on to secondary objects, thus:

Fourth. The association shall be liable for the first cash payment as per term first, and the patent titles shall be made severally, in each individual name, according to his subscription, after a survey shall have been effected, and fate shall have allotted him his share or shares by ballot; when the association will be dissolved, and the landholders shall be severally liable for the second cash payment, and not as joint tenants, or tenants in common.

Fifth. The association shall be liable for the thirty thousand dollars, payable on the delivery of the patents or deeds, as per term second; and the said deeds shall be made out as expressed in article fourth.

Sixth. The association, or landholders, shall be severally and individually liable for the payment of the instalments as per term third, and their patents shall be made out as expressed in article fourth.

These are respectfully submitted for your consideration.

We have the honor to remain, your obedient servants,

PETER S. CHAZOTTE.
JOHN GILDER.

Hon. C. RANKIN, Chairman of the Committee, &c.

SIR:

WASHINGTON, February 14, 1822.

In the conversation you honored me with the day before yesterday, and the verbal understanding that took place on certain terms and conditions which you requested me to deliver in writing, and in addition to those already submitted to the committee, we have the honor to present for your consideration the following substitute for the first term offered in our communication:

Term 1st. For twenty-four thousand acres of land on Key Largo, or Monroe Presque Isle, and for the four United States' sections for a town within Cape Florida, according to the draughts now before the committee, we are empowered to offer one dollar and twenty-five cents cash per acre, payable on the delivery of the several patents or deeds.

The second term offered in our last communication to remain the same, as well as the subsequent explanatory paragraphs.

And with a view to remove every existing prejudice, lest this grant might, like the Tombeckbee and other grants, become an object of speculation, we are willing to subscribe to the following conditions:

That two years and one day after the land shall have been surveyed, and the patents delivered to the several landholders who shall not have actually planted, and in a state of cultivation, coffee, cocoa, sugar, and other tropical fruits, together with olive, almond, vine, &c., according to the particular culture of any one of the above enumerated staples for which their land shall have been found best suited, shall, individually and severally, forfeit their land to the United States, and also the purchase money already paid into the Treasury of the United States.

The committee will perceive that the Tombeckbee grant has no similitude with that for which we have petitioned Congress.

In the Tombeckbee case a great number of foreigners and exiles from Europe excited the feelings of Congress in their favor; ninety-six thousand acres of land were granted to them as an asylum, at two dollars per acre, payable at fourteen years' credit, without interest, (a term nearly equal to a free grant,) and on certain conditions, which a few of them have fulfilled. This fulfilment they did not contemplate, nor could it be expected; because the largest number of those on whom this favor was extended, were without any pecuniary means, and, therefore, incapable of forming any establishment on the land granted to them. They sold the same to get bread. Hence the speculations that followed. Besides, men who had all their life lived in camps could not so soon exchange "the sword for the ploughshare." In a word, they were soldiers and not agriculturists.

The case which we represent is the very reverse of the Tombeckbee. Actuated by a laudable spirit, and with a view to increase the resources of their country by immediately introducing the culture of the above enumerated staples, nearly one hundred respectable families, not of foreigners, but of citizens of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, &c., formed themselves into an association under the direction of Peter S. Chazotte, an experienced agriculturist, for the culture of vines, olives, coffee, cocoa, and other tropical productions; and wishing to commence, as soon as possible, the great national work which they have in contemplation, and for which they have already expended upwards of two thousand five hundred dollars, they sent an expedition, headed by said P. S. Chazotte, to explore the southernmost section of East Florida, and ascertain whether those tropical staples were likely to succeed, ere they made an application to Congress for a grant.

Now, sir, what is the object of our application? The purchase by special enactment, of a few thousand acres of land for national purposes. What terms do we offer? Cash, at the minimum price fixed by law. Are we bound to no performance? The cash payment is a very binding one, and the culture of the staples already enumerated is not less obligatory. Have we refused to accept a defined period of time for the due accomplishment of our promises? We are willing to forfeit, individually and severally, our grants, (if obtained of the honorable Congress,) lose our expense, establishments, and purchase money, should we fail individually to accomplish (as far as the nature of the soil and climate will correspond with our labors) the special purposes of said grant, and this, two years and one day after the land shall have been surveyed, and the patent titles delivered. In fact, sir, no request of this kind has ever before been made to Congress, nor are you to be apprehensive lest it should form a precedent, for we crave the honor, rather than the profit, of such a national enterprise.

Should we obtain the object contemplated in our application, and success attend our experiments, what an increase of resources, national prosperity and wealth, new staples of exchange for commerce, and aliments for manufactures, may not, by anticipation, be expected from it, besides the consequent altitude which shall thereby be secured to this great republic in her relations with the rest of the world!

With these observations, we close our present communication to the honorable Committee on Public Lands, and have the honor to subscribe ourselves their obedient servants,

PETER S. CHAZOTTE.
JOHN GILDER.

HON. CHRISTOPHER RANKIN, Chairman, &c.

No. 1.

Facts and observations on the culture of vines, olives, capers, almonds, &c., in the Southern States, and of coffee, cocoa, and cochineal, in East Florida, by Peter Stephen Chazotte, who has, for upwards of ten years, been engaged in the culture of vines, &c., in Southern France, and for seven years a grower of coffee, cocoa, &c., in the West Indies.

To the President, Senate, and House of Representatives of the United States, are respectfully offered, for their consideration, the following facts and observations on the policy of immediately introducing the highly interesting cultures of vines, olives, capers, and almonds, in the now Territory of the United States, and on the plantations of coffee, cochineal, cocoa, or chocolate nut, in East Florida.

It has a hundred times been stated that agriculture is the basis of the national wealth of empires. May I not be allowed to add that it is the true source of individual happiness; that it secures independence and cherishes every virtue; the enjoyments of which are constant, without being contaminated by those vices which are frequently the attendants of manufactures.

That agriculture is alone capable of raising a nation to the highest degree of happiness and independence, the history of mankind will prove; from the earliest ages man has been taught to call the earth "his mother and beneficent nurse."

For the further development of my ideas on this interesting subject, I shall take a cursory view of the climates of southern Europe and Asia Minor, and look if I cannot find in our country climates perfectly congenial to the growth of whatever plants are successfully cultivated in southern Europe. In doing this, however, it is not my intention to include wheat, barley, oats, nor any grains and vegetables which our country is known to grow to as great a perfection as in any other part of the world. I shall limit my inquiries to those rich staples which our soil will luxuriantly grow, and which we have until now neglected to cultivate.

Having resolved not to be deterred from prosecuting this plan of improvements by any of those idle ideas which either prejudice, ignorance, or foreign policy has been endeavoring to imbue our minds with, we shall clearly perceive all the advantages which our insular coast, our extensive inland country, the variety of our climates, and our rich soil give us over the nations of Europe. It is true that we cannot at present drain the marshes of Virginia, nor turn the dismal swamps of North Carolina into Roman consular retreats, and pleasure gardens. We need not occupy ourselves with works which require a more condensed population than ours is. That shall be done when the land, distributed among millions of inhabitants, shall, by its increased value, promise a fair interest for the capital employed in its improvement; then, and not before, shall rich fields and stately mansions astonish the mariner sailing along our extensive coast. Leaving to future generations to effect what is not interest now to do, we are at liberty to select our ground, to cultivate the plains, or plant on the hills; we may choose the climate, the river, the particular soil; diversify our cultures; in fine, we may raise all the European fruits, and most valuable tropical staples. From the cliffs of the Patuxent to the bluff which crowns the plains that form the banks of Mobile bay, the vines may be cultivated, and the hills and valleys of Virginia may, ere long, resound with the echoed songs of the vintagers.

Wishing to proceed with regularity and order, I shall trace out comparative parallel climates both in Europe and the United States; and then, taking a separate view of each, I shall prove that, to all our already known productions may be added all those which we have not yet undertaken to cultivate. In forming this scale, I shall pay less regard to parallel latitudes than to the parallels of the now existing climates. Parallel latitudes could not bring a fair comparison of climates. As, for example, latitude fifty-one, in France, would give, in America, the northernmost section of Newfoundland, north of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and running westwardly on the southern edge of Hudson's Bay; and it is well known that, under the fifty-first degree of north latitude, in France, the climate is temperate, and the four seasons regularly marked, whilst, under the same latitude in America, the climate is intensely cold, and only two seasons which are known to be striving to conquer each other. The cause of this may be a fit subject for a treatise.

Having thus far explained my motive for abandoning parallel latitudes in order to form parallel climates, I shall establish them thus:

First climate in Europe.—Taking France from the fifty-first to the forty-fifth degree of north latitude, forming two parallel lines running eastwardly, and including the northern sections of France from Bordeaux, Switzerland, Lombardy, Bavaria, Austria, Transylvania, &c.

First climate in the United States.—The parallel climate is found between the latitudes forty-first and thirty-fifth, two lines running westwardly from the Atlantic, and including the southernmost sections of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana; the whole of the States of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

Second climate in Europe.—From latitudes forty-fifth to fortieth, including the southernmost sections of France south of Bordeaux, one-half of Spain, as far south as Oporto in Portugal; the isles of Corsica and Sardinia; Italy as far south as the bay of Tarento; and including Dalmatia, Servia, Albania, Macedonia, Romania, and the northernmost part of Asia Minor bordering on the Black sea.

Second climate in America.—Its parallel is found from latitudes thirty-five to thirty-two and a half, including the whole of South Carolina, and the northern halves of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana.

Third climate in Europe and Asia Minor.—From latitudes forty to thirty-five, including Portugal, south of Oporto, the southern section of Spain, Oran, Algiers, and Tunis, on the northern coast of Africa; the southernmost part of Italy; the island of Sicily, Greece, Morea; all the isles in the Archipelago, and those of Candia, Rhodes, Cyprus, &c., &c.; Asia Minor, Syria, Mesopotamia, and Armenia.

Third climate in the United States.—Its parallel is found between latitudes thirty-two and a half to twenty-nine, including the southernmost parts of Georgia as far south as St. Augustine, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Pensacola, and the northernmost part of East Florida.

Fourth climate in North America.—For which there is no parallel climate in Europe or Asia Minor.

From latitude twenty-ninth to twenty-fifth, bordering almost on the tropic, and including the remainder of East Florida, containing about thirty-three million acres of land.

Let us now review those climates separately with respect to their productions:

First climate in Europe.—There is not a single fruit, nor any grains or vegetables which this climate produces, even grapes, that are not likewise produced in the first climate in the United States; for vines are successfully cultivated at Vevay, in Indiana, which lies under the highest latitude of this climate. If, then, vines grow and bear plentifully good and perfectly ripe grapes at Vevay, what success would attend their cultivation on the upper land of Virginia, North Carolina, and Tennessee, where the climate is milder, the seasons more regular, the soil rich, and where tobacco grows in abundance, and even cotton succeeds—a staple which cannot be raised in Europe in this parallel climate! An undeniable proof, that this climate in the United States is as favorable to the growth of grapes as that of France. We need but plant, and our labors will be recompensed with abundant riches.

Second climate in Europe.—This climate, besides what grows in the first, produces olives, capers, almonds, oranges, limes, pomegranates, and figs.

Second climate in the United States.—This already produces oranges, limes, pomegranates, figs, &c., and if olives, capers, and almonds are not seen there, it is because none have yet been planted. It is a well known fact that indigo used to be cultivated there, and has of late years been neglected, because of the cotton being found more productive; besides tobacco and rice, which are great staples for exportation? Now, would it not exhibit a want of judgment to believe that neither olives, capers, almonds, nor vines, can succeed in so favorable a climate? Facts demonstrate that, notwithstanding Bonaparte's command to raise cotton in the southern provinces of France, every attempt was met with a discouraging failure; the summer was found to be too short, and all his endeavors to dispense with our cotton proved useless. Surely, then, that man must be prejudiced or blind, who, after such strong evidences, will still doubt of our success.

Third climate in Europe and Asia Minor.—This third climate produces only what is stated in the second, with the addition of some cotton fit only to manufacture coarse goods.

Third climate in the United States.—In this climate is raised the finest cotton in the world; and besides those staples that already grow, and may grow in the second, we raise sugar, which is a production of the torrid zone. In vain did Bonaparte's empire extend to the southernmost part of Europe; unable to find in it an inch of ground where the sugar canes could grow, he was reduced to extract a scanty supply of bad sugar from beets. It is then manifest, that our first, second, and third stated climates are, separately and collectively, superior to those of Europe; and if they do not produce wines, olives, capers, and almonds, they are not to be charged with being unfavorable to their growth: we alone are to be blamed for it.

Fourth climate south of the United States.—This fourth climate has no parallel in Europe; it lies between latitudes twenty-ninth and twenty-fifth, and, being four degrees further to the south than any other section of the United States, it promises fair, from the nature of the soil and climate, to produce coffee, cochineal, and cocoa; as for sugar, it may every where be raised abundantly.

Coffee, cocoa, and sugar are staples of the tropics, and we are satisfied that, as the latter is raised in Louisiana, the climate of East Florida must be much more favorable. Doubts may arise on the success attending the culture of the two first named staples in the minds of such as are altogether unacquainted with it; but let those who are conversant with the subject decide, and I am confident of being strengthened in my opinion by an affirmative.

I shall here take a retrospective view of the progress of the plantations of coffee in the West India islands, and prove that, where it was not expected to grow, experiments attended with success have removed all doubts.

In the year 1796 not a single coffee plant was cultivated in the island of Cuba. In the year 1769 that plant began to be introduced in the island of Jamaica; for, in the year 1798, there was but a very scanty quantity raised in that island. That plant was chiefly cultivated in the colonies belonging to France; and, were it not for the French revolution, it is probable that that rich staple would at this day be, as it formerly was, the principal cause of the ascendancy of France over England in supplying the whole of Europe with that colonial produce. Unfortunately, I do not say for France, but for the planters of that once happy and favored island, St. Domingo, they were doomed to utter destruction by the evil genius of a single man. That man was Calonne, prime minister to Louis the 16th. By that policy which, in European cabinets is called "un coup de politique," Calonne expected to arrest the revolution in its first brilliant progress, by diverting the minds of the French people, and directing it towards the safety of St. Domingo, where the interests of France seemed until then to have been concentrated. He resolved, and ordered a dreadful revolt to be instigated there, and a man of color, at that time in Paris, whose name was Ogé, was sent, and furnished with every facility the Government could afford, to stir up a revolt among the mulattoes. Cape François was burnt, streams of human blood flowed, civil war was kindled all over the island. The French people were too busily engaged about redressing their grievances to be deterred from pursuing the object in view by un coup de politique. The inhabitants of that devoted colony were commiserated but not relieved; and so deep and long endured were the sores of that oppressed people, that, until their cure was effected, they could not busy themselves about healing the sufferings of their far remote countrymen. Artifice, cunning, and deceit on the one hand, and enthusiasm on the other, misguided and stifled the best judgment of the nation; all was liberty, equality, philanthropy; and, with a view to oppose the revolted mulattoes, the blacks were declared free.

In the phrensy of a mistaken philanthropy, the assembly of the nation were forming codes of laws for the government of what they blindly called regenerated colonies, and sending there commissioners. When Monsieur, then out of France, brother to Louis XVI., and at present Louis XVIII., wishing to save those sections that had not yet felt the regenerating laws of France, desired the British ministry to take possession of the French colonies, the planters of the western and southern parts of St. Domingo, imitating those of Martinique and Guadeloupe, received the British. A part of that rich colony was thereby saved for a time; and both Touissant and Rigaud, two colored chieftains, fighting for power on the supposed side of France, were on the eve of being conquered, when the island was suddenly evacuated by the English.

The policy of this unexpected evacuation is easily accounted for. The English General, Boyer, on his entering Port au Prince, had written to the ministry that more colonial produce had been found stored in that single city than the whole of the British islands could produce in two years; and had urged the policy of securing the whole colony as a rich mine of wealth which the nation would enjoy, at least, for as long as the war with France should continue.

But the success of the French armies in Europe alarmed the British ministry;* they well knew that a general peace must at some time or other take place, and on such an event St. Domingo must, of course, be restored to France. They could not reconcile with their hostile feelings the idea of being instrumental to the preservation of a colony which, on its being restored, would at once replace her rival on that superior eminence in the colonial trade which she once enjoyed, and which it was their policy forever to destroy. Therefore, they resolved to evacuate that island as the surest means of effecting their purposes; General Maitland was sent thither; he made separate secret treaties with the two chieftains; some sham battles were fought; and the British troops apparently beaten and repulsed in every encounter, without losing a drop of blood, surrendered the colony to the party-colored legions of Toussaint and Rigaud. But they took considerable care to carry off with them a number of planters, with their slaves, to cultivate coffee in their colonies, and principally in Jamaica, where they had as yet been very unsuccessful.

This plantation was by this means cultivated there on a large scale; several planters were carried to Trinidad and other small British islands; and England now receives from Jamaica alone upwards of fifty millions of pounds of coffee per year. Such planters as did not like to live under the British sceptre and colonial regulations, went over to Cuba, and some to Porto Rico.

Thus is coffee now cultivated in all the West Indies. Yet the whole of those islands together, and the present state of Hayti united with them, hardly yield one-half of the quantity which St. Domingo alone formerly produced. This explains the cause of the present high price of that staple. The quantity now raised is fifty per cent. less than in the year 1784, and the number of consumers have increased in the ratio of five to one.

We have seen that coffee is at this day successfully cultivated where it was thought it could not grow: it now remains to be seen if East Florida is not likewise favorable to its growth.

This plant needs not too hot a climate; dry land produces the best quality; as, for example, the Mocha coffee in Arabia Felix, where rain is scarce and the soil sandy, is esteemed very superior. The small size of the grain, and its rounded form, indicate that the land on which it grows is exhausted, and that the plant bears only a scanty quantity. In a virgin and rich land this plant bears large crops; the grain is bigger, and flatted on one side; so that two grains united have an oval form, which lies in the centre, as the stone of the cherry, a fruit which it perfectly resembles in size, shape, and color.

On the iron-bound coasts of Hispaniola, Jamaica, Cuba, &c., this plant, as in Arabia Felix, bears even in virgin land, but middling crops; on the high land, and on eastern, western, and northern expositions, it bears plentifully, because the atmosphere is there colder, the dew in the night constant, and sometimes a light white frost occurs.

In East Florida the land is neither too dry nor too wet, nor is the climate too hot or too cold. This narrow neck of land being washed by the sea on the south, east, and west, possesses all the advantages which an island enjoys; the sea breezes modifying the scorching vertical rays of the sun, and wafting away the approaching northern frost.

Two opposite opinions have been expressed and frequently repeated with respect to that country. Some assert it to be a dry, sandy land, and others a flat, muddy, unformed rising ground. These assertions are altogether unfounded, as may be demonstrated by merely recurring to its topography. We see a neck of land four hundred miles long, and about one hundred and thirty miles broad, from the opposite beaches of which the land rises gently and gradually towards the centre; where are lakes connected with each other from south to north, to a distance of about one hundred and fifty miles, without receiving any supply of water from any large foreign river; and about forty small rivers, whose sources are at from thirty to forty miles distant from both shores, and whose waters are emptying themselves into the opposite seas. Now, it is impossible for those great sinews of nature to exist in a flat, muddy ground, which could at most produce reeds, and not the stately trees which luxuriantly grow and cover its surface. On the other hand, if it be called a dry, sandy desert, the very existence of those lakes and numerous rivers, belies those assertions, for rivers and lakes are never found to spring and exist in an entirely sandy country; and such is the narrowness of this long neck of land, that it must have a deep mould and prolific bosom to produce, as it is known to do, stately forests of the most luxuriant mixture, which are constantly in bloom even in January and February; and the most beautiful flowers, whose florid appearance made the discoverers of it award to that country the significant and appropriate name of Florida.

In all places where the climate is not visited by black frost, the land, either dry or wet, will produce coffee. Cayenne, lying under the fourth degree of latitude north of the equator, where the heat is intense, no mountains but at five hundred miles off, a flat, level, and drowned country, and where, as in European Holland, the surrounding seas are striving to overwhelm the rising earth—even in this swampy country, drained by ditches as reservoirs for the water, the coffee plant grows luxuriantly even to the size of a plum tree.†

At Rio de Janeiro, the present seat of the King of Portugal's American empire, lying under the twenty-third degree of latitude south of the equator, and as far as the province of Parana or Assumption, which reaches the thirtieth degree of south latitude, the coffee is found to grow. Why, then, should we not cultivate it between the twenty-fifth and twenty-seventh degrees of north latitude? that is to say, in East Florida. Will it be said that

* Bonaparte had then conquered the whole of Italy, and was about sailing for Egypt: Moreau had silenced the northern Powers; and Holland had, by the precipitate flight of the Duke of York, become a sister republic of France. At this time continental Europe had sued for peace.

† In the West Indies this plant would grow to the height of ten feet. Experience has shown the advantage of limiting its height at four feet, by which means the branches, from the earth up, expand, and the plant acquires a stronger body, which, in consequence of its low height, is sheltered from the ravages of hurricane, or the too heavy load of its fruits.

under the twenty-seventh degree of latitude to the southward of the equator it is hotter than under its opposite degree north of it? This will be contradicted by those navigators and persons who have visited that country. Canton, in China, lies under the twenty-second and a half degree of north latitude, and is the southernmost section of that large empire. The States north of East Florida already produce as fine cotton as is raised in that empire. Why should we not also attempt to cultivate the tea plant? I do not understand this culture. Information on this interesting subject is expected from those American citizens who, on a visit to China, shall not suffer their minds to be wrapt in a piece of nankin, or sunk into a catty of tea, but, soaring above their daily mercantile occupations, will seek for rest and diversion in the acquisition of information, and the collection of plants, for the benefit of their native country. I shall close this digression by adducing some new evidences. In a proclamation of George III., issued from the Court of St. James, on the 7th day of October, 1763, and by the authority of a treaty of peace concluded at Paris on the 10th day of February in the same year, His Britannic Majesty, in the second section of his proclamation, expressed himself thus:

"Secondly. The Government of East Florida, bounded to the westward by the Gulf of Mexico and the Apalachicola river; to the northward by a line drawn from that part of the said river where the Chattahoochie and Flint rivers meet, to the source of St. Mary's river, and by the course of said river, to the Atlantic Ocean; and to the eastward and southward by the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Florida, including all islands within six leagues of the sea-coast."

This Government being given to Colonel Grant, it was then expected that "rice, indigo, silk, wine, oil, and other valuable commodities, would be produced in great abundance." The English, at that time, knew little or nothing about coffee;* hence they did not mention it in their enumeration. Some time after, an English gentleman of fortune went to establish himself in East Florida. His labors were crowned with success both in the culture of coffee and sugar canes; and his establishments were already considerable, when the American revolution, in its effects, made Florida pass into the hands of Spain. The British Government, finding Mr. Smith, or some such name, (for, although this is an historical fact, yet, not having the book in which it is stated before me, my memory has not, perhaps, retained the true name,) had so far succeeded, would not allow him to remain there. They carried him off with his slaves, and destroyed every thing he had planted; for which loss and damages the British Government awarded to him a considerable sum. Besides these, travellers, who have visited that country, assert to have seen coffee plants in several places, not cultivated for profit and revenue, but as a curiosity, the intrinsic value of which seems to be unknown to those who have planted them.

Mr. Carver† says, "that so mild is the winter that the most delicate vegetables and plants of the Caribbee islands experience there not the least injury from that season; the orange tree, the plaintains, the goyava, the pineapple, &c. grow luxuriously." "Fogs are unknown there, and no country can, therefore, be more salubrious." Mr. William Stork, in his description of East Florida, gives the following account of it: "The production of the northern and southern latitudes grow and blossom by the side of each other, and there is scarcely another climate in the world that can vie with this in displaying such an agreeable and luxuriant mixture of trees, plants, shrubs, and flowers. The red and white pine and the evergreen oak marry their boughs with the chesnut and mahogany trees: the walnut with the cherry; the maple with the campeach, and the braziletto with the sassafras tree, which, together, cover here a variegated and rich soil." "The wax myrtle tree grows everywhere here." "Oranges are larger, more aromatic and succulent, than in Portugal. Plums naturally grow finer and of a quality superior to those gathered in the orchards in Spain. The wild vines serpentine on the ground, or climb up to the tops of trees. Indigo and cochineal‡ were advantageously cultivated there, and, in the year 1777, produced a revenue of 200,000 dollars."§ In fine, I shall add that this country will produce all the tropical fruits and staples by the side of those belonging to a northern climate.

Having, I presume, adduced sufficient evidence in support of the position I have taken, and demonstrated that coffee, cocoa, and sugar canes, will grow every where in East Florida, as well as vines, olives, capers, almonds, &c., and that vines may likewise be successfully cultivated as far north as the Patuxent, in Maryland, I shall now take a separate view of each of these rich productions, and, from accurate knowledge, give a statement of the proceeds of man's yearly labor. In this statement, I shall allow but one-half of the work which experience shows a man easily does;|| and these moderate calculations being at no time liable to deceive our expectations, we may, with more certainty, form a proper estimate of the advantages or disadvantages of those cultures, and whether we are not to be benefited, both as individuals and as a nation, by immediately undertaking the grand work, or leave all the riches accruing from it to those who already enjoy them.

It cannot be expected that I shall enter into the particulars and minutiae of the culture and preparations of those commodities. My intention, at present, is not to teach, but to enlighten the mind on a subject foreign to the present agricultural pursuits of our citizens. A work, describing every particular, would, at this stage, excite curiosity, without promising any real advantages. Such a work I shall cheerfully undertake when I see that spirit of enterprise which characterizes the American people roused and elevated to that degree of national pride and grandeur as shall warrant its publication.

First statement on coffee.—One acre of land planted by ranges, and the plants at five feet distant from each other, gives one thousand seven hundred and sixty-four plants. A man can take care of two acres, which gives three thousand five hundred and twenty-eight plants. Each plant may, by an average, yield two pounds or more; but I reduce it to one pound: therefore, a man will give, yearly, three thousand five hundred and twenty-eight pounds of coffee, which at twenty-five cents produces $882.

* At this period coffee had not yet been cultivated in the island of Jamaica, as is proved by a representation made about the year 1770 to the Court of St. James by the planters and merchants residing in that island, and comprehended in seven chief grievances, the seventh of which I subjoin here.

"That cocoa, or chocolate nut, which was heretofore one of the principal commodities of this island, is now lost by the heavy duties that are laid upon it; and probably our sugar, rum, ginger, &c. must have the same fate if not timely remedied. And, as we have just now begun to plant coffee, we hope for a bounty to encourage that plantation on our sending it to England; at least that that there might be no duties laid upon it."

† Universal Traveller, page 604.

‡ I do not understand the raising of it, which is immensely productive, but I know that the neighborhood of Pensacola is the place where it will produce much.

§ In the year 1804, I was cast upon the southernmost point of East Florida, and although it was in the month of February, I beheld that country covered with green trees and flowers, the image of an everlasting spring.

|| Coffee—2 acres to each man. There is no tilling or hoeing; the only labor is to prevent grass from growing between the plants, and the picking up of the fruits, which is the most laborious; otherwise, a man could easily take care of five acres of land. Cocoa—4 acres to each man. There is no culture whatever; the labor is in cutting off the nuts and drying the fruits.

Vine—5 acres to each man. Which are to be ploughed three times a year. In cutting off the fruits, or vintage time, additional hands are necessary.

Olives, capers, almonds, need no culture; hands are necessary only to get the crops in, and extract the oils.

It is to be observed, that no crop is to be expected on the first and second year; on the third year the plant yields a good crop, on the fourth an abundant one, which it will continue to yield every year until the ground is exhausted and the plant dies. For the two first years of the planting, all kinds of vegetables and corn may be planted between the ranges; they will yield two crops in one year; cotton is not to be planted between the ranges.

Second statement on cocoa.—Four acres of land planted in rows, and the trees at ten feet distant from each other, give one thousand seven hundred and sixty-four trees. A man is capable of taking care of them, and of gathering the nuts. At seven years of age, each tree will yield two pounds, and the quantity will increase with its age: therefore, a man will gather three thousand five hundred and twenty-eight pounds of cocoa, which, at fifteen cents per pound, will produce $529 20.

This cultivation, differing from all others, requires some illustrations. It was formerly thought that its culture required much labor and a virgin soil; but experience has shown that it grows on land half exhausted by the coffee plant, and in less than twelve years' time acquires such power as to destroy the coffee underneath. Hence, it is now planted between the ranges of coffee, when this last is about seven years of age; so that when the land would otherwise become a mere waste, requiring a hundred years for forests to rise on it again ere it could recover its first fruitfulness, the same land being again covered by a new forest of productive trees, the fruits of which growing and maturing all the year round, each day brings in its crop. I could not select a more proper place to state, that it seems that Providence, in its wise dispensations, intended the cocoa tree should be the means of quickly renewing the soil exhausted by other productions. It is a fact known to myself alone, at this moment, because he who made the successful experiment, Mr. Berlie, and those who were eye-witnesses to it, were, by the bloody effects of St. Domingo's regenerating system, doomed to an untimely grave, and I am the only survivor. The fact is this: Mr. Berlie, a planter on the high land of Donna Maria, had planted, after the coffee had exhausted his land, the whole of his estates with cocoa trees. This answered well; but as coffee became more productive, he thought of making an experiment—which was to cut down twenty acres of cocoa trees, setting them on fire in the same manner as is done in clearing new land, and planting them again with coffee; it was found that coffee grew more beautifully than it had done before: The cocoa trees, when cut down, were twenty-five years old.

The extraordinary effects of the cocoa tree, in regenerating the ground upon which it grows, may easily be accounted for. This tree seldom attains higher than fifteen feet: it is branchy, its leaves very large, and the body, or stock, of a middling size; the leaves continually falling off the tree, whilst new ones grow, cover the earth with a thick bed of leaves, which allow not even a blade of grass to grow with them. Hence, the ground requires no culture, and the trees but a light pruning, when any ravages have been caused by some storm. This constant thick bed of leaves returns to the earth five times more nutriment than the diminutive size of the tree requires from it, and in less than thirty years it brings the soil back to its original fertile state.

Third statement on vines.

Having given the proceeds of a man's yearly labor in the plantation of coffee and cocoa, I shall now quit Florida, and enter the territory of the United States.

An acre of land planted with vines, allowing 41 ranges at five feet distant, and to each range 104 vines at two feet apart, gives 4,264 vines to an acre. Five acres for a man's labor give 21,320 vines; and, allowing the grapes of ten vines to yield one gallon of wine, it will produce 2,132 gallons, which, being rated at the low price of 30 cents per gallon, will produce $639 60 for a man's yearly labor.

This plantation is the most beautiful and luxuriant in nature; for nothing can equal the fascinating sight of a well cultivated vineyard. And as olives, capers, and almond trees require no particular culture, they may be planted in ranges, at thirty feet distant, in the vineyard, where the mildness of the climate allows the plantation. In Georgia and Alabama these four productions may be raised on the same soil. In a more northern climate the vines must be cultivated separately. So much may be said on this very interesting subject, that it would require more time than I have resolved to bestow on it at present. I shall only add, that it offers an inexhaustible source of private and national wealth, because these plantations may be made to last for ages.

Fourth statement on vines, olives, capers, and almonds, planted on the same ground.

Five acres in vines produce, as before stated, for a man's yearly labor,	-	-	-	$639 30

25 caper do.
70	Yearly proceeds of a man's labor,	-	-	- $1,006 80

Review of the above.

I shall now suppose that, in the course of thirty years, we may employ 50,000 persons in the culture of vines singly; they will cultivate 250,000 acres of land, which will yield an annual revenue of - $31,965,000

Fifty thousand persons in the culture of vines, olives, almonds, and capers, on 250,000 acres of land, will yield an annual revenue of - 50,340,000

Total, - - - $82,305,000

Cocoa.—Fifty thousand persons engaged in the culture of cocoa, will cultivate 200,000 acres of land, which will yield an annual revenue of $26,420,000.

Coffee.—One hundred thousand persons engaged in the culture of coffee, will cultivate 200,000 acres of land, which will yield an annual revenue of $88,200,000.

Recapitulation of the preceding estimates:

100,000 persons cultivating 500,000 acres in vines, olives, &c. produce,	-	-	-	$82,305,000
50,000 persons cultivating 200,000 acres of cocoa,	-	-	-	26,420,000
100,000 persons cultivating 200,000 acres of coffee,	-	-	-	88,200,000
250,000 persons cultivating 900,000 acres produce	-	-	-	$196,925,000

The home consumption of this country may be estimated to be annually about, viz:				Leaving an immense surplus for exportation to foreign countries, of
Wines, olives, &c.	-	-	$17,305,000	Wines, olives, &c.	-	-	$65,000,000
Cocoa, &c.	-	-	6,420,000	Cocoa, -	-	-	20,000,000
Coffee,	-	-	13,200,000	Coffee, -	-	-	75,000,000
Home consumption, - - - $36,925,000				Exportation, - - - $160,000,000

It will then become a matter of policy for the Federal Government to change the existing fiscal laws and regulations with respect to those staples of exports. The citizens paying no longer any duties in those articles, which now form the principal revenue of the National Government, duties on their exportations must, of course, be recurred to. The estimate of which, might, perhaps, give the following:

Fiscal duties—Which I value at an average of fifteen per cwt. It neither becomes me, nor does it enter into my plan, to trace scales of proportions on matters which must be left to the wisdom of Congress; and in forming that average, I merely have in view to ascertain the probable results of my recapitulation and statement of surpluses; and I find the annual receipts in the several custom-houses would amount to $24,000,000.

There is no reason whatever that can prevent us from employing, in those several cultures, at least five hundred thousand persons on eighteen hundred thousand acres of land, which would yield an annual income of $393,850,000.

And supposing that, on account of our immense produce, we lowered the prices in all the markets in the world even one-third of the low prices at which I have valued them, yet the labors of five hundred thousand working men would give annually the sum of $262,566,667.

Considerations of such vast importance are not to be overlooked. We have but to begin the work, and before thirty years are elapsed more than five hundred thousand European emigrants will be seen crossing the Atlantic ocean to unite their labors and industry with ours; and, every thing concurring to increase our wealth, power and commerce, and the Almighty making even the tyrants of Europe subservient to our grandeur, we shall then be the most powerful, as we now are the freest and happiest nation on the globe.

I need not, I think, add any thing to what I have already said on the importance of the acquisition of East Florida. The simple statements I have given, and it being the only land adjoining the territory of the United States where coffee and cocoa will grow, is sufficiently interesting to excite a laudable desire of seeing it pass into our possession; however, we must be contented with waiting patiently for the final decision of Congress.

To form an accurate estimate of the value set upon those rich productions, we need but peruse the modern history of the nations of Europe. The whole of Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Prussia, Russia, Poland, and Turkey, may be set in a flame by wars, as in the time of Charles the 12th of Sweden, and yet navigators will nowhere meet with war on the seas; but the moment that France or Spain gets into disagreements with any of the nations of continental Europe, not only is that section of the world kindled with flame and deluged in blood, but the seas around the globe witness scenes of horror and carnage. And why? Because the present object of warfare is no longer what it formerly was. The acquisition of one or more provinces in Europe cannot move England; but she sets the world on fire to sell her manufactured goods, monopolize commerce, and obtain possession of the French, Spanish, and Dutch colonies. These she values more than kingdoms, although she feigns to fight only for the balance of power. Immediately after the peace of 1801, the French Government sent armies to recover St. Domingo; the rebels must have submitted; the British ministry calculated the future consequences of such a submission, and Malta, a rocky island, not worth a shilling in agriculture, suddenly became a pretence for the bloody and long war that ensued. France lost St. Domingo and the island of France, and Holland the Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, &c.* Thus Europe has fought thousands of battles, and slaughtered six millions of victims on the altar of avarice and commercial monopoly!

Spain, who, for many centuries, has been pursuing the most absurd policy, by discouraging agriculture to foster the working of her silver and gold mines; who has left uncultivated the most fertile land on the face of the earth, and made of her formerly active citizens the most indolent people in the world, is now endeavoring to repair the ruins caused by so blind a policy. Puerto Rico and Cuba are now thought capable of producing ten thousand times more riches than all the mines of Peru. The greatest efforts are at this moment making by that regenerated Government to place those two islands in a high state of cultivation; emigrants are encouraged free of expense; thirty-three acres of land are given to each individual; they are fed during the six months immediately following their arrival, and furnished with every necessary tool and instrument of agriculture; they are, besides, free from all kinds of taxes for the space of ten years; and, to such as wish to purchase land, the Government sell three hundred and thirty acres for $450, on credit of five years, without paying any interest; after which an interest of six per cent. is required until perfect liquidation of the whole debt. This enlightened and liberal policy would, in less than ten years, triple the actual revenue of those islands, were it possible to establish a mutual confidence between the Spaniards and strangers;† a confidence which has so many times proved deceptive on the side of the Spaniards, and ruinous for the industrious strangers among them.

A Government founded as ours is, on the most liberal principles of political economy, whose very existence is a seal that secures the happiness and liberty of the least of its members, whose policy is to increase the wealth of the nation, and whose Chief Magistrate is, as it were, placed on a high tower to direct the uncertain steps of the enterprising patriots, and the inexperienced labors of the citizens, must, more than any other Government, feel interested in promoting the culture of whatever staples are found capable of increasing the prosperity and commerce of the country. I fondly cherish the hope that Government will eagerly encourage the culture of the productions I have already enumerated. Congress need, I presume, in those things for which they have not had any opportunity of acquiring practical knowledge, but to be made acquainted with the importance of those plantations, by those whose long experience enables them to communicate these useful facts. As one of the very few in the

* The British Government, notwithstanding the immense profits accruing to the nation from the rich commodities and staples produced by its colonies, look upon them as if they were mere marts for the sales of its manufactured goods, or stations for its numerous ships of war. The virtuous pursuit of agriculture, (out of the limits of England,) is cramped in all its efforts for the purpose of giving employment to the corrupted rabble of its manufacturing cities; to enrich ship-builders and ship owners; to protect privileged companies of monopolists; to oppress the industrious artisans; to drain the purse of the affluent, and multiply the number of paupers. Hence, the interests of the colonies have seldom been attended to. Their colonial system is so bad that it seems to have been framed by an avaricious company of ship owners, whose chief object was to force the growers of sugar and coffee to load their ships, and pay them a heavy freight. A grower of coffee is oppressed by the existing colonial system, and the Crown again oppresses the consumer; for no man in England can roast his coffee as he pleases; he must buy it from a monopolist.

† This new colony of Fernandina de Xagua is not likely to succeed, although upwards of two thousand emigrants have already repaired there. I know the person who acts there as a chief for the Spanish Government, and know, also, that his exactions will ultimately ruin that establishment.

United States qualified to discharge this important duty, and being acted upon by those mighty considerations which work so powerfully on the heart of a true citizen, I respectfully submit, for the consideration of the President, the Senate, and House of Representatives of the United States, the outlines of a project for effectually encouraging the plantations of vines, olives, capers, almonds, coffee, cocoa, &c.

The first preliminary steps to be taken, in order to carry the proposed plan into execution, must be the securing of East Florida, the southern part of which may be planted in coffee and cocoa, and is, in fact, worth twenty times more than the swampy land claimed by the United States west of New Orleans.

This being obtained, several considerations of a primary nature offer themselves to the mind; for, although every citizen is free to choose his culture, yet it is not in the power of every one wishing to cultivate those rich plants to procure them at the moment they are wanted. Hence, when citizens are left without a helping hand, discouragement ensues, and what may be effected in three years by the fostering hand of Government, may require a century when left to the discretion and impotence of inexperienced individuals. They must be guided; they must be taught; they must have a place where they will apply for plants, and also to acquire that information which no book can give; they must be dissuaded from cultivating the aboriginal grapes, which, though they might prove of an excellent quality, are not worth the trouble of a trial; because, however productive they might be found in the end, yet it would require more than forty years culture before they could attain that delicacy of softness and perfection which ages of culture and care alone can give. The Government, by means of its numerous consuls, may procure the first qualities of plants and seeds: from France and Italy the best qualities of vines, olives, figs, capers, and almonds; from Madeira and Portugal their spirituous and astringent vines; from Samos, Chio, Candia, and Cyprus, their sweet, delicate, and restorative cordial vines. There is a great analogy between men and plants. Man must be subdued by the slow progress of knowledge to the rule of civilization ere he attains that superiority of intellect and spiritual ideas which bespeaks him to be a being inferior to God alone; plants obtain their perfection only in proportion as man improves his mental powers, and labors to raise them to the height of his intellectual faculties. Five ages have passed away, and yet the man who inhabited the soil we at this day tread on is still a fugitive in the deserts; all our efforts to overtake him, and make him a civilized man, have proved fruitless; he prefers death to civilization; he flies off, avoids our meeting, and, before long, it will be said, "here were once innumerable nations of warriors that have evanished away"—a disappearance that will confound the sagacity of future philosophers, because they will know man only in his civilized state, and shall no where find that being in the simple state of nature.

I beg to be excused for these fugitive ideas; they have forced themselves on my pen. I resume my subject. From Cuba, in less than twenty-four hours, we may receive as many coffee seeds as we want; from the western part of St. Domingo, say Donna Maria, or from the Spanish Main, in the province of Venezuela, say Caraccas and Maracaibo, we may obtain the nuts that will afford the necessary seeds.

These preliminary remarks bring me to the conclusion, which I shall improve by humbly offering to Congress a plan for effectually encouraging the plantation of the forementioned valuable staples.

1st. That it is requisite for Congress to allot one thousand acres of land, to be selected by a proper judge, for the purpose of establishing a grand national nursery of those rich plants.

2d. That it is of the utmost national urgency that, under the superintendence of the President of the United States, this establishment should be instantly commenced, and that the President should select such person or persons as shall have given undoubted proofs of their qualifications, to conduct and superintend the establishment.

3d. That, to the end of immediately enabling this establishment to furnish the citizens with the necessary plants, fifty thousand dollars ought to be appropriated for the perfect and quick execution of the object in view.

4th. That the President of the United States be authorized to appoint a proper person to go as agent to Europe, to select those plants and species of vines that are known to be most productive, both for quality and quantity; or, otherwise, to empower the consuls in those several countries to procure and forward the plants and seeds requested, and to make a necessary distinction of species in the several plants, in order that none but the very best should be introduced into America.

5th. That as coffee will, three years after it is planted, cocoa five years, vines four years, olives, capers, and almonds, seven years, produce sufficient seeds and vines to supply every demand, these should, on the first reception of the several plants and seeds, be cultivated in the establishment on a large scale, with a view, first, to multiply the plants and seeds, and to increase the nursery, which may also be commenced immediately. 2d. To form a school for the culture and management of those plants, where every citizen should have the privilege of repairing, to acquire those informations and practical knowledge that no book extant can give.

6th. That, with a view to discountenance idle demands, and thereby prevent the wanton waste of these plants, a thing which would frequently happen if they were given gratis, the chief director, acting as superintendent of the establishment, should be authorized to sell them to individuals at the following rate:

Coffee plants two cents a piece, cocoa plants three cents a piece, vine plants three cents a piece, vines one cent a piece, olive plants one hundred cents a piece, capers and almonds seventy-five cents a piece; which would yield a revenue which, in six years, would repay the Government the fifty thousand expended in the establishment, and leave a benefit of upwards of one hundred thousand dollars.

On the seventh year the demands for coffee and cocoa plants will begin to decrease, because they will be procured from every individual who shall have already planted them. For ten years and more the vine plants and vines will be in great demand, when they will decrease; and the olive, caper, and almond plants will, for twenty-five years longer, continue in great demand, when the establishment, as a nursery, will cease to be productive in this high degree.

Thus, having afforded the means of planting the best species of vines in the world, we may, ere ten years have elapsed, produce wines equal in quality to any in the world, a quality which will vary according to the climate and soil where they may happen to be cultivated. It is a general, and yet a very wrong impression, to think that vines will grow only on such and such soil. Vines grow even on the worst land and steepest hills and mountains, in cold and hot climates. Hence proceeds the great difference in qualities. On clay and very poor land, such that no other productions can grow, is made those common wines which, being unfit for exportation, are distilled into brandy; for it requires seven casks, or four hundred and twenty gallons of wine, to get a pipe of brandy of ninety gallons.

What I have stated in the preceding sheets will exhibit, in a strong point of view, the importance of establishing a national nursery in order to promote, foster, and effectually afford the means of successfully cultivating, on a large scale, these highly rich productions, which, in less than twenty-five years, will double the actual revenue of the country, create new and inexhaustible resources, invigorate commerce, and render it at all times flourishing, by the exportation to foreign countries of our vast surpluses.

Considerations of such magnitude as these will, I have no doubt, operate powerfully on the minds of our legislators, whose honorable mission is to mature plans, form schemes, and ensure, by wise laws, the happiness, prosperity, and glory of our country; and, if it be not considered a departure from that reverence which a private citizen owes to the Chief Magistrate and representatives of a whole people, to dare impart to them ideas on subjects till now foreign to the sphere of their legislative labors, I hope that I shall not be thought too presuming to approach them with diffidence and respect, and entreat them to grant a moment's attention to the contents of these sheets. Should they prove worthy of those to whom they are respectfully submitted, I shall esteem myself honored for having thus far been instrumental to the increase of the wealth of the nation, and contributed a share in her welfare and prosperity.

PETER STEPHEN CHAZOTTE.

No. 2.

Sir:

WASHINGTON, January 18, 1821.

I have read, with much interest, your pamphlet on the policy of introducing the culture of coffee, cocoa, vines, olives, capers, almonds, &c., in East Florida, and in the United States. It has been presented, with your letter of the 15th instant, to the House of Representatives, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture. Thomas Forrest, of Germantown, one of your Representatives, is chairman of the committee. Mr. Clagett, of New Hampshire, Meech, of Vermont, Richmond, of New York, Ringgold, of Maryland, Garnett, of Virginia, and Earle, of South Carolina, are members of the committee.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN W. TAYLOR.

Mr. PETER STEPHEN CHAZOTTE.

The Committee on Agriculture, to whom were referred the letter of Peter Stephen Chazotte, and the accompanying pamphlet, containing certain tracts and observations on the culture of the vine, olives, capers, almonds, &c. &c., in the Southern States and in East Florida, report:

That they have given the subject, as far as circumstances will admit, a fair and deliberate consideration; the result of which is, that, as the culture of the various plants therein specified are, in their nature, such as to require different southern climates and treatments, and as the greatest portion of these are contemplated for the latitude and climate of East Florida, the cession of which to the United States has been but recently announced, and its possession not yet acquired; and as the session of this House is so near its close, and so much important public business to be done, as entirely to preclude the expectation of being able to digest and mature a plan sufficiently adapted to the magnitude of the object contemplated in the laudable and praiseworthy designs of the enterprising and patriotic Peter Stephen Chazotte: therefore, the committee recommend to him to apply to those States, whose soil and climate are adapted to the products which it is his object to introduce, to appropriate and set apart a few acres of ground in each State, respectively, for the purpose of establishing a nursery for growing young plants, to carry into execution the views of the said Peter Stephen Chazotte for accomplishing the great national means of increasing the staples of the southern country.

Therefore, resolved, That the petition of the said Peter Stephen Chazotte, with the documents, be laid over to the next Congress.

No. 3.

United States to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

The bearer hereof, Peter Stephen Chazotte, being about to visit and explore the southern parts of East Florida with a view to meritorious and laudable purposes, these are, therefore, to request all whom it may concern to permit the said Peter S. Chazotte to pass freely and without molestation; and particularly all persons in authority under the United States to afford him such convenient aid as it may be in their power to render, without expense to the Government, towards facilitating the object of his journey.

In faith whereof, I have caused the seal of the Department of State for the United States to be hereunto affixed. Done at the city of Washington, this 26th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1821, and of the independence of these States the forty-fifth.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Secretary of State.

Peter Stephen Chazotte, Esq., having this day, July 19, 1821, at the city of St. Augustine, presented the within passport from the Secretary of State, I do, by authority vested in me by General Andrew Jackson, Governor of the Floridas, require all officers, civil and military, within the province of East Florida, to observe the spirit and meaning of the letter as expressed by the Honorable John Quincy Adams, Secretary of State of the United States.

JOHN R. BELL, Captain Commandant, and Prov. Sec. of East Florida.

EAST FLORIDA COFFEE LAND ASSOCIATION.

Preliminary articles.

Know all men by these presents that we, the subscribers, having, under the management and direction of Peter Stephen Chazotte, been called upon by public notice to form an association with him for the purpose of purchasing from the United States, under special grants by Congress, the quantity of twenty-four thousand acres of land in East Florida, below the twenty-seventh degree of latitude, suited for the cultivation of coffee, cocoa, sugar, indigo, vines, olives, &c., do, by these presents, agree and covenant, each for himself, in proportion to his respective subscription, to the following preliminary articles of association.

ART. I. The present association shall be known and distinguished by the name and appellation of the East Florida Coffee Land Association.

ART. II. The affairs of the association shall, for the present, be under the direction of a committee of superintendence consisting of five members, to be chosen by the subscribers. There shall be a treasurer, chosen in like manner, whose duty it shall be to receive the money subscribed, to have charge of all the funds of the association, and to keep regular accounts of his receipts and expenditures, which shall always be open to the inspection of any member. He shall issue to each subscriber a receipt in the following form:

Received, Philadelphia, — of A. B. — dollars upon — shares in the East Florida Coffee Land Association, and which payment entitles — or — legal representative to all the privileges and benefits of — shares in said association, agreeably to the preliminary articles of the same.

C. B., Treasurer.

The expenses of the association shall be defrayed out of the funds thereof, and shall be paid by orders drawn on the treasurer, and signed by the committee of superintendence, or a majority of the same.

ART. III. With a view to explore the country, select the ground, &c., Mr. P. S. Chazotte, accompanied by six laboring men and five volunteers, including a surveyor and doctor, shall immediately set out for East Florida in a vessel to be chartered for that purpose, and, after having explored the country, shall fix upon the best tract of land, not previously occupied, at a convenient distance from the sea or a navigable river; combining fertility of soil and salubrity of climate, and of an extent sufficient to embrace the plans and objects of the association.

ART. IV. And with a view further to accomplish the designs of the society, Mr. P. S. Chazotte shall order or accompany the vessel which is to be chartered to any port in the island of Cuba, there to obtain, by gift or purchase, the plants and seeds necessary to form a tropical produce nursery, and shall then immediately return to the spot selected by him, and there form a settlement, and use every exertion to ascertain by actual experiment, whether the climate and soil are adapted to the successful cultivation of the articles named.

ART. V. If the said P. S. Chazotte shall succeed in forming such an establishment, and shall meet with a body of land of proper quantity and situation, the surveyor shall proceed to survey and ascertain their boundaries and contents, in order that they may be as accurately defined as possible in the application to be made to Congress for the grant or purchase of the same.

ART. VI. Each subscriber to be interested in the grants or purchase of Congress in proportion to his original subscription to these articles—a payment of ten dollars constituting one share; it being understood that the subscriptions shall be limited to two hundred shares of one hundred acres each, the remaining four thousand acres being reserved for the use of the company, and the donations hereafter provided for; and no subscriber to be made liable by his present subscription for more than the ten dollars per share now paid.

ART. VII. If grants or purchases are finally made by, or from Congress, for the use of the association, it is agreed to convey to the said Peter Stephen Chazotte, as his entire compensation for his services, attention, and labor, in commencing and completing the objects of the association, a quantity of land equal to a United States' section of six hundred and forty acres, together with a like interest or proportion in the reserved land; and to each of the volunteers who shall accompany the expedition, and remain attached to it until it is accomplished, one hundred acres; and to each of the laborers, who may remain and take charge of the nursery until grants are obtained from Congress, twenty-five acres of land.

ART. VIII. P. S. Chazotte, having alone addressed Congress, and brought the association to its present state, having made many sacrifices, and spent much time in the pursuit of it, we agree and covenant to pay to him, or to his wife, out of the funds of this association, at the rate of fifty dollars per month during his absence on the expedition, provided the said allowance does not extend beyond the 1st day of November, 1821.

ART. IX. On the return of the expedition to Philadelphia, which is to be supposed may be in October or the beginning of November next, the members of the association shall be called together, and such other rules and regulations for its government shall be formed as may then appear necessary.

Signed, &c.

GRANTS TO THE UNITED BRETHREN IN TRUST FOR CERTAIN CHRISTIAN INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 5, 1822.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 4, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate, of the 22d ultimo, I have the honor to enclose a copy of a patent which issued under an act of Congress, passed on the 1st day of June, 1796, "conveying to the Society of United Brethren for propagating the Gospel among the Heathen, three tracts of land of four thousand acres each, to include the towns of Gnadenbutten, Schoenbrun, and Salem, on the Muskingum, in the State of Ohio, in trust, for the sole use of the Christian Indians formerly settled there."

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

Hon. JOHN GAILLARD, President of the Senate pro tempore.

JOHN ADAMS, President of the United States of America, to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Know ye, that, in pursuance of an act of the Congress of the United States, passed on the 1st day of June, 1796, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land appropriated for military services, and for the Society of United Brethren for propagating the Gospel among the Heathen," there is granted to the said society a tract or parcel of land lying on both sides of the Muskingum, containing four thousand acres, (within which tract is included the old and new towns of Schoenbrun,) and which is bounded and described as follows, to wit: beginning at the northwest corner, at a post by A, where a sugar-tree, ten inches diameter, bears north fifty-two degrees west, nineteen links distant, and a white oak, thirty inches diameter, bears north seventy-two degrees thirty minutes east, thirty-four links distant; thence, running south two miles seventy chains and eighty-three links to a post at D, where a hickory, eighteen inches diameter, bears north eleven degrees east, thirty-six links distant, and one other hickory, twenty inches diameter, bears south fifty-nine degrees east, twenty-nine links distant; thence east two miles and twenty chains to a post at C, where a white oak, eighteen inches diameter, bears north fifty-eight degrees west thirty-four links, and one other white oak, twenty inches diameter, bears north eighty-nine degrees east thirty-two links distant; thence north two miles seventy chains and eighty-three links to a post at B, where a poplar, ten inches diameter, bears north eighty-four degrees twenty minutes east, forty-five links distant, and a beach, seven inches diameter, bears north nine degrees west, thirteen links; thence two miles and twenty chains to the place of beginning. One other tract or parcel of land, lying on both sides of the Muskingum, containing four thousand acres, (within which tract is included the town of Gnadenbutten,) and which is bounded and described as follows, to wit: beginning at the northeast corner at a post by B, on the bank of the Muskingum, where a sugar-tree, eight inches diameter, bears south twenty-one degrees west, and is fifteen links distant, and one other sugar-tree, four inches diameter, bears south forty-seven degrees west, thirteen links distant; thence, running south two miles two chains and eleven links to a post at C, where a white oak, ten inches diameter, bears north seventeen degrees east, twenty links, and a chesnut, ten inches diameter, bears south fifty-six degrees east, twenty-two links; thence west three miles nine chains and nineteen links to a post at D, where a black oak, sixteen inches diameter, bears south thirteen degrees west, twenty-five links, one other black oak, fourteen inches diameter, bears north fifteen degrees west, twenty links; thence north two miles and ten chains to a post at A, where a white oak, thirty-five inches diameter, bears north thirty-six degrees west, thirty-five links, another white oak, sixteen inches diameter, bears south forty degrees east, eleven links; thence east one mile sixty-seven chains and fifty-five links to a sugar-tree, twelve inches diameter, in the line standing on the northwest bank of the Muskingum; thence east across the river to a post at E, on the southern bank, where a hickory, sixteen inches diameter, bears north five degrees west, and an elm, six inches diameter, bears south twenty-eight degrees east, thirty-six links; thence easterly, by the river, to the place of beginning. And one other tract or parcel of land lying on both sides the Muskingum, containing four thousand acres, (within which tract is included the town of Salem,) and which is bounded and described as follows, to wit: beginning at the northwest corner post at A, where a white oak, sixteen inches diameter, bears north twenty degrees east, ten links distant, and one other white oak, six inches diameter, bears south three degrees west, twenty-four links distant; thence running south three miles to a post at D, where a hoop-ash, six inches diameter, bears north eighty-four degrees east, twenty-four links, and one other hoop-ash, five inches diameter, bears thirty-four degrees east, fifteen links; thence east two miles thirteen chains and thirty links to a post at C, where a white oak, sixteen inches diameter, bears south twenty degrees west, twenty-eight links, and one other white oak, fourteen inches diameter, bears north thirty-six degrees east, thirteen links; thence north three miles to a post at B, where a black oak, eight inches diameter, bears north twenty-seven degrees thirty minutes west, one chain eleven links, one other black oak, nine inches diameter, bears south seventy-three degrees west, seventy-six links; thence west two miles thirteen chains and thirty links to the place of beginning.

To have and to hold the said three described tracts or parcels of land, with the appurtenances to the said Society of United Brethren for propagating the Gospel among the Heathen, and their successors forever, in trust for the sole use of the Christian Indians who were formerly settled there, or the remains of that society, including Killbuck and his descendants, and the nephew and descendants of the late Captain White Eyes, Delaware chiefs.

In testimony whereof, the said John Adams, President of the United States of America, hath caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed, and signed the same with his hand, at Philadelphia, the twenty-[L. S.] fourth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and in the twenty-second of the independence of the said States.

JOHN ADAMS.

[1st Session.]

NUMBER OF LAND OFFICES, AND THE ANNUAL EXPENSE OF EACH.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 15, 1822.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 13, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 25th of January last, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to report to the House "the number of land offices established, by law, in the different States and Territories, designating the number and location in each State and Territory; the annual expense to the nation of supporting said land offices; the amount of money received at each during the years 1820 and 1821; and the distance of the respective offices from each other; and whether, in his opinion, the public good requires the increase or diminution of said land offices, or any alteration in the location of the same; and, if any increase is required, in what State or Territory the same ought to be located," I have the honor to report that the statement, marked A, herewith submitted, shows the number of land offices established in the different States and Territories, and the number and location in each State and Territory. It also shows the quantity of land in each district; the quantity surveyed; the amount received; the quantity sold prior to the 1st October, 1821; and an estimate of the quantity remaining unsold on that day.

Statement, marked B, shows the relative distance between the several land offices established in the several States and Territories.

Statement, marked C, shows the amount of money received at the different land offices in the years 1820 and 1821, and the expense to the nation of supporting them during the same years, as far as returns have been received. The expense incurred by the Government in supporting land offices, consists, first, of an annual salary of $500 to each Receiver and Register; and, second, of a commission to each of those officers of one per cent. on the amount of money received at the land offices. There are at present thirty-four land districts; the annual amount of salaries paid by the Government is, therefore, $34,000. The establishment of additional land offices will increase the annual expense by the amount of the salaries which will be created by such increase; but will not increase the amount paid as commissions, unless the increase of districts should augment the sales of the public lands.

A considerable quantity of the land lately acquired from the Choctaw Indians, in the State of Mississippi, has been surveyed, and will be ready for sale in the course of the present year. The extent of this tract of land, and its geographical position in relation to the land districts already established in that State, does not admit of its being attached to either of the existing districts without great inconvenience to the persons who may be disposed to purchase. It is, therefore, believed that the public interest will be promoted by the establishment of another district in that State.

The districts of Edwardsville, Palestine, and Vandalia, in the State of Illinois, have no other limits on the north than the northern boundary of the State and the Indian boundary. A considerable quantity of the public lands, north of the places where the land offices of those districts are located, has been surveyed, and the whole of that tract of land extending from the eastern boundary of the Military Reservation to lake Michigan, comprehending twenty miles of the lake shore on both sides of Fort Chicago, is now ready for sale. It is, therefore, respectfully submitted that the public interest will be promoted by the establishment of an additional land district in the northeastern part of that State.

In the district of Jackson county, in the State of Alabama, there has been no sale of public lands, and it is probable that there is but a small quantity of land which is not covered by private claims that will be sold for many years. Unless it shall be deemed expedient to attach to this district a part of that west of Pearl river, and a portion of the lands recently acquired from the Choctaws, it is believed that the public interest will not be injuriously affected by its abolition.

In the district of St. Helena, in Louisiana, also, there has been no sales, and it is probable that the amount of sales at any period, not very distant, will scarcely justify the continuance of the offices of Receiver and Register at an expense of a thousand dollars a year. It is also presumed that the annexation of the district to that of New Orleans will not produce any serious inconvenience to those who may desire to purchase lands when they are offered for sale, as the intercourse of the inhabitants of the district with the city of New Orleans must be frequent and easy.

In the State of Ohio some of the districts are small, and the quantity of land for sale still smaller; but the offices in those districts are located in towns to which the inhabitants habitually resort for the purposes of trade. To consolidate any two or more of them would produce inconvenience, subject the purchasers of public lands to a greater expense and loss of time than that to which they have been hitherto accustomed, and probably excite dissatisfaction.

The offices in some of the districts lately established in Ohio and Indiana are established at places without the limits of those districts. This is, in many cases, expedient at the opening of the land offices; but after a considerable portion of the lands in those districts have been offered for sale, and settlements have been formed, the offices ought to be located within the districts for which they have been severally established. A general provision, directing the offices to be located at some place near the centre of each district, as soon as the state of the district would admit of it, is believed to be expedient.

I have the honor to be, &c.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

HON. PHILIP P. BARBOUR, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

17th CONGRESS.]

No. 356.

[1st SESSION.]

PATENTS AND WARRANTS ISSUED TO THE OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS OF THE VIRGINIA LINE WHO SERVED IN THE WAR OF THE REVOLUTION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 15, 1822.

WASHINGTON, March 15, 1822.

To the Senate of the United States:

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, of the 29th January, I herewith transmit reports from the Treasury and War Departments, containing all the information in the possession of the Executive, embraced by that resolution.

JAMES MONROE.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 14, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate, of the 29th of January last, which has been referred to this Department, I have the honor to submit the annexed report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, showing the number of acres of land for which warrants have issued, and the number of acres for which patents have issued, between the Little Miami and Scioto rivers, on Virginia military land warrants, which is all the information required by the resolution that can be furnished by the Treasury Department.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JAMES MONROE, President of the United States.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 14, 1822.

The following statement, relative to the resolution of the 29th of January, referred to this office, comprises so much of the information therein required as I am enabled to furnish.

Number of acres for which patents have issued on Virginia military land warrants, located between Little Miami and Scioto rivers, up to the present date, 2,552,201. Number of acres for which warrants have issued, up to the 1st of February of the present year, 3,869,064.

The records of this office furnish no information relative to Virginia military bounty lands located "upon the waters of Cumberland river, and between the Green river and Tennessee river," as required by the resolution; nor to the "quantity of land allowed to each officer and soldier by any resolution or law of Virginia." In order to satisfy this part of the resolution, application, it is presumed, must be made to the land office at Richmond.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

Hon. WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury.

SIR:

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, February 28, 1822.

The Secretary of War, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate of the 29th ultimo, requesting the President to "cause to be laid before the Senate, if within his possession, the number of officers and soldiers who served in the revolutionary war from the State of Virginia, on continental establishment; the quantity of land allowed to each officer and soldier by any resolution or law of Virginia, and the aggregate amount of the quantity so granted; also, the quantity of land for which warrants have issued, and which have been located, and patents issued to said officers and soldiers, or their assignees, upon the waters of Cumberland river, and between the Green river and the Tennessee river, in the State of Kentucky; the deficiency of good land in the said tract, reported by the agents of the said officers and soldiers to the Executive of Virginia, to satisfy their warrants; and also the quantity of land for which warrants have issued, and which have been located, and patents issued to said officers and soldiers, or their assignees, between the Scioto and Little Miami rivers, in the State of Ohio;" has the honor to transmit, herewith, a statement marked A, which contains all the information, in relation to the resolution, contained in this office.

With respect, I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

J. C. CALHOUN.

The PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A.—WAR DEPARTMENT.

A summary statement of the number and grade of officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates, of the Virginia line on continental establishment, who served during the war of the revolution.

N. B.—The original returns of the revolutionary army, together with all its other appropriate records, which were deposited in the War Office of the United States at Washington city, D. C., were annihilated in the conflagration of that edifice, which happened in the year 1800. Prior to that unfortunate event, the Secretary of War had transmitted to the Executive of Virginia an authentic copy of the muster-roll of the Virginia line, which is still deposited in the archives of that State at Richmond. A correct copy of that record has since been obtained for the use of the United States' War Department, from which the following statement is extracted:

Major general,	-	-	-	-	-	-	1
Brigadier generals,	-	-	-	-	-	-	5
Colonels,	-	-	-	-	-	-	14
Lieutenant colonels commandant,	-	-	-	-	-	-	0

N. B.—It is presumed that the grade thus designated implies the command of a separate corps, because it appears that the gratuity in land was equal to that of a colonel.

Lieutenant colonels, -	-	-	-	-	-	16

No. 357.

[1st SESSION.]

LANDS ALLOTTED TO THE CULTIVATION OF THE VINE AND OLIVE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 18, 1822.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 18, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the Senate, of the 13th instant, referring to this Department a petition of Lefebvre Desnouettes and others, French emigrants in Alabama, I have the honor to report that, in pursuance of the provisions of the act of the 3d March, 1817, for encouraging the cultivation of the vine and olive, four townships were selected in the State of Alabama, near the junction of the Tombigbee and Black Warrior rivers, under the directions of the President of the United States. That the lands contained within those townships were, by contract bearing date the 8th day of January, 1819, assigned to certain French emigrants, pursuant to the provisions of the said act, upon certain terms and conditions; the first of which requires that, before the expiration of three years from the date of the contract, a settlement should be made upon each tract or lot of land within the said four townships.

By the report of the agent of the association, under date of the 12th of December last, it appears that eighty-one families have made actual settlements on the lands allotted to the petitioners, that they have under cultivation two thousand five hundred acres, and that they have already growing ten thousand vines, according to the report of the agent; the right of a considerable number of the associates has been already forfeited by the failure to make settlements by the 8th day of January, in compliance with the first condition of the contract. By the proviso of the third section of the act it is declared "that no patent shall be granted for any of the lands aforesaid, nor shall any title be obtained therefor, either at law or in equity, until complete payment shall have been made for the whole four townships, and until they comply with the conditions of the contract so to be made as aforesaid, nor shall a patent be granted for a greater quantity than six hundred and forty acres to any one person." It is therefore apparent that, by the default already committed by a part of the emigrants, those who have complied not only with the condition of settlement, but of the condition of planting the vines, will, according to the provisions of the act just referred to, be unable to acquire any title to the lands which they shall improve, without the intervention of legislative aid.

The question is, therefore, with great propriety, submitted at this time to the consideration of the National Legislature, whether the object contemplated by the act of the 3d of March, 1817, shall be now abandoned, to the great injury, if not entire ruin, of that part of the French emigrants who have made great exertions, not only to avail themselves of the benevolent intentions of the Government, but to make the only return for such an act of munificence which could be received by the donors.

A copy of the report of the agent, and an extract showing the conditions of the contract with the petitioners, are herewith transmitted.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Hon. the PRESIDENT of the Senate.

SIR:

AIGELVILLE, December 12, 1821.

I have the honor to transmit to your excellency a respectful petition to Congress from the actual French planters in the State of Alabama, to obtain, by your kind intervention, the repeal of so much of the law passed in their favor the 3d of March, 1819, as belongs to the solidarity.

Though under the American Government that clause may be considered as untenable either at law or equity, however, considering the period at which the consequences of such a proviso ought to take place, it is natural for us to wish for a more positive situation, as well to continue the cultivation of the conceded land as to be certain not to leave to our children the sad prospect of being turned out on account of the neglect or bad will of some individuals.

In spite of our enemies we have done more work than could be reasonably expected, considering the many losses that we have sustained to repair to the spot, and, after the beginning of our settlements, the want of communications in a rough and hardly explored country, the greatest part of which has been overflowed nine months of this year, and the sickness which has visited us, and deprives yet many families of their hands. Nevertheless, we may assure your excellency that between eighty-one actual planters for themselves or their commetans, (twenty-three being dead,) forming three hundred and twenty-seven persons, we may present to the Government one thousand one hundred acres in full cultivation with their own hands, and one thousand five hundred acres of land cultivated by lease. By anticipation we have 10,000 plants of vine in full growth; and that number had been treble had it been for the loss of so much by accidents at sea, or out of season.

As every planter now present in this State has made all possible exertions to answer fully to the expectations of the Government, it would be very easy for me to prove substantially to your excellency that, from the time we left our home till this day, we have, by an average, spent more than $160,000. What better badge of our intention to fulfil the conditions of the contract? And what better pledge to the Government that we have made the State of Alabama our last abode, inasmuch as many of us have no other way left to them to maintain themselves and their families than to stick with constancy to the hard work they have undertaken? But, sir, the mere idea of solidarity slackens our energy, and we do not presume to be blamable for respectfully begging to answer, each of us, for our own facts. Moreover, the repeal of that solidarity in relieving our anxiety, would be a sufficient proof for the squatters who are daily trespassing on our land, that the Government do not consider us as mere intruders as they believe.

Two petitions have been presented to Congress for the same purpose. Your excellency will be pleased to remember my opinion on that subject. I thought then as now, that such petition ought to be submitted to the wisdom and discretion of your excellency. If your excellency thinks proper not to oppose our wishes, the honorable Messrs. Walker and King, Senators of this State, have a copy unsigned of our petition, and the original is, and will remain, at the disposal of your excellency.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

CH. VILLERS,
Agent of the Colony.

The Hon. WM. H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury.

Extract from the contract entered into with the French Emigrant Association on the 8th day of January, 1819.

1st. That, before the expiration of three years from the date of this contract, there shall be made upon each tract in the aforesaid four townships allotted to the respective associates, a settlement by themselves individually, or by others on their account.

2d. That, before the expiration of fourteen years from the sale hereof, there shall be cleared and cultivated within the said four townships at least ten acres of land for each quarter section taken aggregately.

3d. That, before the expiration of seven years from the date hereof, there shall be cultivated within the said four townships at least one acre to each quarter section taken aggregately in vines.

4th. That, before the expiration of seven years from the date hereof, there shall be planted within the said four townships not less than five hundred olive trees, unless it shall be previously established to the satisfaction of the President that the olive cannot be successfully cultivated thereon.

5th. That a report shall be made annually to the Secretary of the Treasury, by the agent of the said association, or his successor, showing the number of settlements made within the said four townships in each year; the progress made in cultivating the vine and olive, and the degree of success with which the same is attended; and describing the number and kinds of such plants as have been cultivated; and, also, that the said agent, or his successor, shall, from time to time, furnish the Secretary of the Treasury such other information touching the condition and State of the association as he may require.

6th. That the list of the associates deposited in the Treasury as aforesaid, be recognized, and the persons thereon inscribed be confirmed in the allotments of lands annexed to their names respectively, with the following viz: Martin Piquet, Joseph Wells and Leclerc, O. M. Garesche, Jacques Brand and John Kester, Jean Thomas Carre, Laurent Faure, Englebert, Samuel Jackson, Joseph Robard, Pierre Frères, Jean Baptiste Neel, William Tablee, Billington, George Gaines, S. Vorhees, Gillaume Montelius, Kemball, shall be erased therefrom, and Jacques Moncrarie, R. A. Terrier, Madame George, Charles Bingiere, Joseph Ducommun, Pierre Garesche, J. Bonno, Pierre Drouet, Emely and Conde, be inserted thereon, and be entitled in the order in which they stand herein, to the allotment of the persons thus erased; and the allotments thus annexed to the names of the others of the persons thus erased, shall be assigned to other late emigrants, under such regulations as are hereinafter prescribed.

7th. That such emigrants as are inscribed on the said list, who had, previously to knowing of the allotments assigned to them respectively, settled and improved lands within the said four townships, either in those sections set apart for the small allotments, or in others, and before the 1st day of August last past, shall be entitled to hold the same to the extent, and in lieu of the quantity allotted to them respectively in the large or small allotments, as the case may be, unless the party to whom such land was actually allotted shall, within six months from the date hereof, tender to such settler the value of the improvements which he may have made thereon, to be ascertained by two respectable persons under oath; and, on failure to make such tender, the party to whom such land was allotted shall be entitled to the land allotted to such emigrant as aforesaid, to the extent of the allotment so occupied and improved, or, if the same be insufficient, he shall be further indemnified by the assignment of so much land as will make up the quantity out of any lands not otherwise appropriated.

8th. That the land exempted from appropriation by the foregoing provisions may be appropriated to other emigrants from France, not already provided for, and whose names shall be presented to the Secretary of the Treasury for his approbation, by the agent of the association or his successor: but actual settlement shall, in all cases, be an indispensable condition.

No. 358.

[1st SESSION.]

EXAMINATION OF THE LAND OFFICES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, ON THE 29TH OF MARCH, 1822.

Mr. Cook made the following report:

The select committee, to whom was referred the several communications of the Secretary of the Treasury, of the 28th January and 18th of February, 1822, in obedience to two several resolutions of the House of Representatives, of the 4th January and — February, 1822, respecting the manner in which the several land offices have been examined, by whom examined, and the moneys paid for such examination, &c., having examined the subject submitted to them with great deliberation, make the following report:

That, by the laws of the United States, it is made "the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to cause, at least once every year, the books of the officers of the land offices to be examined, and the balance of public moneys in the hands of the several Receivers of Public Moneys of the said offices, to be ascertained. That, previous to the year 1816, this examination had been made by persons residing in the vicinity of the respective offices; but, in progress of time, the augmentation in the receipts from these offices rendered more information necessary, and gave an importance to the examination which it had not previously possessed. These circumstances proved the inadequacy of the old system, and, in 1816, induced the late Mr. Dallas, then Secretary of the Treasury, to direct the examination to be made by one of the clerks of the General Land Office, who was also permitted to make a similar examination in 1817; and received for his services, in each year, at the rate of $3 per day in addition to his salary as clerk. That, since the year 1817, the examination has been made by persons disconnected with the Department, and who have received, for their services, at the rate of $6 per day, and $6 for every twenty miles travel.

That, in the year 1821, Jesse B. Thomas, Esq., a Senator of the United States from Illinois, was permitted by the Secretary of the Treasury to examine the offices in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, for which, as appears by the documents before the committee, he received a sum amounting to the allowance which has been established since the year 1817. That the principal inducement to permit the said Jesse B. Thomas to make the examination, as stated by the Secretary of the Treasury, appears to have been an expectation that he would be enabled to secure to the United States a large amount of public money in the Bank of Vincennes, at the time that bank stopped payment, which service he performed, and for which he has not received or demanded any compensation.

Although the committee consider the duty of suggesting or recommending any alteration in the mode of examining the land offices to be properly within the province of the Committee of Public Lands, to whom this part of the subject naturally refers itself, they are, nevertheless, free to declare it as their opinion, that the public interest does not require any change in the mode which has been pursued since 1817.

The committee presume, however, that this was the least important object of the reference of the subject to them; and that the design principally was, that they should consider and report upon the effect of permitting Jesse B. Thomas, Esq., a Senator of the United States, to examine the said offices in 1821, in which it has been supposed that both the constitution of the United States, and the act of Congress "concerning contracts," passed the 21st of April, 1808, have been violated.

Although the committee freely admit the power and jurisdiction of the House of Representatives to guard the purity of our institutions from violations, which it is the peculiar province of Congress or the people to punish or remedy, they cannot recognise either its justice or dignity in conducting ex parte investigations into breaches of highly penal statutes, and the commission of misdemeanors amenable by the laws to a different tribunal. Such precedents might lead, in worse times, to consequence of a ruinous and most troublesome character. They might be used to authorize Congress to become the expositors of their own laws, or improperly to throw the weight of their opinions into the deliberations of the legitimate tribunals. They would be very apt to be seized upon to produce public excitement, and be perverted to the purposes of ambitious men and individual resentments.

At the same time, the committee would not be understood as ascribing the present investigation to such motives, and, as well on this account, as from a just sense of the policy of our institutions, and the character of the individuals concerned, they submit to the House the general views which they are constrained to entertain.

The committee are clearly of opinion that the examination of the land offices by Jesse B. Thomas, Esq., was not a violation of the constitution of the United States.

That instrument forbids the appointment of members of Congress, during the time for which they were elected, to any civil office created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during that time; and also prevents any person holding an office under the Government from being a member of Congress during his continuance in office.

The object was to take from Congress the means or inducement of creating place or emolument for themselves, and thereby guard the rights and interests of the people from the encroachment of Executive power. The committee are the advocates of this policy, and would be the last to weaken its influence in the Government. But the case of Mr. Thomas is clearly not within the words or the spirit of the first, and if it could be considered as embraced in the latter clause, his appointment would, nevertheless, be constitutional; since only the holding incompatible offices at the same time is prohibited, with which idea the daily practice of the Government, from its organization, is in strict conformity. In fact, the Congress of the United States has hitherto been the theatre on which the ablest men of our country have become distinguished for their virtue and intelligence, and recommended themselves to the highest honors and places in the Government. The same theatre has matured their experience, and conducted our greatest statesmen to the Executive and judicial departments at home, and to foreign courts abroad, with equal advantage to the ornament and real interests of the nation.

If, therefore, there could be such an incompatibility as is imagined, it would then resolve itself into the question, whether Mr. Thomas, by accepting the appointment, had vacated his seat in the Senate, and with that body your committee would, in that case, be disposed to leave it.

But your committee are of opinion that the duty of examining the land offices is not such an office as was contemplated by the constitution of the United States, which opinion seems to have received the sanction, and regulated the practice of the Government since the adoption of the constitution, by those who bore a principal share in composing it; and must, therefore, be supposed to have understood its real import.

The committee refer to the appointment of Mr. Tracy, a Senator of the United States, by President Adams, in the year 1800, to inspect the posts on the northern and northwestern frontier. For this service Mr. Tracy received a liberal compensation and extra mileage, which is stated on the records of the Senate of that day. Under the administration of Mr. Jefferson, Mr. Dawson, a member of the House of Representatives from Virginia, was appointed as a bearer of a treaty to France, and was paid for performing the duty; and, during the administration of the same President, Mr. Smith, a Senator from Tennessee, was appointed a commissioner to treat with the Indians, and actually executed two treaties under this appointment. They also refer to the instance, at a still more recent period, during the administration of President Madison, of the appointment of Mr. Worthington, a Senator, and Mr. Morrow, a Representative, from Ohio, to negotiate with the Indians. In each of these cases, the individuals referred to executed the trusts confided to them, and still retained their seats in Congress; and, in the Senate, passed upon their own acts. The committee content themselves with these instances, without enumerating others, as affording a clear exposition of this clause in the constitution.

The act of Congress, which it is supposed has been violated, by permitting Mr. Thomas to examine the land offices, was passed the 21st of April, 1808, and is entitled "An act concerning contracts."

The first section provides that, from and after the passage of this act, no member of Congress shall, directly or indirectly, himself, or by any other person whatsoever in trust for him, or for his use or benefit, or on his account undertake, execute, hold, or enjoy, in the whole or in part, any contract or agreement hereafter to be made or entered into with any officer of the United States, in their behalf, or with any person authorized to make contracts on the part of the United States, and further imposes a penalty on any member of Congress so offending.

The act further provides, "that if any officer of the United States, on behalf of the United States, shall, directly or indirectly, make or enter into any contract, bargain, or agreement, in writing or otherwise, other than those therein excepted, on conviction thereof, shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor, and fined in the sum of three thousand dollars."

The fifth section provides, that, "after the passing of this act, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, Secretary of the Navy, and Postmaster General, annually to lay before Congress a statement of all the contracts which have been made in their respective departments during the year preceding such report," &c.

Without meaning to pronounce any opinion, whether a court of justice would so interpret the law as to be applicable to the case of the examination of the Land Office by Mr. Thomas, the committee are aware that the words are extremely broad, and, if such could be supposed to be their true intent and meaning, would be capable of embracing every imaginable case in which a member of Congress could be called to perform any duty, or render any service in behalf of the United States, and which, by any possibility, could be termed "a contract, bargain, or agreement."

They could especially be extended to the appointment to negotiate treaties, whether the member should afterwards resign or not; to the appointment of printers to publish the laws of the United States; and to the employment of counsel in causes in which the United States have an interest, than none of which, it is apprehended, is the duty of examining the Land Offices more plainly within the scope of the words. But, by the cotemporary practice which occasioned the law, and which followed its enactment, among those who were liable to its provisions, and always disposed to comply with its terms; who either aided in making, or lived, and were familiar in the times and circumstances in which it was made, and were conversant with the men, and their objects, by whom it was passed, it has received a different construction, and has never been considered as prohibiting any of the employments above enumerated.

From the organization of the Government down to the passing of the law in 1808, it had been usual to give such appointments to members of Congress, and, though in the case of Mr. Tracy his demand for mileage was not deemed reasonable, neither the legality nor policy of the usage had ever been questioned. But, in the years 1807 and 1808, John Smith, a Senator from Ohio, had entered largely into contracts with the War Department for supplying the northwestern army; and Matthew Lyon, a Representative from Kentucky, had numerous contracts with the Postmaster General for carrying the mail. These contracts had produced considerable excitement in Congress, where their influence had been manifested; and especially the former, under the supposition that John Smith had become connected with the schemes of Aaron Burr, and used his contract to subserve them. After a fruitless attempt to expel him from his seat in the Senate, the law in question was passed. From the date of this law, all contracts of the nature of the two last ceased to be given to members of Congress; while all other trusts and agencies, as before referred to, continued to be given, and the returns from the different Departments made accordingly, without serious complaint.

The appointment of Mr. Worthington and Mr. Morrow, both active in their respective places in passing the law of 1808, as commissioners to negotiate with the Indians, was made very soon after the law was passed, and by President Madison, who was Secretary of State at the time of its enactment, and could no more be supposed to be ignorant of its general objects, than disinclined to obey its injunctions in their true spirit and meaning.

It is believed by the committee that the late William Pinkney was employed as counsel in behalf of the United States while he was a member of the House of Representatives from Maryland, and argued some causes in the Supreme Court, and received a liberal compensation for his services. It appears, too, that, in 1818, upon the occasion of certain complaints made at the office of the Secretary of the Treasury against a Receiver of Public Moneys at Vincennes, the present Chief Magistrate of the United States directed the Senators from Indiana to investigate the subject, and, though the investigation did not proceed, one of the Senators, who lived at a distance, and attended for the purpose, was afterwards allowed his travelling expenses. On another occasion, in the year 1819, the Honorable Benjamin Ruggles was directed to aid the superintendent of the Cumberland road in taking proper security from the persons entering into the contracts, and received from the superintendent seventy-two dollars for his services.

In the Department of State there exist few occasions for giving a construction to this law "concerning public contracts;" though, in this Department, the employment of a member of Congress, being the editor of a newspaper, to print the laws of the United States has not been considered by John Quincy Adams, Esq., or by his predecessors, as prohibited by the act of Congress, or as coming at all within its purview:" accordingly, your committee find that James Wilson, Esq., a Senator from the State of New Jersey, and the editor of the Trenton True American, was employed to print the laws during the time he was a Senator, from 1815 to 1821, and from the year 1804.

In the Navy Department the committee have heard of no particular cases, or of any particular practice, other than that arising from the annual returns under the fifth section, which are exclusively confined to contracts for work and supplies.

The committee believe it to have been usual in the War Department, also, to employ members of Congress as counsel in behalf of the United States, and they refer particularly to the instances of Mr. Baldwin, of the House of Representatives, and of Mr. Rodney, of Delaware, of the Senate, employed and paid as counsel under the direction of the present Secretary of War.

The committee refer also to the case of a member of the House of Representatives in the present Congress, who is employed, under the authority of the War Department, as a superintendent of a fortification of the United States, for which he receives an annual compensation.

Upon these instances the committee forbear any comment; proceeding to remark, however, that, in this practical construction, there has been a uniformity which could scarcely have resulted from any thing else than a universal impression of the real meaning of the law. By the fifth section it has been perceived that the Secretary of the Treasury, Secretaries of War and of the Navy, and the Postmaster General, are directed to make annual statements to Congress, of such contracts made in their respective Departments as are comprehended in the law. But in none of these returns, which have been annually made, are included any of the cases enumerated, whether the service had been performed by a member of Congress, or any other person; and, under the idea that these were not of the description of contracts to which the law had reference, the returns embrace only contracts for labor, for furnishing supplies, and for carrying the mail; and it is also worthy of observation that, though this fifth section designs to compel a return of all contracts within the law, it does not require any such return from the Department of State, in which, though it is true no such contracts as gave rise to the law are ever made, it has, nevertheless, an extensive patronage, a part of which is that of authorizing the publication of the laws, which may be dispensed to members of Congress, and, as we have seen, falling clearly within the general scope of the words of the law of 1808. Neither has it been usual, nor deemed necessary, to make a record in either of the Departments of any such instances, whether the service was performed by a member of Congress, or others, pursuant to the law requiring all contracts made by the respective Departments, in behalf of the United States, to be recorded.

The committee do not wish to be understood as referring to these instances, and to this course of practice, to justify or excuse an error in one department by detecting similar abuses in others; nor as affording an interpretation which, if erroneous, should have the force of judicial decision; but merely as the means by which the objects and meaning of the law may be ascertained, as illustrative of the sense in which its provisions have been received and understood by the most distinguished statesmen, and the ablest constitutional lawyers of the country, and by the common consent of all whose duty it was to obey them.

They refer to them as demonstrating a contemporaneous practical construction which has prevailed, without concert, in all of the Departments, and to which an officer, entering the office long after the construction had become adopted, might naturally conform his conduct.

On the whole, the committee have seen nothing in the case submitted to them, which can lead to the presumption that either of the individuals concerned had any intention either to violate the provisions of the law, or to abuse or disregard the spirit and policy of our institutions.

They are of opinion that the employment of Mr. Thomas to examine the land offices originated in a desire honestly to discharge an important public duty: that the peculiar importance of the trust at the time, and the character and elevation of the individual employed, were calculated rather to invite than forbid the selection. Nor have the committee any reason to believe that the duty has not been faithfully performed, and in a manner conducive to the public good.

Under these circumstances, and with such impressions, the committee do not deem it necessary to single out this case for particular animadversion, or to pronounce upon the comprehensiveness or precise import of the act of 1808: they content themselves with referring to the construction which it has uniformly received in practice, and to the conviction that the public good, and not any sinister or improper purpose was intended; and they, therefore, recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 26, 1822.

Your letter of the 22d instant was received only on the 25th. In reply to your request that the committee may be informed of the construction given by this Department to the act of the 21st April, 1808, entitled "An act to regulate public contracts, as well under my predecessors in office as by myself, in relation to the authority of the Department or the President to employ, as counsel in behalf of the United States, any member of Congress, or to perform any other service, duty, or agency in behalf of the United States," I have the honor to state that I have no means of ascertaining the construction which has been put upon the act in question by my predecessors in office, but by their practice under the fifth section of the act. That section requires that the Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, Secretary of the Navy, and Postmaster General shall, annually, lay before Congress a statement of all the contracts which have been made in their respective Departments during the year preceding such report. From the date of that act to the present time the land offices have been annually examined, and a compensation paid for the services rendered; but no Secretary of the Treasury has ever reported that service as a contract within the letter or intention of the act, or considered the persons who examined them as contractors. If the performance of such service constituted a contract within the contemplation of the act, it was the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, from the year 1808, to have annually reported every such service to Congress as a contract. If it was not a contract, within the contemplation of the act, it was a service which might be lawfully rendered by a member of Congress. The construction given to the act by the Treasury Department, at the commencement of its operation, that such incidental services were not contracts, has, it is understood, been corroborated by the other Departments of the Government. In all those Departments incidental services have been, and still are, rendered and compensated, but have never been, nor are they now, reported to Congress as contracts within the contemplation of the act.

It is respectfully conceived that the examination of the land offices cannot be considered as constituting a contract, within the letter or intention of the act, unless the proposition that every possible service rendered to the Government by any person whatever, except by public officers, in the discharge of their official duties, for which compensation is received, can be correctly affirmed to be such contract. That it was not the intention of the act of 1808 to make this general affirmation, can, it is believed, admit of no reasonable doubt: if such, however, was its intention, all the officers of Government, upon whom it was intended to operate, have mistaken that intention, and failed in the correct discharge of their duty; for, it is believed, that none of them have, in pursuance of the fifth section of the act, reported such incidental services as contracts made by them during the year preceding the reports annually made to Congress.

I have no knowledge of the employment of any member of Congress since the year 1808 as counsel in behalf of the United States, or to perform any other service, duty, or agency by my predecessors in office, nor has any member of Congress been employed as counsel by this Department since it has been under my direction.

In the year 1818 complaints were received at this office against the official conduct of Nathaniel Ewing, Receiver at Vincennes. The charges were of such a nature as to require investigation, and the Senators of the State of Indiana were, by the direction of the President, requested to make that investigation. Owing to some objections on the part of the Receiver, the investigation did not then take place; but as General Noble, one of the Senators, resided at a considerable distance from the land office, travelling expenses were incurred by him, which were paid.

In 1819, when proposals were invited at Brownsville for constructing the Cumberland road from Uniontown to Washington, in Pennsylvania, the proposals were much lower than those which had been received upon the other portions of the road. Mr. Shriver, the superintendent of the road, expressed apprehensions that some of the bidders would not be able to give such security as would ensure the prompt and faithful execution of their engagements; and stated that his acquaintance in that part of the State was not such as to enable him to judge correctly of the sufficiency of the security that might be tendered: he, therefore, proposed that two gentlemen, whom he named, should be requested to aid him in this particular service; one of the gentlemen declined the request, when it was suggested that the Hon. Benjamin Ruggles was acquainted in that part of the State, and that there was no doubt he would attend if requested. His attendance was accordingly requested, and, for his services and expenses, he received, from the superintendent, the sum of seventy-two dollars.

Upon both these occasions, as well as upon the acceptance of the offer of the Hon. Jesse B. Thomas, to examine the land offices in 1821, the provisions of the act of 1808 were not adverted to, nor did the idea occur that there was the slightest incompatibility between such service and the provisions of that act.

The practice of the Department has been to record all contracts which were supposed to be within the letter or intention of the act, and to lay them annually before Congress; but, as such incidental services as have been described in this letter have never been considered contracts, they have never assumed that form, and consequently have not been recorded.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

HON. DANIEL P. COOK, Chairman of the Committee, &c., H. R.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 29, 1822.

Since the date of my letter of the 26th instant, it has been ascertained that the late James A. Bayard, whilst a Senator of the United States, was employed, under the direction of the Comptroller of the Treasury, in the year 1812, to prosecute a cause in which the United States were interested, for which he received $500 from the collector of Wilmington, which sum was allowed to the collector in the settlement of his accounts.

In my letter of the 26th instant it was stated that the travelling expenses incurred by General Noble, in going to Vincennes, had been paid, but the amount paid was not then ascertained: it has since been found to have been eighty dollars.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

HON. DANIEL P. COOK, Chairman, &c.

SIR:

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, March 28, 1822.

I have received your letter of the 23d instant, requesting, on behalf of the committee, to be informed what has been the construction put upon the act of Congress entitled "An act regulating public contracts," approved April 21, 1808, by the War Department, &c. A general examination of the records of this office does not furnish any means of determining what construction has been put upon the act in relation to the authority of the President of the United States or this Department, to employ, as counsel in behalf of the United States, any member of Congress, or to employ a member of Congress to perform any other duty or agency in behalf of the United States. The correspondence of this Department with the several Attorney Generals since the passage of the act has been examined, in order to ascertain whether any opinion has been given on the construction of the act, and it has not been found that any has been. Since I have presided in the Department no occasion has occurred which has rendered it necessary to give a construction to the act. I can find no instance on record, since the passage of the act, in which members of Congress have been employed by the President or the Department to perform any service, duty, or agency, except in the case of Elias Earle, the documents connected with which are to be found in the 3d volume State Papers, 1st session, 15th Congress, No. 43, to which I would respectfully refer the committee. The amount paid Mr. Earle will be found in the letter of the Third Auditor, herewith transmitted. It will be seen, by reference to the letter of the Third Auditor, that, in some instances, money has been put into the hands of members of Congress to facilitate the settlement of the claims of their constituents against the Government. It is believed that such cases do not come within the scope of your inquiry: the service of the members, in such cases, being rather in the character of agents for their constituents, than that of agents for the Government; but if the committee should desire it, an examination will be made, and a statement of the case furnished to them. In relation to the case of Colonel Johnson, referred to by the Third Auditor, I enclose a copy of a letter from General Armstrong to him, of the 26th February, 1813. He was commissioned, it is believed, by the Governor of the State. The same gentleman, Mr. Morrow, of Ohio, and General Harrison, were appointed commissioners by the President, on the 24th May, 1814, while the two former were members of Congress, to treat with the northwestern Indians, but the commission was withdrawn by the President. I enclose an extract from the commission, with a copy of the letter withdrawing it.

There may be other similar cases, but these are all that can now be ascertained.

The records of the Department, in the instances in which members have been employed, have been kept in the same manner as in others. The only instance, which is embraced by the annual statement required to be laid before Congress, of the contracts made with this Department, in which a member of Congress was concerned, is that of Elias Earle for the manufacture of arms, which is contained in the statement transmitted to Congress in January, 1816. It is believed to be the only instance of a contract made with a member of Congress, which, according to the provision of the act, ought to be contained in the statement which it directs to be laid annually before Congress.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

J. C. CALHOUN.

HON. DANIEL P. COOK, House of Representatives United States.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, THIRD AUDITOR'S OFFICE, March 28, 1822.

I have the honor to state, in reply to your inquiry, that it appears, from the books of the late Accountant of the War Department, that Elias Earle, Esq., of South Carolina, received a warrant, issued by the Secretary of War, dated 3d February, 1815, for $40,000, on account of the Indian Department; and that, on the settlement of his account in November, 1816, the sum of seven hundred and fifty dollars was allowed him by the acting Secretary of War for his commissions, expenses, &c. in the disbursement of $27,121 55, the balance found due having been then refunded. In the case of Colonel R. M. Johnson, he has been paid for his services as commanding a regiment of Kentucky volunteers from the 20th May to the 19th November, 1813, amounting to seven hundred and sixty-seven dollars and eighty cents. In several instances moneys have been placed in the hands of members of Congress to pay, principally, to the militia discharged from service without receiving their pay; for these sums they have been charged, and held accountable to produce the proper receipts. The Secretary of War will be pleased to decide whether such cases constitute any of those embraced within his inquiry.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

PETER HAGNER, *Auditor.*Hon. J. C. CALHOUN, Secretary of War.Extract of a letter from the Secretary of War to Colonel R. M. Johnson, dated

SIR:

MAY 24, 1814.

You have been appointed a commissioner to treat with the northwestern Indians. In this mission you will be associated with Major General Harrison and the Hon. Jeremiah Morrow.

SIR:

WAR DEPARTMENT, May 31, 1814.

The President's nomination of Mr. Morrow and yourself (communicated by my letter of the 24th instant) as commissioners for assisting in the Indian treaty about to be held, was made without adverting to the fact that the acceptance, on your parts, would vacate your seats in Congress. Not supposing that this would be desirable either on public or private grounds, he has recalled these nominations, and appointed in your stead Governors Shelby and Cass.

I have, &c. &c.

J. ARMSTRONG.

Col. R. M. JOHNSON.

[Same to Judge MORROW.]

SIR:

WAR DEPARTMENT, February 26, 1813.

You are hereby authorized to organize and hold in readiness a regiment of mounted volunteers, the organization, as to the number of officers and men, to be conformable to the military establishment of the United States; the horses to be dispensed with, if thought expedient, upon the arrival of the regiment at its place of destination. The Governor of the State of Kentucky will be requested to commission the officers when selected, to serve four months after being called into actual service, and six months if required by the United States; the pay of officers and men to commence from the actual service and march of the corps under the direction of this Department. After marching orders, the contractors and commissaries' agents in the different districts through which it passes, will supply the regiment with forage for the horses, and provision for the men, if required to do so. The keepers of military stores will also furnish said corps with ammunition on regular returns of the effective force of the regiment. If any difficulty arises as to rank, the commanding general will settle the same after the corps shall have reached its place of destination.

I have, &c.

J. ARMSTRONG.

Hon. R. M. JOHNSON.

SIR:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, March 27, 1822.

In reply to your letter of the 22d instant, I have the honor to state that the records of the Department have been carefully examined, and they afford no instance in which a member of Congress has been employed as agent, attorney, or counsellor, on behalf of the Navy Department, during the period for which he was a member, since the passage of the act regulating public contracts, approved 21st April, 1808; and, in all contracts made by, or on behalf of, this Department, a clause is introduced, stipulating that no member of Congress shall have any interest, or be, in any wise, concerned, either directly or indirectly, in any of the issues, profits, or receipts of such contracts.

With great respect, &c.

SMITH THOMPSON.

Hon. DANIEL P. COOK, Chairman Select Com. Ho. Reps.

SIR:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, March 25, 1822.

In answer to your letter of the 23d instant, I have the honor of informing you, that no occasion has arisen since I have been in this Department, for giving a construction to the act of Congress regulating public contracts, of 21st April, 1808, in relation to any authority of this Department, or of the President of the United States, to employ as counsel in behalf of the United States any member of Congress; or to employ a member of Congress to perform any other service, duty, or agency, in behalf of the United States. Nor has any member of Congress been at any time since the year 1808, so far as is known at this Department, employed by this Department as counsel in behalf of the United States, or to perform, upon compensation, any other service, duty, or agency, excepting as follows: the True American, a newspaper printed at Trenton, in the State of New Jersey, has been, from the year 1804 until this time, appointed, from session to session, as one of the papers for printing the laws of the United States within that State. The editor of that paper was, from 1815 to 1821, a member of the Senate of the United States. The compensation for thus printing the laws is prescribed by law, and has been, since the year 1808, as follows:

For the 1st session of the 10th Congress,	-	-	-	-	$77 50
For the 2d session of the 10th Congress,	-	-	-	-	61 50
For the 1st session of the 11th Congress,	-	-	-	-	11 00
For the 2d session of the 11th Congress,	-	-	-	-	90 00
For the 3d session of the 11th Congress,	-	-	-	-	71 50
For the 1st session of the 12th Congress,	-	-	-	-	159 00
For the 2d session of the 12th Congress,	-	-	-	-	60 00
For the 1st session of the 13th Congress,	-	-	-	-	115 50
For the 2d session of the 13th Congress,	-	-	-	-	93 00
For the 3d session of the 13th Congress,	-	-	-	-	141 50
For the 1st session of the 14th Congress,	-	-	-	-	144 50
For the 2d session of the 14th Congress,	-	-	-	-	84 50
For the 1st session of the 15th Congress,	-	-	-	-	133 50
For the 2d session of the 15th Congress,	-	-	-	-	206 00
For the 1st session of the 16th Congress,	-	-	-	-	124 00
For the 2d session of the 16th Congress,	-	-	-	-	69 00

The employment of printing the laws in newspapers is, by a letter of appointment from this Department, and, in the case of Wilson, was not considered either by my predecessor or by me, as prohibited by the act of Congress regulating public contracts, or as coming at all within its purview.

There are, indeed, no contracts usually made by or under the authority of the Secretary of State, contemplated in the act of 21st of April, 1808; nor is that officer included in the provisions of the fifth section of the act, which require the annual statement to Congress of the contracts made by the heads of the other Departments.

I am, with great respect, sir, your very humble and obedient servant,

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

DANIEL P. COOK, Esq., Chairman of a Committee Ho. Reps. U. S.

[The following explanatory letter, &c. were communicated to the House of Representatives, by Mr. Cook, on the 5th April, 1822.]

SIR:

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, April 3, 1822.

I have received your letter of the 2d instant, enclosing a copy of the report of the select committee upon the subject of examining the land offices in Ohio, &c., [see No. 358,] and, in reply to your inquiries, I have to state that the committee is under a mistake in stating that Mr. Rodney and Mr. Baldwin, the former a member of the Senate, and the latter of the House of Representatives, were "employed and paid as counsel, under the direction of the present Secretary of War."

The precise period at which the former was employed cannot be ascertained; but it was previous to July, 1820. He was paid for his services the 8th of November, 1820, before he became a member of Congress. Mr. Baldwin was employed by Major Woolley, of the ordnance, in the spring of 1817, before I came into the War Department, and previous to taking his seat in Congress, in the case of Daniel Dekker, a soldier in the United States' service, who had been indicted for murder, for which service Mr. Baldwin has not been yet paid. He was also employed before I came into the Department, and, it is believed, about the same time, by General Tannehill and Major Woolley, (who had been appointed commissioners, in 1815, to sell certain lots of land belonging to the Government at Pittsburg,) in an indictment of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania against John Young, the auctioneer, for selling the lots without paying the auction fees. For this service he was paid, in 1820, one hundred dollars. It cannot be ascertained, from the records of this office, that any part of the service was rendered subsequent to the time of his taking his seat in Congress.

In relation to the employment of Mr. Morrow and Governor Worthington, in 1812, I herewith enclose a copy of the letter of instruction to them, and a letter from the Third Auditor, which will give all the information in relation to it which can be obtained from this Department.

In "the case of a member of the House of Representatives in the present Congress, who is employed, under the authority of the War Department, as a superintendent of a fortification of the United States, for which he receives an annual compensation," and which, I understand from your letter, refers to Mr. Hill, from Maine, I find, on examination, that he was employed by General Ripley, in 1816, to take charge of the fort and other public property at Phippsburg, in Maine, and that he has received a compensation averaging one hundred and sixteen dollars and fifty cents per annum.

The enclosed communications from the Second and Third Auditors of the Treasury Department contain all of the facts, in relation to it, within the knowledge of this Department. It is proper to observe that it does not appear that the account was ever submitted to the War Department for its approval, as the Auditors considered the authority of the commanding officer sufficient for its allowance, and that I had no knowledge that Mr. Hill was so employed.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

J. C. CALHOUN.

Hon. D. P. Cook, House of Representatives.

WAR DEPARTMENT, July 1, 1812.

To His Excellency Return J. Meigs, the honorable Thomas Worthington, and the honorable Jeremiah Morrow:

The President having been pleased to appoint you commissioners to meet the chiefs and head men of the several Indian tribes from the western frontier, at Piqua town, in the State of Ohio, on the 1st of August next, I have the honor to communicate his pleasure that you, or any two of you, explain to them the views of the President in ordering the council. He has heard of their determination to preserve peace with the United States, and he is desirous of saving them from the destruction which would inevitably ensue in case of their hostility. The conduct of some of them would justify him in lifting his hand against them; but he is informed that the tribes disapprove of what has been done, and he will not punish the innocent with the guilty. You will hear all their complaints, and learn from them the course they desire to pursue in the war with Great Britain. You will inform them that the President stands in no need of their assistance; for their own sakes he desires them to remain quiet, and to pursue their usual occupations.

In case they shall give satisfactory assurances that they will preserve peace with good faith, they may be assured that the President will take them by the hand; that he will protect them; that they shall have their annuities according to treaty; that their lands shall be held sacred, and shall not be taken or purchased from them without their consent; and that, being at peace with the United States, they will be reconciled to, and will preserve the chain of friendship with, all their Governors and agents. It must be distinctly explained, that the chiefs will be held accountable for the good conduct of their several tribes; and if a single murder shall be committed on the frontier, the murderer shall be forthwith delivered up, or the tribe to which he shall belong shall be driven beyond the Mississippi, their lands shall be forfeited, and their annuities shall cease forever. Upon a perfect understanding of and agreement to these several points, the goods sent to Piqua, as presents, may be delivered, in whole or in part, according to the discretion of the commissioners.

Twelve or fifteen chiefs may be invited to visit the President, and receive from his own mouth a confirmation of your engagements, and have them formed into a regular treaty. If, on the contrary, they are not disposed to friendship, or there is good reason to doubt the sincerity of their professions, the council will be immediately broken up, with a warning of consequences. With these instructions, the commissioners will exercise their own judgment and discretion in such a manner as may be best calculated to promote the public interests. Should a proposal be made, as a proof of their friendly disposition, to give their consent to cut a road from Ohio to Indiana, the proposal may be accepted.

I have, &c.

W. EUSTIS.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, THIRD AUDITOR'S OFFICE, April 4, 1822.

Agreeably to your request, I have the honor to state that it has been found, on examination of the books of the late Accountant of the War Department, that warrants issued on the 28th November, 1812, in favor of the honorable J. Morrow and Thomas Worthington, as follows:

Hon. J. Morrow, being the amount of his account, admitted by the Secretary of War, for services and expenses as a commissioner for holding a council with the Indian tribes at Piqua, Ohio, from 11th August to 16th September, 1812,	$224 00
Hon. Thomas Worthington, being the amount of his account for like services and expenses, from 10th August to 11th September, 1812,	231 00

These warrants having been charged to the Indian Department, and no personal account opened with either of the gentlemen, the payments were overlooked on the former examination.

Pursuant to your request, I also subjoin a statement of the payments made by the several quartermasters at Boston, to Mark L. Hill, so far as the accounts have been rendered to this office, for his services in taking care of the public works at Georgetown, under an appointment of General Ripley, dated 22d March, 1816, stating the authority, in each case, on which the accounts were allowed to the credit of the quartermasters. They were admitted, without submitting them to the Secretary of War, as an allowance for a previous period of service of this gentleman had been made in the office of the accountant; and accounts, at the same rate of compensation, of other persons employed to take charge of public works, had been and continue to be allowed. These payments to Mr. Hill would have been mentioned in my letter to you of the 28th ultimo, had they occurred to me as relating to a member of Congress.

1817, May 31. Paid on the order of General Miller, from 1st January to 31st May, 1817,	$49 16
1818, December 7. Paid, on a certified copy of the original appointment, from 1st June, 1817, to 1st October, 1818,	157 31
1819, May 14. Paid, in like manner, from 1st October, 1818, to 1st April, 1819,	59 12
1820, June 10. Paid, on the order of General Porter, and a copy of the original appointment, from 1st April, 1819, to 31st March, 1820,	114 75
1821, April 20. Paid, in like manner, from 1st April, 1820, to 31st March, 1821,	114 75

With great respect, your most obedient servant,

PETER HAGNER, Auditor.

Hon. J. C. CALHOUN, Secretary of War.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, SECOND AUDITOR'S OFFICE, April 3, 1822.

In compliance with your request, a minute investigation has been made in this office in relation to compensation said to have been allowed, by the authority of the War Department, to certain members of Congress, for various services performed by them, and I now beg leave to lay the result before you.

It appears that the Hon. H. Baldwin was paid, in May, 1820, the sum of one hundred dollars for his services, in the supreme court of Pennsylvania, in the case of the Commonwealth vs. John Young, in an indictment against the defendant for selling, in 1815, under the authority of the United States, certain lots of ground belonging to them in Pittsburg, without paying the auction duty imposed by the laws of Pennsylvania. It is believed that General Tannehill and Major Woolley, named United States' commissioners for the sale of these lots, engaged Mr. Baldwin, in 1817, in this suit, but there is no evidence on record of the fact.

The Hon. M. L. Hill was paid, by Captain Milo Mason, assistant quartermaster general, in December, 1816, the sum of ninety-six dollars and thirty-one cents, for his services for nine months and twenty-two days, in taking care of the fort, ordnance, and other public property at Phippsburg, on Kennebec river. The enclosed letter from General Ripley to Mr. Hill, under date of the 8th February, 1816, fixing his compensation for the above services, was considered sufficient authority, by the Auditor, for the allowance of this payment by the assistant deputy quartermaster general, without submitting the case to the acting Secretary of War, for his sanction.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM LEE.

The Hon. J. C. CALHOUN, Secretary of War.

MY DEAR SIR:

CASTLE ISLAND, February 8, 1816.

I regret that it was not in my power to see you. I consider it proper to allow the amount of a private's pay, and one ration per day, to any citizen who takes care of the public property at a military post which has no garrison. This will be allowed you for taking care of that at Georgetown.

Respectfully, your friend and servant,

E. W. RIPLEY.

Hon. M. L. HILL.

INCIDENTAL EXPENSES OF CERTAIN LAND OFFICES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 1, 1822.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 30, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to communicate to the House "the items of the incidental expenses incurred in the land offices in St. Louis, Franklin, Huntsville, and Cahawba, for the year eighteen hundred and twenty, and the three first quarters of the year eighteen hundred and twenty-one," I have the honor to communicate the statement required. It appears that the items comprehended in the statement have not been finally examined and passed to the credit of the officers by whom the expenditures have been made.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The preceding statement of items of expenses incurred at St. Louis, Franklin, Huntsville, and Cahawba, during the year 1820, and the three first quarters of 1821, is predicated on documents which have not yet been investigated by the General Land Office, and have not received its sanction as proper evidence of payments. These disbursements are, therefore, liable to the reductions authorized by law, and by the regulations of the Treasury for the settlement of accounts. It may be, moreover, proper to observe that the expenses of printing, which swell considerably the amounts paid at the different offices, are mostly for the publication of the President's proclamations of sales.

[1st SESSION.]

REJECTED CLAIMS UNDER THE ACT OF COMPROMISE WITH THE YAZOO CLAIMANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 6, 1822.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, April 5, 1822.

The Secretary of State, in compliance with the resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 14th ult., instructing him "to report what evidences of claims recorded in the office of the Department of State, in pursuance of the act of Congress, passed 31st March, 1814, providing for the indemnification of certain claimants of public lands in the Mississippi Territory, remains in that office after having been rejected by the commissioners appointed under that act; whether the Secretary of State has refused to deliver up such evidences of claims to the claimants, together with the reasons of such refusal: also, specifying the names of such claimants as have applied to withdraw their evidences of claims," has the honor of reporting that, by an act of Congress, passed on the 23d of January, 1815, supplementary to the act of 31st March, 1814, to which the resolution refers, another Board of Commissioners was substituted with all the powers of the original Board, and with power to appoint a secretary to receive, file, and preserve the papers, documents, and claims, presented to and received by the Board, and to enter and record all their orders, proceedings, judgments, and determinations.

That, by the sixth section of an act, passed on the 3d of March, 1815, further supplementary to the act of 31st March, 1814, it was prescribed that the releases, assignments, and powers, thus received, should be recorded by the secretary of the said commissioners, and the said records returned, with all other papers and documents in relation to said claims, when the business of the said commissioners should be closed, to the office of the Secretary of State.

That the said records and documents have accordingly been returned, conformably to this provision of the law, to the office of this Department; but, as neither that act nor any subsequent act or resolution of Congress has authorized the Secretary of State to dispose of any of the papers, whenever application has been made for any of them by persons to whom they had originally belonged, they have been informed that no authority to deliver them existed at this Department.

A list is herewith enclosed of the names of the persons who released to the United States claims which were rejected by the commissioners. No record has been kept at the Department of the names of persons who have applied for the delivery of papers, nor are they particularly recollected. The cases of application have been not more than two or three.

All which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

LAND CLAIM IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 10, 1822.

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Ohio, made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and accompanying documents of Stephen Henderson, have had the same under consideration, and report:

The petitioner states that the Spanish Government granted to Joseph Alexander, and David Pannill, three contiguous tracts of land, amounting, in the aggregate, to two thousand one hundred and sixty-four acres, lying within the present limits of the State of Mississippi, which the said grantees some time afterwards sold to a certain Samuel C. Young, who, in like manner, sold the same, in the year 1809, to Elliot Hackley, who is now dead, and the petitioner; that the evidences of title to the said land were filed with the commissioners appointed to adjust land titles, and were rejected because there was no proof of such residence as the law under which they acted required to justify a confirmation; that his late partner and himself were ignorant of this defect of title at the time of their purchase; that, after it came to their knowledge, Major Freeman, Surveyor General, at their instance, promised that their lands should be exempt from public sale until application for relief could be made to Congress; that, influenced by the assurances of Major Freeman, they did not attend the public sales, at which six hundred and forty-three acres were sold at two dollars an acre; that this occurrence was owing to their lands lying on opposite sides of the township line, a fact not noticed by the officers conducting the sales; that, on the balance, amounting to one thousand five hundred and one acres, very valuable improvements have been made; that, since February, 1816, a continued application to Congress for relief has been made to no purpose, and that, on the 3d of June, 1821, this balance was sold to sundry purchasers for one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre: wherefore, he prays the passage of an act to annul the sale of the said land, and to give him the right to pre-emption thereto at one dollar and twenty-five cents an acre, or such other relief as justice may require.

It appears, from a certified extract of the records of the Board of Commissioners appointed to adjust land titles west of Pearl river, that a patent was granted on the 20th of June, 1795, by the Spanish Government, to Joseph Pannil, for one thousand arpents; one on the 7th December following, to Alexander Pannil, for five hundred arpents; and one on the same day to David Pannil, for five hundred arpents; and that the plats of survey, in all these cases, bear date in 1795.

Joseph Pannil, and his wife, Agnes, in consideration of the sum of thirty thousand dollars, on the 4th day of January, 1803, conveyed to Samuel C. Young four tracts of land, amounting to two thousand seven hundred acres. This appears from an inspection of the deed itself.

On the 5th of July, 1809, Samuel C. Young conveyed to the petitioner one thousand three hundred arpents, of which eight hundred arpents are a part of the tract patented to Joseph Pannil, and five hundred arpents, the same patented to Alexander Pannil; and also six hundred and forty acres, which, in the deed, is called pre-emption land—in all amounting to about one thousand nine hundred acres. To support these facts the deed is exhibited, from which it appears the consideration was about fifteen thousand dollars.

On the 2d of October, 1809, Samuel C. Young, in consideration of three thousand dollars, conveyed to the petitioner the five hundred arpents which had been originally granted to David Pannil.

By a deed, bearing date the 9th of January, 1820, David Pannil sanctions the sale of the five hundred arpents as made by his father and mother, and also releases to the petitioner.

Major Freeman, Surveyor General, states that, at the request of the petitioner, and the late Elliot Hackley, he exempted from sale sections Nos. 52, 53, and 54, in township No. 2 of range No. 3 west, under an impression that, at some future day, a well-founded claim might be made to them, and be decided without unnecessary trouble; also, that section No. 6 in township No. 1 of range No. 3 west, having been returned as public land, was, as such, exposed to sale, and purchased by William Tigner, though claimed by the petitioner and Hackley. Major Freeman's certificate is dated the 2d of January, 1816.

Robert Williams, Esq., who was a member of the Board appointed to adjust land titles west of Pearl river, certifies that, from an inspection of the original title papers in this case, he believes they were honestly executed; and that he had never heard it intimated that they were spurious. His statement is not under oath, and is dated the 5th of January, 1816.

Samuel P. Moore swears, that he was acquainted with Joseph Pannil, and that he visited him and his family in the year 1796 or 1797, when they resided on a plantation commonly called Fontainbleau, lying in Wilkinson county, in the State of Mississippi; and that, from the appearance of the cultivation and improvements, he was of opinion it had been inhabited a considerable time. His affidavit is dated the 12th November, 1821.

Charles Tessier, of Baton Rouge, on the fifth day of February, 1822, swears that he has examined the patent for one thousand arpents of land granted by the Baron de Carondelet to Joseph Pannil, on the 20th day of June, 1795; that it is a true and genuine document in his own hand; and that, at that time and long before, he acted as first clerk in the Secretary of State's office in the city of New Orleans.

Thomas Freeman, the late Surveyor General, on the 3d of July, 1821, writes thus to the petitioner: "I received your letter of the 27th ultimo, on the subject of the approaching sales of public lands in this district. Your letter arrived here the day before the sale commenced. I submitted it to the Register and Receiver, who are commissioners of the sales: explained to them what had been done at a former sale with respect to your tract in Wilkinson county. They did not conceive themselves authorized to take notice of the claim, and, of course, they offered for sale, as public lands, the tract you claim in Wilkinson. It sold very low, one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and probably was bought for you.

The evidence of the sale of lands claimed by the petitioner, on the 3d of July, 1821, is satisfactory.

George Poindexter, Esq., is now a sub-purchaser of seven hundred and sixty-five acres, and on the 12th September, 1821, gave notice to the tenant of the petitioner that he would, at the end of three months, enter on and take possession of the same.

In the "articles of agreement and cession" between the United States and the State of Georgia, is this condition: "That all persons who, on the 27th day of October, 1795, were actual settlers within the Territory thus ceded, shall be confirmed in all the grants legally and fully executed prior to that day, by the former British Government of West Florida, or by the Government of Spain."

Under an act of the 3d of March, 1803, every person whose rights were intended to be protected by the above recited clause of the "articles of agreement and cession," was confirmed in his claim.

The Board of Commissioners appointed to decide on titles to lands lying west of Pearl river rejected the application of Samuel C. Young, because it was not proved that Joseph Pannil was a resident within the limits of the Mississippi Territory on the 27th of October, 1795.

Some time after, Samuel C. Young preferred his petition to Congress, asking to be confirmed in his title to the two thousand eight hundred arpents of land which he had purchased of Joseph Pannil, stating that he expected to be dispossessed by Government, as said Pannil was not a resident of that country on the 27th of October, 1795. In the absence of proof of this fact, an unfavorable report was made on the 17th of March, 1810.

The affidavit of Mr. Moore is not sufficient to warrant the conclusion that the act of the 3d of March, 1803, would embrace this case.

Inasmuch as the committee believe it has not been the policy of Congress to grant relief to those who claimed lands lying within the cession of Georgia, when there has been a failure to prove residence on the 27th of October, 1795, the adoption of the following resolution is recommended:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

[1st Session.]

INDIAN GRANT TO CAPTAIN JONATHAN CARVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 24, 1822.

WASHINGTON, April 23, 1822.

To the House of Representatives:

In compliance with the resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 29th January last, requesting the President of the United States to cause to be communicated to that House certain information relative to the claim made by Jonathan Carver to certain lands within the United States, near the Falls of St. Anthony, I now transmit a report from the Secretary of the Treasury, which, with the accompanying documents, contain all the information on this subject in the possession of the Executive.

JAMES MONROE.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 22, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 29th of January last, which has been referred to this Department, I have the honor to transmit the enclosed report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the copy of a letter from Colonel H. Leavenworth to the said commissioner, which contain all the information in the possession of this Department relative to the claim of Jonathan Carver to certain lands within the United States, near the Falls of St. Anthony.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 8, 1822.

In obedience to the resolve of the House of Representatives of the United States, of January 29, 1822, "that the President of the United States be requested to cause to be communicated to this House such information as may be obtained from any report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office heretofore made on the subject, or from other documents in any of the public offices relative to the claim made by Jonathan Carver, to certain lands within the United States near the Falls of St. Anthony," which is this day referred to me, I have the honor to state that, in the winter of 1766, or 1767, Jonathan Carver resided at or near the Falls of St. Anthony, on the river Mississippi, being the only white person there, and asserted that the Naudowessie Indians gave him about one hundred miles square of land on the east side of the Mississippi, between the Falls of St. Anthony and Lake Pepin.

By the proclamation of the King of Great Britain, dated October 7, 1763, the purchase of lands from the Indians is prohibited in the following terms, viz: "We do strictly enjoin and require that no private person do presume to make any purchase from the said Indians, of any lands reserved to the said Indians within those parts of our colonies where we have thought proper to allow settlements; but that if, at any time, any of the said Indians should be inclined to dispose of the said lands, the same shall be purchased only for us, in our name, at some public meeting or assembly of the said Indians to be held for that purpose by the Governor or commander-in-chief of our colony, respectively, within which they shall lie."

Captain Jonathan Carver had been an officer in the British service in the war which terminated by the treaty concluded at Paris, February 10, 1763; his pretended purchase was, therefore, in direct violation of the rules and regulations of his own Government, and in any court under that Government would have been judged null and void.

The same correct policy which dictated the proclamation of October 7, 1763, has been invariably adhered to by the United States, and was ably supported by their ministers during the negotiation at Ghent in 1814, particularly in the note of September 26, addressed to the British commissioners.

I beg leave to transmit, as a part of this report, a copy of a letter from Colonel Henry Leavenworth, of the army of the United States, containing information on the subject which, it is presumed, will be deemed valuable.

Frequent applications have been made to this office by gentlemen from various parts of the United States, requesting an opinion on the validity of Carver's claim; to all of which, the answer has been that the claim is unfounded, and of no validity.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOSIAH MEIGS.

HON. SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

SIR:

WASHINGTON, July 28, 1821.

Agreeably to your request, I have the honor to inform you what I have understood from the Indians of the Sioux nation, as well as some facts within my own knowledge, as to what is commonly termed "Carver's grant."

The grant purports to be made by the chiefs of the Sioux of the Plain, and one of the chiefs uses the sign of a serpent, and the other a turtle, purporting that their names are derived from those animals.

The land lies on the east side of the Mississippi. The Indians do not recognize or acknowledge the grant to be valid, and they (among others) assign the following reasons:

1st. The Sioux of the plain never owned a foot of land on the east side of the Mississippi. The Sioux nation is divided into two grand divisions, viz: the Sioux of the lake, or perhaps, more literally, Sioux of the river, and Sioux of the plain. The former subsists by hunting and fishing, and usually move from place to place by water, in canoes, during the summer season, and travel on the ice in the winter when not on their hunting excursions.

The latter subsist entirely by hunting, and have no canoes, nor do they know but little about the use of them. They reside in the large prairies west of the Mississippi, and follow the buffalo, upon which they entirely subsist; these are called the Sioux of the plain, and never owned land on the east side of the Mississippi.

2d. The Indians say they have no knowledge of any such chiefs as those who have signed the grant to Carver, either amongst the Sioux of the river or the Sioux of the plain. They say that if Captain Carver ever did obtain a deed or grant, it was signed by some foolish young men who were not chiefs, and who were not authorized to make a grant. Among the Sioux of the river there are no such names.

3d. They say that the Indians "never received any thing for the land," and they have no intention to part with it without a consideration.

From my knowledge of the Indians I am induced to think that they would not make so considerable a grant, and have it go into full effect, without receiving a substantial consideration.

4th. They have, and ever have had, the possession of the land, and intend to keep it. I know that they are very particular in making every person who wishes to cut timber on that tract, obtain their permission to do so, and to obtain payment for it. In the month of May last some Frenchmen brought a large raft of red cedar timber out of the Chippewa river, which timber was cut on the tract before mentioned. The Indians at one of the villages on the Mississippi, where the principal chief resided, compelled the Frenchmen to land the raft, and would not permit them to pass until they had received pay for the timber; and the Frenchmen were compelled to leave their raft with the Indians until they went to Prairie du Chien, and obtained the necessary articles, and made the payment required.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. LEAVENWORTH.

No. 363.

[1st SESSION.]

OFFICIAL CONDUCT OF JOHN BRAHAN, LATE RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEY AT THE HUNTSVILLE LAND OFFICE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 4, 1822.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 2, 1822.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 18th ultimo, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to lay before the House "a statement showing the amount of Public Moneys for which John Brahan, late Receiver of public money at the Land Office at Huntsville, was indebted to the Government at the time he was dismissed from office; the amount of public money in the hands of said Receiver at the end of each quarter of every year, from the 1st of January, 1817, until the time of his dismissal; all information obtained or received by the said Secretary as to the use the said Receiver made of said money; copies of all letters and instructions from the Department to the said Receiver within the said period; all correspondence in the possession of the Department, and other information obtained by the Secretary thereof in relation to any improper conduct, violation of official trust, or omission of duty on the part of the said Receiver; together with a statement of the time at which the Secretary was first notified, or had reason to suspect such improper conduct, violation of official trust, or omission of duty; the measures adopted to recover said money, if any; the time when they were commenced; what agent was employed for that purpose; what he accomplished; the compensation allowed him for the same; if any mortgage or deed of trust on land had been given; what land; the price at which it was originally sold by the Government; whether, in the opinion of the said Secretary, the valuation of the land has depreciated, and, if so, whether, making all due allowance for such depreciation, the said debt is well secured to the Government; who are the said Receiver's securities; in what sum bound, and what proceedings have been instituted against them;" I have the honor to submit the statements and correspondence required by the said resolution.

Before the year 1818 the amount of sales in the district of Madison county was inconsiderable: in the early part of that year, and of the year following, the sales were extensive, and the prices given for the land, when offered at public sale, were highly extravagant. Previous to that time nothing had occurred to excite suspicion; but, in the month of November of the same year, the want of punctuality in rendering the monthly accounts required of the Receivers of public lands, excited some suspicion, and produced the letter of the 26th of November. The failure of that letter to produce the transmission of the accounts then in arrear, induced me to write the letter of the 24th of March, 1819. In the month of June the accounts were rendered, and disclosed the fact that the Receiver had, during the preceding nine months, retained nearly $80,000 in his hands according to his own statement.

No charge of malversation in office was ever made to this Department during the whole of this period against the official conduct of the Receiver, nor was any suspicion entertained that he had misapplied the public money before the autumn of 1818; and the failure to render his accounts with punctuality was then the only ground of suspicion.

I have not the means of knowing whether the land transferred in trust for securing the debt has depreciated in value, or whether the debt is well secured; but the information which has been received has led to the belief that it is.

From the letter of the First Comptroller of the Treasury, it appears that there is no evidence that bond and security was ever given by the said Receiver, and that, consequently, no suit or action at law has been instituted against such securities.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

P. P. BARBOUR, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, May 3, 1822.

I received your note of the 1st instant, in which you request to be informed who are the sureties of John Brahan, late Receiver at Huntsville, and whether any suit has been brought against them.

In reply, I have the honor to state that, on carefully examining the files of this office, no bond of John Brahan's can be found; and, from a communication received from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, of yesterday's date, (a copy of which is enclosed,) it does not appear that Mr. Brahan ever gave a bond as Receiver.

No suit was instituted against him, in consequence of his having executed a deed of trust, conveying all his property to the United States, and having assigned to them a number of notes of hand, amounting to $46,002 12.

With considerations of high respect, I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

JOS. ANDERSON, Comptroller.

Hon. Wm. H. CRAWFORD.

SIR:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 2, 1822.

I answer your note, of this day, that John Brahan's commission was sent to him from the Treasury Department April 10, 1809, with the form of a bond for $10,000, which he was requested to execute with one or more sureties. On the 12th of May, 1809, he acknowledged the receipt of the commission, and promised to send the bond. No bond can be found in this office.

Very respectfully, &c.

JOSIAH MEIGS.

The COMPTROLLER OF THE TREASURY.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, REGISTER'S OFFICE, May 1, 1822.

I hereby certify that Obadiah Jones received a warrant, dated the 8th of April, 1820, for one hundred and twenty-six dollars and fifty cents, being the amount allowed to him for his services and expenses for fourteen days' riding, &c., in securing a debt due to the United States from John Brahan, Receiver of Public Moneys in Alabama, including the drawing, recording, and copying a deed of trust.

JOSEPH NOURSE, Register.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 26, 1818.

No return has been received from you since that dated on the 30th of June. The pressure of business arising from the late sales in your district, and to which you some time since attributed the delay in preparing and rendering your returns, it is presumed exists no longer; you will therefore transmit them forthwith.

The construction which I shall give to the act fixing the compensation of Receivers and Registers of the different land offices will enable them to pay clerk hire to a reasonable amount, in proportion to the service rendered, where the commission of one per cent. shall exceed the maximum of the compensation fixed by law.

It is, however, intended to keep the expenditure of clerk hire under the control of the Treasury, in order to prevent extravagance.

I am, &c.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JOHN BRAHAN, Esq., Receiver of Public Moneys at Huntsville, Alab. Ter.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 8, 1819.

In the return of the Planters and Merchants' Bank of Huntsville, I perceive a credit given to the Treasurer of the United States for a "special deposit" of $16,000, made by you on the 10th ultimo; you will be pleased to state what this deposit consisted of. If it consists of moneys which you are authorized to receive, I wish to know why it has been made special; if not, I wish to be informed of the circumstances that have induced you to receive moneys that the bank will not credit as cash.

I am, &c.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JOHN BRAHAN, Esq., Receiver Public Moneys, Huntsville, Alab. Ter.

SIR:

RECEIVER'S OFFICE, AT HUNTSVILLE, A. T., February 8, 1819.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th ultimo, in which you request me to explain the reason why a deposit of $16,000 to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, made by me in the Planters and Merchants' Bank of Huntsville, was a special one. It appears, by a resolution of the board of directors of the Planters and Merchants' Bank of Huntsville, that was made perhaps the early part of December, that the notes of that bank and the Bank of the United States were the only notes that would be received on general deposit, and the notes of all other banks would be received on special deposit. The deposit, as above named, was made of notes such as I was authorized to receive, of different respectable banks who paid specie for their notes, to wit: the notes on the banks of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, the State Bank of Tennessee, and the Nashville Bank, &c. &c.; and, as soon as I found that this resolution would be adhered to in the deposits made of the moneys belonging to the United States, I informed you of it in my letter of the 18th of December last. This letter of mine, I presume, you had not received on the 8th of January, the date of yours. Please to inform me what I must do in the business; whether to continue to make my deposits in this way or not. The special deposit stands nearly as other deposits, and, I presume, can make but little difference. However, it was a measure I did not approve of, which I informed the President and directors of, and I took the earliest opportunity of informing you of it.

I am, with respect, your obedient servant,

JOHN BRAHAN, Receiver of Public Moneys.

Hon. Wm. H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 24, 1819.

Your letter of the 15th ultimo, enclosing the return for the month of September last, has been received.

It appears, from that return, that the receipts in Mississippi stock, during that month, amounted to \$377,663 73 $\frac{1}{4}$, which has been transmitted to the General Land Office contemporaneously with the return.

Having, on the 8th day of December last, instructed the Commissioner of the General Land Office to inform the Receivers and Registers that a reasonable allowance would be made for clerk hire, where the salary and commissions should exceed three thousand dollars, I have felt some surprise at the delay which has occurred in the transmission of your accounts. You are now six months in arrear; and, judging of the future by the past, there is no just reason to expect your accounts will be rendered more punctually during the ensuing, than they have been the past year. This state of things, there can be no hesitation in saying, will not be tolerated. If the monthly accounts cannot be forwarded regularly, in the course of each succeeding month, by you, there will be no difficulty in having it done by some other person.

It is extremely desirable that the conduct of the officers of the Government, especially those who have charge of the public money, should not only be correct, but that there should be no possible cause of suspecting them to be incorrect. If there should exist any peculiarity in the situation of an officer, which is calculated to excite suspicion, it is more imperiously his interest and duty to exert more than ordinary diligence in the discharge of his official duties. The office of Receiver of Public Moneys, in a land district, is one which presents strong and continued temptations to the misapplication of the public money which is received. If the officer should be, at the same time, a director of a bank established at the seat of the office, the facility with which public money, applied to individual and speculative purposes, may be temporarily replaced, in case of emergency, the temptation to abuses of this nature is greatly enhanced; but, if the payments to the Receiver may be made in a medium which can be purchased greatly below the rate at which it is receivable, the temptation to the substitution of that depreciated medium for the money which may have been received will be still more enhanced. I perceive in your return for September, that more than $53,000, in money, remained in your hands at the end of that month. Upon referring to the receipts which you have forwarded, it appears that $44,036 were deposited by you in the month of October, and that large sums have been deposited since that time. These circumstances are mentioned with a view to impress you with a due sense of the delicacy of your situation, and to show the necessity of the most extreme circumspection in the discharge of your official duties. It is hardly possible for any situation to be more so than yours; and nothing short of the most rigid, and, permit me to add, the most prompt execution of them, will be sufficient to guard you against suspicion. It is indispensable that the stock received each month should be transmitted in the course of the succeeding month: let the whole which is now in hand be immediately sent to the Land Office, and suffer no accumulation of it hereafter in your hands.

I am very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JOHN BRAHAN, Esq., Receiver of Public Moneys, Huntsville, Alabama.

SIR:

RECEIVER'S OFFICE, HUNTSVILLE, A. T., June 28, 1819.

I have the mortification to inform you that there is a considerable deficiency in my cash account, the cause I can only account for in part. The business being large, and the time to sell and receive being only two weeks at each sale, I was always fearful that, in the hurried state of things, I should sustain considerable loss. I am now convinced of the fact, and beg leave to inform you that I am now closely employed in getting the books of the office up, and, as soon as that can be done, and I can procure and deposite the balance due to Government, it will then be my wish to retire from an office of so much risk and responsibility as the one I hold. This circumstance has given me more concern than any occurrence of my life, and the deficiency shall be made up as quick as possible at any sacrifice. I think by the last of September I can make all square; at all events, will do all in my power by that time. I have been in public service upwards of twenty years, and this is the first time in my life that my accounts have ever exhibited any loss of public money. I must, therefore, beg a little indulgence to enable me to arrange the business, as it is my determination that the Government shall not lose any thing by me, even if it takes all I have to make good the loss. Property of all sorts is very low at this time, and I am well aware that I must make a great sacrifice to raise the money, but I shall not hesitate to do it.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

JOHN BRAHAN, R. P. M.

The Hon. WM. H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, August 12, 1819.

Your letter of the 28th of June last, but postmarked the 8th ultimo, has been received.

The information which it contains has created no surprise. The withholding of your account, and the retention of nearly $80,000 in your hands, from month to month, could leave no room to doubt of the misapplication of the public money to that amount.

It is now important to secure, with as little delay as possible to the Government, the re-payment of the sum which has been applied to your private use. For this purpose I have requested a gentleman of your acquaintance to call upon you to receive such security as shall be in your power to give. Considering the manner in which this demand has been created, it is expected you will seize with avidity the earliest opportunity of repairing the injury which the Government has suffered by your acts.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JOHN BRAHAN, Esq. Receiver of P. M. Huntsville, Alabama.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, August 12, 1819.

The failure of the Receiver of the Public Moneys at Huntsville to render his accounts with punctuality, and the state of such as were rendered, excited well founded suspicions that he had applied a large amount of the public moneys to his private use. Recently his accounts have been rendered as late as the month of April last, and show a balance retained in his hands of nearly $80,000.

A few days past a letter was received from Mr. Brahan, bearing date the 28th of June last, but postmarked the 8th ultimo, in which he acknowledges a considerable deficiency in his cash account, and ascribes it, in part, to the extensive sales which had been made, and the short time allowed for the public sales. He has not stated the amount of the deficiency; but, from the amount which he has retained in his hands for the last six months, as appears by his accounts when rendered, I am persuaded it is not much short of $80,000.

It is perfectly idle in Mr. Brahan to attempt to conceal the cause of the deficiency; it is perfectly known here, and still better understood by him. It is all important to the Government that this sum should be immediately secured if he has property sufficient to do it. I have, therefore, to request that you will, immediately after the receipt of this letter, proceed to Huntsville, and require of Mr. Brahan to secure to the United States the amount of the deficit. If deeds of trust, which authorize the trustee to sell the property without any judicial procedure, are recognized by the laws of the Territory, they will be preferable to mortgages, which require time, and involve expense. It is presumed that Mr. Brahan will not hesitate to execute any instrument or deed which you shall deem necessary, to secure the debt to the United States. Enclosed I send you a certified copy of his last return, which will enable you to ascertain the balance due by him; to this balance you will add the amount of moneys received since, which can be ascertained by reference to the books of the Register; from that sum deduct the sums which he has since paid; the difference will be the sum due according to his own statement. You will, however, avoid any expression in the writings which you may have executed that will preclude the Government from making such further demands upon him as shall be found to be due upon the settlement of his accounts.

A reasonable compensation will be made for the services which you may render, which shall be remitted in a draft upon the Huntsville bank as soon as your account shall be received.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

OBADIAH JONES, Esq. Limestone county, Alabama.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 18, 1820.

I have just received a letter from Mr. Brahan, your predecessor in office, in which, after giving a detailed statement of his means to discharge the debt due by him to the United States, he asks for some indulgence as it regards the payment of a portion of the first instalment.

If, therefore, the trustees, of which you are one, shall be of opinion that Mr. Brahan is making every proper exertion to meet his engagements with the public, they are at liberty to comply with his request.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

OBADIAH JONES, Esq. Receiver of Public Moneys, Huntsville.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 12, 1821.

In answer to your several communications relative to the debt of Mr. Brahan, I beg leave to observe that this Department is not fitted for the management of mercantile transactions, and it is with extreme reluctance that it engages in any transaction of this nature.

If the purchases of cotton, proposed by Mr. Brahan, were made in the early part of the season, there is some grounds to apprehend loss upon the investments.

I have no objection to your lending your name to him, so as to place the proceeds of the cotton he may ship to New York under your control, as one of the trustees for the United States. So far there will be no commitment of the Treasury. If he has been permitted by you to invest in cotton any part of the proceeds of the bonds, notes, and debts, which were assigned to you in trust, it will be highly expedient that you should preserve over the investment such a control as will secure the payment of the proceeds to the Treasurer of the United States. From the conduct of Mr. Brahan in this affair, and especially from the confidence which his intimate acquaintances repose in him, I have no doubt of the fairness of any transaction in which he may have engaged on this subject. I rely, with the most unlimited confidence, in your attention and judgment, and shall be satisfied with any thing which you shall do with the consent of a majority of the trustees, keeping in view always, that nothing is to be received which is not convertible into specie at the will of the United States. This reservation is not to be understood to restrain the exercise of your discretion in relation to investments in cotton, at the risk of Mr. Brahan, which is to be shipped to New York subject to your order.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 23, 1822.

JOSIAH MEIGS.

Copy of a conveyance of certain property to the United States by John Brahan.

This indenture, made this 13th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1819, between John Brahan and Mary Brahan, his wife, of the first part, and Obadiah Jones, Clement C. Clay, John W. Walker, Le Roy Pope, and John Read, of the second, (the said parties of the first and second part being all citizens of the county of Madison, and State of Alabama,) and William H. Crawford, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and his successors in office, of the third part, witnesseth, that the said John Brahan and Mary, his wife, in order to secure the payment of the debts hereinafter described, and in consideration of the sum of one dollar to them in hand, paid by the said Obadiah Jones, Clement C. Clay, John W. Walker, Le Roy Pope, and John Read, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have granted, bargained, sold, aliened, enfeoffed, and confirmed, and by these presents do grant, bargain, sell, alien, enfeoff, and confirm, to the said Obadiah Jones, Clement C. Clay, John W. Walker, Le Roy Pope, and John Read, the following described tracts and parcels of land and lots, lying and being in the county aforesaid, to wit: the northeast quarter of section number thirty-six, in township three, range one west of the basis meridian; the southeast quarter of section number twenty-five, in township three, and range one west; the northeast and northwest quarters of sections number thirty-one, township three, and range one, east of the basis meridian; the southeast and northwest quarters of section number thirty-two, in township three, range one, east; the northwest quarter of section number two, in township four, and range one, west of the basis meridian; and one hundred and forty acres, being part of the northeast quarter of section number two, township four, and range one, west; together with the following described lots of ground, lying and being within the town of Huntsville, in said county, viz: the lot known in the plan of said town as number sixty; the lot known in the plan of said town as number fifty-three; and the house and lot adjoining the public square, bounded by Stephen Neale's lot on the western side, and Herbert Kyle and Dougherty's on the eastern; together with all buildings and appurtenances to said lands and lots in any way belonging; to have and to hold the aforesaid lands and lots, with the buildings, &c., to the said Obadiah Jones, Clement C. Clay, John W. Walker, Le Roy Pope, and John Read, to the only proper use of them, their heirs, and assigns, forever. In trust, nevertheless, and upon the following conditions: whereas, the said John Brahan is indebted to the Treasury of the United States as Receiver of Public Moneys, in the sum of eighty-one thousand nine hundred and sixty-three dollars and twenty cents, to secure which debt, in part, the following described notes have been assigned to the said Obadiah Jones, Clement C. Clay, John W. Walker, Le Roy Pope, and John Read, viz: one on James Clemens and Charles McClellan, due the 22d March, 1821, for four thousand dollars, given to said John Brahan; one on said James Clemens and Charles McClellan, for four thousand dollars, given to said John Brahan, due on the 22d March, 1821; one on Robert Fearn & Co., for four thousand dollars, given to said John Brahan, due on the 19th of January, 1821; one other on Robert Fearn & Co., for four thousand dollars, given to said John Brahan, due on the 19th of January, 1821; one on Frederick W. James and Archibald B. Dandridge, for two thousand two hundred and twenty-five cents, given to said John Brahan, due 1st of March, 1821; one on Frederick W. Jones and Archibald B. Dandridge, for four thousand dollars, given to said Brahan, due the 1st of March, 1820; one on Samuel Clack and others, given to said John Brahan, due 15th of January, 1820, for three thousand four hundred and fifty dollars; one on John Boardman, given to said John Brahan, for one thousand one hundred dollars, due 25th of December, 1820; one on John Boardman, for one thousand one hundred dollars, given to said John Brahan, due 25th of December, 1821; one on John C. Ayres and others, for five hundred and fifty dollars and eighty-nine cents, given to said John Brahan, due 1st of January, 1821; one on Robert L. Walton, for one thousand dollars, given to said John Brahan, due 1st of January, 1820; three on John McKinley and Thomas Bibb, given to said John Brahan, for one thousand five hundred dollars each, one due on the 1st of June, 1820; another on 1st of June 1821; and another on 1st of June, 1822; two on Brice M. Garner and Charles Boyles, for two thousand dollars each, given to said John Brahan, one due 1st of June, 1821; the other 1st of June, 1822; two on White & Read, for one thousand four hundred and forty dollars each, given to said John Brahan, one due 15th of April, 1821; the other on the 15th of April, 1822; two on John P. McConnel and Robert H. McErwin, for one thousand one hundred dollars each, given to said John Brahan, one due the 3d of September, 1819; and the other the 3d of December, 1819; and a bond on Solomon Marshall, for two thousand dollars, given to said John Brahan, due 12th of May, 1821. Now, should the said John Brahan pay into the Treasury of the United States, or should there be a sufficient sum collected on the before described notes by the said trustees, together with such payment as may be made by said John Brahan, on or before the 23d day of July next, as to amount to the sum of forty thousand nine hundred and eighty-one dollars and sixty cents, and should said John Brahan pay into the Treasury of the United States, or should there be collected by the said trustees on said notes, together with the payments to be made by said John Brahan on or before the 23d day of April, 1821, the further sum of forty thousand nine hundred and eighty-one dollars and sixty cents, then all estate hereby conveyed to said Obadiah Jones, Clement C. Clay, John W. Walker, Le Roy Pope, and John Read, shall altogether cease, determine, and be void, and the said trustees shall immediately re-convey to said John Brahan by their indenture under seal, the whole of said above described lots and lands, and shall re-assign to said John Brahan such of said notes as may not have been collected; but if, on the said 23d day of July next, the said sum of forty thousand nine hundred and eighty-one dollars and sixty cents shall not be fully paid and discharged, the said trustees shall, so soon thereafter as the said William H. Crawford, Secretary as aforesaid, or his successors in office, shall require, proceed to sell for ready money, to the highest bidder, so much of the before described lands and lots as will satisfy and discharge the said sum of forty thousand nine hundred and eighty-one dollars and sixty cents, together with the costs of such partial execution of this trust; and out of the proceeds of such sale said trustees shall first pay and satisfy the said last mentioned sum of money, together with the costs, and the remainder, if any there be, shall be paid over in part discharge of the said further sum of forty thousand nine hundred and eighty-one dollars and sixty cents intended to be secured by this trust. And should the said further sum of forty thousand nine hundred and eighty-one dollars and sixty cents not be paid and fully discharged on the 23d day of April, 1821, neither by collections on said notes or otherwise, the said trustees shall, so soon thereafter as they may be required by said William H. Crawford, or his successors, proceed to sell said lands and lots, or such part thereof as may not have been previously sold, as will be sufficient to raise the said last mentioned sum of money, and, out of the proceeds thereof, first pay so much as may be due to the Treasury of the United States as aforesaid, and the costs of executing this trust, and the remainder, if any, shall pay over to said John Brahan, or his order on demand; but it is understood between the whole of said parties that, previous to any sale to be made as aforesaid, the said sale shall be advertised in some newspaper published in Huntsville, three weeks before the time of such sale, and all such sales shall be made in the town of Huntsville, or on the premises. And should the whole of said lands and lots not be sold for the purposes aforesaid, then said trustees agree and bind themselves to re-convey the remainder of said lands and lots which may remain unsold; and it is, moreover, understood that, in case of the death, removal, or absence from the State of either of said trustees, that the survivors, or those remaining or being in the State, shall have and exercise all and every power or powers, therein delegated to the trustees aforesaid; and that nothing herein contained shall be deemed or construed to release, or in any manner acquit, the said John Brahan from any claim for any sum or sums of money which may appear to be due from him to the Government of the United States in his said capacity on a final settlement of his accounts.

In testimony whereof, we have hereunto set our hands and seals at Huntsville, on the day and year first above written.

This day, personally appeared before me at said county, the above John Brahan, Obadiah Jones, Clement C. Clay, John W. Walker, Le Roy Pope, and John Read, exhibited this deed, and acknowledged the same to have been by them respectively sealed and delivered at the day of its date. And on said day, at said county, I exhibited and explained this deed to said Mary Brahan, separate and apart from her said husband, and on such her separate examination, she acknowledged that she signed, sealed, and delivered this as her deed, freely, and without any fear, threats, or compulsion from her said husband.

Given under the hand and seal of me, David Moore, one of the justices of the county court and of the quorum of said county, at said county, the 30th day of October, 1819.

LEAD MINES IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, ON THE 7TH DAY OF MAY, 1822.

To the Senate of the United States:

WASHINGTON, May 7, 1822.

In compliance with the resolution of the Senate, of the 25th of April, requesting certain information respecting the lead mine lands of the United States, I herewith transmit a report from the Secretary of War.

JAMES MONROE.

SIR:

WAR DEPARTMENT, May 3, 1822.

In reply to the call of the Senate, of the 25th of last month, relative to the lead mines of Missouri, and referred to this Department, I have the honor to transmit, herewith, sundry papers (marked A, B, and C) received from the office of ordnance, which embrace all the information which this Department is, at this time, enabled to give upon a subject which was referred to it on the 29th November last from the Department of the Treasury.

The papers received from that Department were transferred to that of the Ordnance, with instructions to report thereon; it being intended, when the business of the Department will admit, to investigate the subject; and, after maturing the necessary arrangements, to invite, by public advertisement, under the leading features of the report, settlers and workmen upon the mine lands of the United States, under a conviction that, with suitable aid and strict attention, they may be made a productive source of revenue.

In the interim, the parties applying for leases have been furnished with a sufficient outline for their direction in locating the grounds, and effecting a completion of their leases, subject to the final decision of the Executive.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

J. C. CALHOUN.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

SIR:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, May 3, 1822.

In obedience to your directions, I have the honor to submit, herewith, copies of all the documents on record in this office, which have relation to the lead mine lands of the United States, and furnishing all the information called for by the Senate, of the 25th of April, which this Department is at this time enabled to give upon the subject.

The papers referred to are as follows:

- Those marked A, containing the letters addressed from this office to the persons applying for leases of a portion of the above lands; with instructions to sundry officers, issued by the Department of War and this office, for aiding in locating and surveying the lands embraced in said leases.

That marked B, being a copy of the report made by this office to the Department of War, furnishing all the information received respecting those mine lands, with the proposal of a plan for rendering them more productive to the public revenue.

The paper marked C, containing a copy of a conditional lease proposed by this Department in the cases of Carneal and Johnson, and others, to be finally acted upon hereafter.

I have the honor to be sir, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

G. BOMFORD,

Lieutenant Colonel on ordnance duty.

Hon. J. C. CALHOUN, Department of War.

Copies of letters from the Ordnance Department in relation to the lead mine lands of the United States.

SIR:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, January 4, 1822.

I have it in direction from the honorable the Secretary of War, to state to you that he has had under consideration the proposition of Messrs. Carneal and Johnson for leasing from the United States such a quantity of land in the State of Illinois as the Government may be disposed to grant, for the purpose, on their part, of discovering and working therein the lead ore which it may be supposed to contain, on such conditions as may be mutually agreed upon.

That the Secretary is disposed to encourage the proposal, so far as to allow the said Carneal and Johnson, and they are hereby authorized, for that purpose, to proceed in the selection of such a tract of land, to the amount of one hundred and sixty acres, in the State of Illinois, as they may judge will promote their views.

That, upon such a selection, they shall make a report of the same to the Department of War, designating the precise situation, boundaries, nature of the soil, and other particulars necessary to an accurate knowledge thereof.

That, upon receiving such report and approval thereof, the proposition will be taken into immediate consideration.

I am also directed to inform you that, in the want of accurate information in regard to the present situation of the mine lands of the United States generally, and in order, also, to take further time to examine into that subject, and the laws and regulations which have been passed in relation thereto, the Government does not deem it expedient to do any thing further in the premises, than the permission now given to Messrs. Carneal and Johnson.

In order, however, to enable them to form a judgment of the terms and conditions upon which leases will, in future, be granted, a form of one is herewith furnished, and, according to which, a lease will be granted to Messrs. Carneal and Johnson, in the event of their proposal being finally accepted, of which there can be little or no doubt from the understanding which has already taken place on the subject.

It may be proper to add, that the terms of three years introduced into the form of lease now furnished, is grounded upon the law of 3d of March, 1807, which limits the duration of leases to be granted by the President of the United States to that period; but in order to balance any disadvantage, which might be expected to result therefrom to the lessees, the privilege and preference to be allowed them for a renewal of their grants, will be inserted in their future leases, and which cannot fail to serve also as an encouragement for the faithful performance of their engagement.

Very respectfully, I am, sir, &c.

GEORGE BOMFORD,

Lieutenant Colonel on ordnance duty.

Hon. R. M. JOHNSON, Senate United States.

NOTE.—A similar letter was addressed to Mr. Johnson on the part of Messrs. Sugget and Payne.

SIR:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, February 1, 1822.

In the letter which I addressed to you on the fourth of last month by order of the Secretary of War, and which communicated the outlines of a lease you might expect to be given to Messrs. Carneal and Johnson, and to Messrs. Suggett and Payne, as soon as the ground was selected, I stated they would be at liberty to locate any point within the State of Illinois. It is since concluded not to limit the leases to that boundary, but to extend their privilege of selection to any point between the river Mississippi and lake Michigan, according to the reservations and treaties of the United States, whether the same be within the State of Illinois or the Territory of Michigan; and when the selection shall be made, the parties are authorized to proceed to work the lead mines which may be discovered, in conformity with the former stipulations.

Very respectfully, &c.,

GEORGE BOMFORD,

Lieutenant Colonel on ordnance duty.

Hon. R. M. JOHNSON, Senate United States.

SIR:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, February 13, 1822.

I have it in direction from the honorable the Secretary of War, to state to you that measures are in contemplation requiring the co-operation of this Department, and that you have been appointed, in order to render such assistance as in the service (herein more fully detailed) shall be deemed expedient and necessary.

The Government, through the Department of War, in the beginning of last month, granted conditional leases of lands in the State of Illinois, (supposed to contain lead ore,) to Messrs. Carneal and Johnson, and Messrs. Suggett and Payne, amounting to one hundred and sixty acres to each of the two parties. The copy of those conditional leases is herewith furnished to you as explaining the views of Government in regard to such grants in general. It has since, however, been determined not to confine the locations alluded to to the State of Illinois, but to extend the privilege to the lands ceded in 1816 by the Chippewas, Ottawas, and Pottawatamies, as is more fully described in the extracts from the treaty enclosed to you, herewith, and by which you will be governed on that head. You will, immediately upon the receipt of this order, prepare yourself to meet the lessees already named, on or about the 1st of March, at the "Great Crossings," of Kentucky, and proceed with them in exploring the country where the locations are likely to be made; and when the sites shall be determined on by the lessees, and decisive measures taken to work the same, that you make or cause to be made, accurate surveys thereof, designating not only the precise situation of the grounds, but of so much of the lands and country immediately adjoining, and more or less distant, as shall convey to Government accurate knowledge of the whole; furnishing, likewise, such plats or maps as may serve for record in the Department of War.

You will cause due care to be taken to avoid the interfering, by the present parties, with any locations or works on lead mine lands which may appear already established under proper authority: but as the old leases from the United States, (within the knowledge of the Department of War,) have expired, few or none, it is believed, can arise. A report, however, must be rendered of every discovery that shall be made by you, or the parties with whom you shall be acting, of all lead mines, and of leases, if any thereof, in order that Government may be enabled to grant proper conveyances in future, and avoid interfering with old rights or claims which may have been sanctioned by the United States.

You will, also, take every step which shall be in your power to satisfy any inquiries or remonstrances that may be made by any of the Indian tribes, and regular settlers, as to the authority under which the present lessees and yourself shall be acting, and of the views of the Government generally, giving, jointly with the Indian agent, every support to the lessees which shall enable them to proceed, without interruption or injury, in their contemplated locations and works.

In addition to this aid, it is contemplated to give the support and countenance that may be derivable from the appearance of a small portion of the regular troops, which may be found conveniently stationed for that purpose; in which case (their being employed at all) you will act according to the orders which may have been given by the Department of War to the commanding officer, and to the nature of the service in which you will be thus mutually engaged; carefully avoiding all hostile aggression upon, or collision with, the Indian tribes, or the regular settlers and miners.

It will be expected and required that you render to this office a monthly report of your proceedings, and oftener, if circumstances should admit thereof.

An extensive field for observation will be presented to you in the course of your intended operations, of which it will be expected that you will take every practicable opportunity for obtaining information upon all points relative to lead mine and mineral lands of the United States, that may prove useful to the Government in the prosecution of their future views and measures, and which, if performed with judgment and accuracy on your part, may tend to your own personal advantage by thus recommending yourself to the favorable notice of your Government.

Respectfully, &c.

GEORGE BOMFORD, *Lieutenant Colonel on ordnance duty.*Lieutenant CLARK BURDINE, of the Artillery, on ordnance duty at Washington.

SIR:

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, February 13, 1822.

Conditional leases were granted, on the 4th January, ult., to Messrs. Carneal and Johnson, and to Messrs. Suggett and Payne, (all of Kentucky,) for one hundred and sixty acres of land to each of the two parties, to be located in the State of Illinois, (and to be more precisely described hereafter,) for the purpose, on their part, of working any lead mines which may be discovered by them within said tract. It has since been agreed that the said location shall not be confined to the State of Illinois, but that the privilege shall be extended to any part of the lands ceded by the Ottaway, Chippewa, and Pottawatamie tribes or nations of Indians, to the United States, at St. Louis, on the 24th August, 1816, conformable to the treaty herewith enclosed; and you are hereby required to hold yourself in readiness, and to proceed with the before mentioned lessees, whenever they shall apply to you for that purpose, to the lands where they shall expect to open and work the lead mines contained therein, and within the bounds or extent of their lease, in order that you may explain to the Indians the views of the Government in granting said leases; in order to secure to the persons holding the same the uninterrupted prosecution of their location, and subsequent works and operations therein.

You will use as much despatch in the performance of this service as its nature may admit, and transmit to this Department an early report of your proceedings, together with such other information in regard to the particular object in view, and of the situation of other lead mines discovered and worked in the countries named in the present grant or lease, as may prove useful to the Government in their future views and operations in that quarter.

Respectfully, &c.

JOHN C. CALHOUN.

THOMAS FORSYTH, Esq., Indian Agent, St. Louis, Missouri.

NOTE.—Similar letters were addressed to Alexander Wolcott, Jun., and Nicholas Boilvin, Indian agents on the Mississippi.

SIR:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, April 15, 1822.

The applications addressed to you by Messrs. Duff Green and others, of Missouri, for leases of lead mine lands from the United States, and communicated by you to the Honorable Secretary of War, have been laid by him before this Department, in whose charge the issuing of such leases, under the sanction of the Department of War and the President of the United States, has recently been placed.

I have, therefore, the honor to state to you for your information, that, until the business of the lead mine lands can be revived under new and better regulations, and more full and direct information attained in regard thereto,

(and for which measures are now taking,) the Government has concluded to grant leases of small extent, say one hundred and sixty acres of land to each applicant or company, on certain privileges and conditions, the principal of which are: to continue for three years, the two first to be free from rent, and on the third a rent of one-tenth of the mineral raised to be paid to Government; the lessees to have the privilege of wood to erect their works, use of water, &c., usual in such cases, to be paid at a certain valuation for the improvements they shall have made at the close of the lease, if not removed by them, on the land located and worked; the selection of the land, and the commencement of the works (of mining) to be within nine months from the date of the lease, under penalty of forfeiture thereof, and no sub-leases allowable.

Should you think proper to desire leases for the applicants now named, this office will be prepared, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to take such measures as may be deemed requisite.

Very respectfully, &c.

GEORGE BOMFORD, Lieutenant Colonel on ordnance duty.

Hon. N. EDWARDS, Senate United States.

SIR:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, April 20, 1822.

Your letter to this Department, of the 18th instant, requesting that leases of lead mine lands may be issued to Messrs. Green & Estis, of Missouri, is received.

I have it in direction to state to you that, previous to making an absolute lease of the lands, it will be expedient, in the present want of accurate information as to the precise situation of the mines and adjacent country where they wish to make their location, that they fix upon the sites, which shall not interfere with any previous grants or leases legally given and established; that they cause a regular survey to be made of the quantity of land, (one hundred and sixty acres each,) and a plat or map of the same be transmitted to this office, duly certified by a United States' surveyor; upon the receipt of which they will be laid, without delay, before the Secretary of War for examination. The documents received from the General Land Office leave this Department in doubt as to the topographical and geographical lines and limits of the mine lands within the lands belonging to the United States; and, until an agent or agents shall have been appointed to ascertain those points, and others connected therewith, this Department can do no more than grant this general authority for location, to be thereafter acted upon when the same shall have been regularly reported for confirmation.

Very respectfully, &c.

GEORGE BOMFORD, Lieutenant Colonel on ordnance duty.

Hon. N. EDWARDS, Senate United States.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, May 3, 1822.

I certify the foregoing to be true copies from the original records of this office.

Report from the Ordnance Department to the Honorable Secretary of War, respecting the lead mines of the United States.

SIR:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, March 30, 1822.

Conformably to your directions, I have had under examination the papers received from the General Land Office, which have a relation to lead mine lands of the United States, and respectfully beg leave to offer the following report thereon.

Those papers or documents were found to consist of communications (letters and reports) of unconnected series, from the public agents of the United States to the Treasury Department; copies of petitions for grants, and of leases made thereon, and decisions of the commissioners of the United States on old claims; together with other miscellaneous papers; from which a regular account cannot be given of those lands and mines, or of all the proceedings, public and private, which have formerly taken place respecting them.

The latest dates of any of the papers are of the year 1817, but the greater part are of a much earlier period. No books of records of leases made, or proceedings of commissioners and agents, or of moneys or mineral received or expended, have accompanied the papers received.

From these documents, however, it would appear that lead ore is computed to commence at Mine à la Motte, in the county of Genevieve, Missouri, extending, in a northern direction, as far as Mine à Dubuque, below Prairie du Chien, on the west side of the Mississippi, and probably across the river at that place, averaging, in breadth, about twenty-five miles from east to west: that most of the mines worked were in Washington county, St. Louis district, about thirty-five miles south of the river Missouri, their extent about fifty miles in circumference. Those particularly noted are, Mine à Burton, near the centre of them; (the whole number is stated at thirty-three to forty-five;) Mine à la Motte, the most extensive in the range, and in Madison county; Shibboleth mines, discovered in 1811, and very productive, a Mr. Smith was a claimant for a part, and also a Mr. Lebaume;) Mine Renault, Bryan's mines, and Mine à Martin.

In addition: Mines à Dubuque, very extensive and rich, within the territory, detached from the State of Missouri, on the west side of the Mississippi, below Prairie du Chien, the title to which appears to have remained unsettled, being claimed by heirs or assignees of Dubuque, and by A. Chouteau, and great injury is supposed to have resulted to the United States from those and other claims not having been satisfactorily adjusted by the former commissioners.

Mines of lesser magnitude were worked in various sections of the late Missouri Territory, and other districts on the Mississippi, of the actual value or proceeds of which there appears no precise or authentic account from the papers received. There are, also, in the State of Illinois, numerous mine lands, and chiefly in the district ceded by the Sac and Fox Indians, some of them contiguous to the Rock river, and others nearly bordering upon the Mississippi, others within the United States' reservation in the southeast part of that State. Recent verbal information, from respectable authority, also states the existence of lead mines in that part, between the southern boundary of lake Michigan and the river Mississippi, ceded, in 1816, by the Ottawa, Chippewa, and Pottawatamie tribes or nations of Indians to the United States. In addition, all the accounts agree in representing that new discoveries of lead mines were continually making, and many, it was supposed, were kept secret until purchases of the lands could be made of the United States.

The towns of Burton and Potosi were the principal settlements in the Missouri mine tracts. Herculanum, on the Mississippi, thirty-five miles from the Mine à Burton, and Genevieve, lower down the river, were the principal places of dépôt of lead for transportation.

The leases which appear to have been formerly granted have expired; and it is stated, by respectable persons, that there are at present no mines known to be worked in any of the mining districts under any regular leases or authority; but that many, in the last year, were worked in the State of Missouri without such authority, and chiefly by new settlers and emigrants.

Of the value of the mines, it may be noticed that Mine à Burton was computed to yield about 500,000 pounds of mineral per annum, and that the Shibboleth mines might have been made to produce to the United States about $10,000 per annum. Mr. Schoolcraft, in more recent accounts, states the receipts of lead from the mines as probably rising beyond 3,000,000 of pounds per annum, (from the mines of Missouri,) and his verbal information, given at this office since, rates the receipts of 1821 at a much greater amount.

The lessees of mining lands, it was stated by one of the informants of the Treasury Department, had not been properly supported by Government, having been constantly involved in lawsuits and disputes with claimants under old Spanish grants, and by intruders, which proved often ruinous to their undertakings.

From the various evidence adduced, there can be no doubt but that all the mines might be made more and greatly productive under new and better regulations. There does not appear, among the papers now produced, any account of what has been the actual receipt, by the United States, of the mineral raised from the numerous discoveries of lands producing it; and, indeed, it would, on the contrary appear, that no rents have been received from them. The value of those lands and mines cannot, therefore, be estimated but from general information, as already given in this report. Many of those which have been worked, are supposed to be inexhaustible; and suitable encouragement in future would, there can be no doubt, lead to additional and equally valuable discoveries. Among other means, which might be devised for rendering the mine lands more productive to the United States, I would respectfully suggest the following:

An agent or commissioner to be appointed, and established in a central position for the principal mining districts, empowered to grant new leases, to hear all complaints, and fully authorized to give prompt redress, and to act as a general guardian of the whole public domain; that he should be accompanied by a competent commissioned officer, in order to make surveys of the mining lands which should be found to belong to the United States, and of new discoveries; and to make frequent and regular reports of such surveys, and every other information obtained as to the quantity of mineral produced. The agent to be charged with keeping an office of record of all leases and surveys.

Large leases, or monopolies of large tracts of mining lands, to be prohibited, by granting them in small parcels of 160 to 200 acres: it having been discovered that they have formerly been issued in tracts of several thousand acres, and that no beneficial effects had resulted from such an extension.

The duration of the leases to be agreeably to the law of 1807, for three years: the two first to be free from rent, and the lessee to have the privilege and preference (on his having duly complied with its stipulations) of renewal at the expiration of his lease: which provision would serve as an encouragement to work the mines without waste; and leases should become void if not worked within nine months from the date thereof.

The lessee to be debarred from underletting or transferring any part of the lands leased to him, under the penalty of forfeiture of such lease.

The improvement made by the lessee (buildings, works, &c.) to be repaid by Government or the succeeding lessee, at a fair valuation; but the United States not to pay, in any case, more than one-half the produce of the rent which shall have been actually received.

The rate of annual rent to be one-tenth of net proceeds, to be paid in mineral, clean and prepared for smelting, or an equivalent in lead, quarterly or semi-annually, at some convenient place of dépôt, to the agent empowered by Government.

The United States to have the privilege of inspecting, through its agent, from time to time, the progress making by the lessees in their works, receiving an account of their produce, and to enforce, if necessary, a compliance with their engagements.

That security be required for the faithful performance of all leases.

That, as soon as the leading or general information now collecting and arranging by this office shall be consolidated, lessees be invited, by public advertisement throughout the United States, upon the preceding conditions, in order that full information may be afforded, and a fair competition excited, for rendering the mine lands of the United States productive, in the highest practicable degree, to the public revenue.

I beg leave to add, that this report would have been prepared sooner but from the expectation of collecting, from other sources than the documents alluded to, some additional information; and, that the officer recently sent from this Department, with your sanction, to the mine land districts in Illinois, will probably furnish, within a few months, such further intelligence as may serve as a surer guide to future operations.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE BOMFORD, Lt. Col. on ordnance duty.

To the Hon. JOHN C. CALHOUN, Department of War.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, 3d May, 1822.

I certify the foregoing to be a true copy from the original report rendered to the Department of War.

C.

Form of a lease of mine lands, proposed by the Ordnance Department, in the case of Carneal and Johnson.

This indenture, made and entered into this — day of —, 1822, between —, agent for the Government of the United States, of the one part, and Thomas D. Carneal and Benjamin Johnson, of the State of Kentucky, of the other part, witnesseth: That the said agent as aforesaid, for and in consideration of the rents, covenants, and agreements hereinafter mentioned, doth, by these presents, grant, demise, lease; and to farm let unto the said Carneal and Johnson, their heirs and representatives, one hundred and sixty acres of land, the property of the United States, lying and being in the State of Illinois, and in the vicinity of Rock river, to be more particularly located, as hereinafter mentioned. To have and to hold the said land and premises, with its appurtenances, unto the said Carneal and Johnson, their heirs and legal representatives, for the full term of three years, from and after the time the said land shall be designated, and the mining and manufacturing of the lead therein commenced by said Carneal and Johnson, their heirs, &c., upon the considerations following, to wit: That said Carneal and Johnson shall, during the continuance of the aforesaid term of three years, be at liberty to dig for, and take from any part of the said land, as much lead ore as they may think fit; also to erect thereon such buildings and works for the manufacture of lead, and for the accommodation of those who shall be engaged in the establishment as, in their opinion, the success of the undertaking may require. Said improvements to be valued at the termination of this lease, and to be paid for by the United States or by the subsequent lessee, if rented to any other than the said Carneal and Johnson: Provided, that the said United States shall not pay more for said improvements than one-half of the amount of the lead which shall have been previously received by the Government on said lease. Secondly: that, inasmuch as the precise ground cannot be selected at this moment, it is hereby covenanted and agreed between the parties aforesaid, that the said Carneal and Johnson shall make a selection of the precise ground they mean to occupy, and commence the working of the lead mines upon said land within the period of nine months from this date; and, upon failing to make such selection, and to commence such work within the time herein prescribed, this lease shall be null and void. Third: that said Carneal and Johnson shall have the benefit of said mines for the term of two years, free from the payment of any rent whatever; and said Carneal and Johnson engage and bind themselves and heirs to pay to said agent aforesaid, or to his order, or to the order of the Government, one-tenth part of all the mineral which shall be collected from said mine or mines of lead during the third year of this lease, quarterly or otherwise, as the said agent or the Government may require: the mineral to be clean and prepared for smelting, to be delivered at the works upon the land to said agent, or any agent of the Government. Fourth: that the said Carneal and Johnson shall be at liberty to clear, enclose, and cultivate any part of said land from whence the wood shall have been taken for said lead works; but they shall cut no timber but what shall be necessary for buildings, fencing, and the operation of the said manufactory, and generally shall commit no waste. Fifth: that said Carneal and Johnson engage to render to said agent or the Government a quarterly account of all the minerals raised at the digging or diggings in which they may engage. Sixth: the United States shall, at all times, have the privilege of inspecting the operations, and books and papers relative to working said mines, or any of them, by the said Carneal and Johnson, on the lands aforesaid, to ascertain the quantity of lead manufactured by them, or to demand a compliance with all the conditions stipulated herein.

It is, also, hereby conditioned between the parties, that this lease shall not, in any manner, interfere with any previous lease, if such lease should be in operation; otherwise, that said Carneal and Johnson have the right to make the location of the said one hundred and sixty acres of land, and, when so located, the same shall be meted and bounded by the agent of the Government of the United States, whenever he shall be sent for that purpose, and his report of the metes and bounds shall be the boundary of said Carneal and Johnson. It is further expressly stipulated and agreed upon between the contracting parties hereto, that the said Carneal and Johnson shall not, in any manner, make sub-leases of the premises, under a penalty of a forfeiture of the lease; and it is also expressly agreed and stipulated, that the said Carneal and Johnson shall have the privilege, or right, to renew the lease at the termination of the three years, as aforesaid, and the said agent agrees to give the preference to said Carneal and Johnson, for said renewal, over all other persons; provided the stipulations and conditions of this lease be complied with by said Carneal and Johnson.

COPPER MINES ON THE SOUTHERN SHORE OF LAKE SUPERIOR.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 9, 1822.

To the Senate of the United States:

WASHINGTON, December 7, 1822.

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, of the 8th May last, requesting "information relative to the copper mines on the southern shore of lake Superior, their number, value, and position, the names of the Indian tribes who claim them, the practicability of extinguishing their titles, and the probable advantage which may result to the republic from the acquisition and working these mines," I herewith transmit a report from the Secretary of War, which comprises the information desired in the resolution referred to.

JAMES MONROE.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, December 3, 1822.

The Secretary of War, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate, of the 8th May last, requesting the President of the United States "to communicate to the Senate, at the commencement of the next session of Congress, any information which may be in the possession of the Government, derived from special agents, or otherwise, showing the number, value, and position of the copper mines on the south shore of lake Superior, the names of the Indian tribes who claim them, the practicability of extinguishing their title, and the probable advantage which may result to the republic from the acquisition and working these mines," has the honor to transmit a report of Henry R. Schoolcraft, Indian agent at the Sault of St. Marie, on the copper mines in the region of lake Superior, which contains all the information in relation to the subject in this Department.

All which is respectfully submitted,

J. C. CALHOUN.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

SIR:

SAULT ST. MARIE, October 1, 1822.

In reply to the inquiries contained in a resolution of the Senate of the United States respecting the existence of copper mines in the region of lake Superior, enclosed to me in a note from the War Department, dated 8th May, 1822, I have the honor to submit to you the following facts and remarks:

1st. In relation to "the number, value, and position of the copper mines on the south shore of lake Superior." The remote position of the country alluded to, the infrequency of communication, and the little reliance to be placed on information derived through the medium of the aborigines, or of traders, who are wholly engrossed with other objects, presents an embarrassment at the threshold of this inquiry, which must be felt by every person who turns his attention to the subject. The information sought for demands a minute acquaintance with the natural features and mineral structure of the country, which can only be acquired by personal examination; and it is a species of research requiring more leisure, better opportunities, and a freer participation in personal fatigue, than usually falls to the share of tourists and travellers. Not only are those difficulties to be encountered, which are inseparable from the collection of insulated facts in a new and unsettled country, but those, also, which are peculiar to the subject, connected as it is, at every stage of the inquiry, with the prejudices and superstitions of the Indian tribes. [B.] It can, therefore, excite little surprise that, after having been the theme of speculation for more than a century, and obtained the notice of several works of merit in Europe,* both the position and value of these mineral beds have continued to the present time to be but partially known. To ascertain more clearly their value and importance to the republic were objects more particularly confided to me as a member of the expedition sent by the Indian Department, in the year 1820, to traverse and explore those regions. My report of the 6th of November of that year, a copy of which, marked A, is herewith transmitted, gives the result of that inquiry. After a lapse of two years little can be added. Reflection and subsequent inquiry convinces me that the facts advanced in that report will be corroborated by future observation. No circumstance has transpired which is calculated to prove that my suggestions, with regard to the fertility and future importance of those mines are fallacious: on the contrary all information tends to strengthen and confirm those suggestions. Specimens of pure and malleable copper continue to be brought in to me by the aborigines from that region, but it is not deemed necessary to particularize in this place the additional localities. It will be sufficient to observe that the number of these new discoveries justifies the expectations that have been created respecting the metalliferous character of the region of the Ontonagon, and the south shore of lake Superior. [C.]

I shall here add the result of an accurate analysis made upon a specimen of this copper at the mint of Utrecht, in the Netherlands, at the request of Mr. Eustis, minister plenipotentiary from the United States, who carried samples of the American copper to that country. The report of the Inspector of the Mint, which communicates the result of this analysis, has the following remarks upon the natural properties of this species of copper, and the mode of its production:

"From every appearance the piece of copper seems to have been taken from a mass that has undergone fusion. The melting was, however, not an operation of art, but a natural effect caused by a volcanic eruption. The stream of lava probably carried along in its course the aforesaid body of copper, that had formed into one collection, as fast as it was heated enough to run, from all parts of the mine. The united mass was probably borne in this manner to the place where it now rests in the soil. The crystallized form, observable every where on the original surface of the metal that has been left untouched or undisturbed, leads me to presume that the fusion it has sustained was by a process of nature; since this crystallized surface can only be supposed to have been produced by a slow and gradual cooling, whereby the copper assumed regular figures as its heat passed into other substances, and the metal itself lay exposed to the air.

"As to the properties of the copper itself, it may be observed that its color is a clear red; that it is peculiarly qualified for rolling and forging; and that its excellence is indicated by its resemblance to the copper usually employed by the English for plating. The dealers in copper call this sort Peruvian copper to distinguish it from that of Sweden, which is much less malleable. The specimen under consideration is incomparably better than Swedish copper, as well on account of its brilliant color as for the fineness of its pores, and its extreme ductility. Notwithstanding, before it is used in manufactures, or for the coining of money, it ought to be melted anew for the purpose of purifying it from such earthy particles as it may contain. The examination of the North American copper, in the sample received from his excellency the minister, by the operation of the cupel, and test by fire, has proved that it does not contain the smallest particle of silver, gold, or any other metal."

It is a coincidence worthy of remark, that the suggestions offered by the assayer, respecting the volcanic origin of these masses of copper, are justified by the leading features of the Porcupine mountains, and by the melted granites found upon the heights called Grande Sables and Ishpotonga.

2d. The second and third inquiries of the resolution relate to "the names of the Indian tribes who claim the mines, and the practicability of extinguishing their title." By the treaty concluded at this post on the 16th of June, 1820, the Ojibwaï Indians cede to the United States four miles square of territory, bounded by the river St. Mary's, and including the portage around the falls.† This is the most northerly point to which the Indian title has been extinguished in the United States. The different bands of Ojibwaï possess all the country northwest of this post, extending through lake Superior to the sources of the Mississippi, where they are bounded by the Assenaboins, the Crees, and the Chippewayans of the Hudson Bay colony. Their lands extend down the Mississippi to the Sioux boundary, an unsettled line between the junction of the river De Corbeau and the falls of St. Anthony. South of lake Superior they claim to the possessions of the Winnebagoes on the Ouisconsin and Fox rivers, and to those of the Pottawatamies and Ottoways on lake Michigan.

The Wild Rice, or Monomonee Indians are an integral part of the Ojibwaï nation, deriving their name from the great reliance they place on the zizania aquatica as an article of food. They live in small dispersed bands between the Ojibwaï of the lake, and the Winnebagoes of Fox river. Those residing among the Ojibwaï speak the same language, but with many peculiarities and corruptions on the waters of Green bay. They claim the respective tracts upon which they are located. These are, principally, the valley of Monomonee river, and the rice lands contiguous to the Fol. Avoine, Clam lake, and Lac de Flambeau, which lie on the table lands between lake Superior and the Mississippi.

The right of soil to all that part of the peninsula of Michigan not purchased by the United States is divided between the Ojibwaï and the Ottoways. The former claim all the shores and islands of lake Huron situated north of the Saganaw purchase, except those in the vicinity of Michilimackinac and the St. Martin, or Gypsum islands, which were ceded by treaty on the 6th of July, 1820.§ Their territories continue north, through the river St. Mary's, embracing the country on both banks, and the islands in the river, saving Drummond's island, which is garrisoned by the British, and the Four Mile concession at the Sault or falls, now occupied by a detachment of the United States' army.

It is not deemed necessary to point out the limits of their territories with more precision, or to pursue them into the Canadas, where they are also very extensive. It will sufficiently appear, from this outline, that the discoveries of copper on the south shore of lake Superior are upon their lands. That some of these discoveries have been made upon, or will be traced to, the possessions of the North Monomonees, is also probable.

With respect to the practicability of extinguishing the Indian title no difficulty is to be apprehended. Living in small villages, or tribes of the same mark, scattered over an immense territory, and often reduced to great poverty by the failure of game and fish, it is presumed there would be a disposition among their chiefs and head men to dispose of portions of it. Those districts which most abound in minerals, presenting a rough and rocky surface, are the least valuable to them as hunting grounds; and the goods and annuities which they would receive in exchange must be vastly more important to them than any game which these mineral lands now afford.

3d. "The probable advantage which may result to the republic from the acquisition and working of these mines." How far metallic mines, situated upon the public domain, may be considered as a source of national wealth, and what system of management is best calculated to produce the greatest advantages to the public revenue, are inquiries which are not conceived to be presented for consideration in this place; nor should I presume to offer any speculations upon topics which have been so often discussed, and so fully settled. In applying axioms, however, to a species of productive industry, the results of which are so very various under various situations, great caution is undoubtedly necessary; and it must appear manifest, on the slightest reflection, how much the comparative value of metallic mines, equally fertile and productive, ever depends upon situation and local advantages. Dismissing, therefore, all questions of abstract policy, I shall here adduce a few facts in relation to the fertility of these mineral beds, and their position with respect to a market—points upon which their value to a nation must ultimately turn.

That copper is abundantly found on the south shore of lake Superior has been shown. It is unnecessary here to add to, or repeat the instances of its occurrence, or to urge, from an inspection of the surface, the fertility of subterranean beds. All the facts which I possess in relation to this subject are before you, and you will assign to them such importance as they merit. It is a subject upon which I have bestowed some reflection and much inquiry, superadded to limited opportunities of personal observation, and the result has led me to form a favorable estimate of their value and importance.

It is not only certain that a prodigious number of masses of metallic copper are found along the borders of the lake, but every appearance authorizes a conclusion that they are only the indications of near and continuous veins. Some of these masses are of unexampled size, and all present metallic copper in a state of great purity and fineness. Of its ductile and excellent qualities for the purposes of coinage and sheathing, the analysis of Utrecht leaves no doubt. It is true that a mistaken idea has prevailed among the travellers and geographers respecting the weight of the great mass of copper on the Ontonagon river; but it is, nevertheless, of extraordinary dimensions, and I have endeavored to show, from their works, how these errors have originated, and that the metal is disseminated throughout a much greater extent of country, and in masses of every possible form and size. Until my facts and data can, therefore, be proved to be fallacious, I must be permitted to consider these mines not only fertile in native copper, and its congenerous species, but unparalleled in extent, and to recommend them as such to the notice of the Government.

But, whatever degree of incertitude may exist respecting the riches of these mines, their situation with respect to a market can admit of no dispute. As little can there be concerning the advantages which this situation presents for the purposes of mining and commerce. Let us compare it with that of other mines, and appeal to acknowledged facts for the decision. The value of a coal mine, a stone quarry, or a gypsum bed, often arises as much from its situation as its fertility. But the proposition may be reversed with respect to a metallic mine, the value of which to the proprietor arises more from its fertility, and less from its situation. Gold, silver, copper, tin, lead, &c., when separated from the matrix of the mine, are so valuable that they can bear to be transported a long journey over land, and the most distant voyage by water. Their worth in coined money, produce, or manufactures, is not fixed in the particular circles of country where they are dug up, but depends upon the seaboard market, and embraces all countries. The silver of Mexico and Peru circulates throughout Europe, and is carried to China. It is no objection to those mines that they are situated in the Cordilleras, or upon the high table lands of the American continent, and must be carried a thousand miles upon the backs of mules to the seaside. The very discovery of those mines has rendered many poor silver mines of Europe of no value, although possibly situated in the environs of the best silver markets in the world. It is the fertility, and not the situation of such mines, that constitutes their chief value; and it is so with many of the coarser metals.

The tin of the island of Banka, and the peninsula of Siam in Asia, and the copper of Japan, find their way to Europe, and are articles of commerce in the United States. The cobalt of Saxony is sent to Peking, and the platina of Choco to all parts of the world. In all these instances the fertility of the mines compensates for every disadvantage of situation. But this principle is not alone confined to mines of tin, copper, &c.; it even holds true of the heavy and bulky articles of iron, lead, and salt. The lead of Missouri finds a market at New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, and will be carried to Europe. It is no objection that it must be conveyed in wagons forty miles from the interior, and sent a voyage of 3,000 miles in steamboats and merchant ships. The great fertility of the mines counterbalances the disadvantages of its remote position from the market, and it is the price of the metal in the market which always regulates its price at the mines. The malleable iron of Sweden is consumed on the summits of the Allegany, although its strata are replete with iron ore, which is worked at numerous forges along the rivers which proceed from each side of it. It is believed that the salt springs of Onondaga, from their copiousness alone, would supply a vast portion of the interior and seaboard of the United States with salt, even if the facilities of water carriage had not been presented by the Erie canal. The value of such mines and minerals ever depends as much upon the abundance as upon the favorable position of them. It is far otherwise with quarries of stone, gypsum, marl, fossil, coal, &c., whose contiguity to a good market establishes their value. No abundance of these articles would justify a land carriage of one hundred miles. They constitute a species of mining, the profits and value of which increase in the ratio of the surrounding population, and as the country advances in improvements. But this advantage is far less sensibly felt, and cannot be considered essential to the successful working of mines of silver, copper, &c. Neither the remote position, therefore, of the lake Superior copper mines, nor the want of a surrounding population, present objections of that force which would at first seem to exist; and it is confidently believed that, if their fertility is such as facts indicate, they may be opened and wrought with eminent advantage to the republic. But let us examine their situation with respect to a market, and compare it with that of other mines of the same metal, and of some of the coarser metals, which bear a considerable land, and the most distant water carriage. To favor the inquiry, let it be granted for the moment that proximity of situation to a market, or free water carriage, are indispensable to the success and value of the most fertile mines.

Assuming the confluence of the Ontonagon river with lake Superior (which is apparently the centre of the mine district) as the place where the metal is first to be embarked for market, it must be carried down the lake 300 miles to the Sault or rapids of St. Mary's. Here, if it is in barges, it may descend the rapids in perfect safety, as is the invariable practice of the traders on arriving with their annual returns of furs and skins from the north. If in vessels, it must be transferred either into boats or carts, and carried half a mile to the foot of the rapids, where it will again be embarked in vessels, and transported through the lakes Huron, St. Clair, and Erie, and their connecting straits, to Buffalo, a distance of 650 miles. The progress made in the construction of the great canal which is to connect the lakes and the Atlantic, is such as to leave no doubt upon any reasonable mind of the full completion of that work with the close of the year 1824. Through this channel the transportation is to be continued in boats or barges, by a voyage of 353 miles, to the Hudson at Albany; thence, a sloop navigation of 144 miles, which, for speed and freedom from risk, is perhaps unequalled in all America, takes it into the harbor of New York, making the entire distance from the mouth of the Ontonagon 1,447 miles. From New York it is distributed to our naval depôts, and to the markets of Europe. It is exchanged for the lead of Missouri, the iron of Sweden, or the silver of Mexico; and the same ready communication transports the return cargo to Buffalo, from whence the commerce is extended, by means of the lakes, throughout western New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and the interminable regions of the north. Thus it is seen that, when the Erie canal is completed, a free and direct water communication from the mines to one of the best markets in America, will exist, in which the rapids of St. Mary's are the only interruption, and this is only an interruption to large vessels. Not only so, but the Ontonagon river may be ascended many miles with vessels of light burden, and thus the copper of lake Superior, wafted from the heart of the interior, and from the base of the Porcupine mountains, into the harbors of New York, Philadelphia, &c. Of this whole distance, 1,407 miles is now navigated by the largest class of river craft and lake schooners; the balance of the distance is the length of the Erie canal. See appendix D.

Let it be recollected that there are no mines of copper situated upon the margin of the sea, and that every quintal of sheet copper, bolts, nails, &c., which we receive from Great Britain, Russia, Sweden, or Japan, is transported a greater or less distance on turnpikes or canals, before it reaches the place of shipment. The richest copper mines of the Russian empire are seated on the summits of the Uralian mountains; those of Fahlun in Sweden, and Cornwall in England, are scarcely more favored as to position; and, owing to a want of coal, all the ores raised at the latter are transported into Wales to be smelted.* But we need not resort to Europe for instances. All the lead raised at the fertile mines in Missouri is transported an average distance of forty miles in carts and wagons before it reaches the banks of the Mississippi. Steamboats take it to New Orleans, a distance, by the shortest computation, of 1,000 miles. But it must still pass through the Gulf of Mexico, and encounter the perils of the capes of Florida, and a voyage of 2,000 miles along the coast of the United States, before it reaches its principal marts. The average cost of transporting a hundred weight of lead from Mine au Breton and Potosi to the banks of the Mississippi, during the year 1818, was seventy-five cents. The distance is thirty-six miles. The price of conveying the same quantity from the storehouses at Herculanum and St. Genevieve to New Orleans, by steamboats, was seventy cents. The distance exceeds 1,000 miles. Hence, it costs more to transport a given quantity thirty-six miles by land than to convey it 1,000 miles by water. These rates have probably varied since, but the proportionate expense of land carriage, compared to that of water, will remain the same. A quintal of copper may, therefore, be transported from the mines of Superior to Buffalo or Lockport, in New York, for the same sum required to convey an equal quantity of lead from Potosi to St. Genevieve. If we consider the city of New York as the market of both, no hesitancy or doubt can be experienced as to the decided and palpable advantages possessed by the northern mines. It is only necessary to adduce these facts; the conclusions are inevitable. In every point of view, the distance of these mines from the market presents no solid objection to their being explored with profit to the nation.

Pig copper, which is the least valuable form in which this metal is carried to market, is now quoted in the Atlantic cities at nineteen cents per pound; sheathing, at twenty-seven; brazier's at thirty-two. I have no data at hand to show the amount of these articles consumed in the United States, and for which we are annually transmitting immense sums to enrich foreign States. But those who best appreciate the advantages of commerce will readily supply the estimate. It would be an interesting inquiry to ascertain how much of the sums yearly paid for sheathing copper, bolts, nails, engraver's plates, &c. is contributed to the wealth of the respective foreign States who possess mines of this metal. We can look back to a period in the history of Great Britain, when that Power did not contribute one pound of copper to the commerce of Europe. During a period of nine years, closing with the memorable year [in American history] of 1775, the produce of the copper mines of Cornwall was 2,650 tons of fine copper. [See appendix E.] Since that time the yearly returns of those mines exhibit a constant increase; and the copper mines of Great Britain are now the most valuable in the world. The amount produced by the mines of Cornwall and Devon, after deducting the charges of smelting, for the single year of 1810, was 969,376 pounds sterling. [See appendix F.] The clear profits of the Dolgoath mine, one of the richest in Cornwall, for a period of five months during the year 1805, was £18,000, which is at the rate of £43,200, or $192,000 per annum.† Next to Great Britain, the most considerable mines of Europe are those of Russia, Austria, Sweden, and Westphalia, as it was in 1808. Of less importance, are those of Denmark, France, Saxony, Prussia and Spain. The proportion in which the British mines exceed those of the most favored European nation, is as 200,000 × 67,000. See appendix G.

There is another consideration connected with this subject which is worthy of remark. Should it be inquired what would be the effects of the purchase of these mines upon the condition of the Indian tribes, the reply is obvious. It would have the most beneficial tendency. They would not only profit by an exchange of their waste lands for goods, implements of husbandry, the stipulated services of blacksmiths, teachers, &c. but the intercourse would have a happy tendency to allay those bitter feelings which, through the instigation of the British authorities in the Canadas, they have manifested, and still continue to feel, in a degree, towards the United States. The measures which the President has recently directed to be pursued to assuage these feelings of hostility, and to induce them to cherish proper sentiments of friendship and respect, are already in a train of execution that bids fair for success. Continued exertions, and the necessary and proper means, are all that seem necessary to confirm and complete the effect; and whatever measures have a tendency to increase the intercourse of American citizens with these "remote tribes," and to give them a true conception of the power and justice, and the pacific and benevolent policy of our Government, must favor and hasten such a result.

I have the honor to be, sir, with the highest respect, your most obedient servant,

HENRY R. SCHOOLCRAFT,
U. S. Indian Agent at the Sault Ste. Marie.

HON. JOHN C. CALHOUN, Secretary of War, Washington.

A.

SIR:

VERNON, ONEIDA COUNTY, N. Y. November 6, 1820.

I have now the honor to submit to you such observations as have occurred to me, during the recent expedition under Governor Cass, in relation to the copper mines of lake Superior; reserving, as the subject of a future communication, the facts I have collected on the mineralogy of the country explored generally.

* Silliman.

† Silliman's Travels, vol. ii. 177.

The striking change in the mineral aspect of the country north of lake Huron is presented near the head of the Island of St. Joseph, in the river St. Mary, where the calcareous strata of secondary locks are succeeded by a formation of red sandstone, which extends northward to the head of that river at Point Iroquois, producing the falls called Sault de Ste. Marie, fifteen miles below, and thence stretching northwest, along the whole southern shore of lake Superior, to the Fond du Lac, and into the regions beyond. This extensive stratum is perforated at various points by upheaved masses of granite and hornblende, which appear in precipitous banks on the margin of the lake between la Rivière du Mort and Presque Isle, and constitute the Porcupine mountains, ten leagues to the west of the Ontonagon river. It is overlaid in other places by a stratum of dark sandstone, resembling grauwacke of uncommon thickness, which appears in various promontories along the shore, and, at the distance of ninety miles from Point Iroquois, constitutes a lofty perpendicular wall upon the water's edge, called the Pictured Rocks, which is one of the most commanding objects in nature.

So obvious a change in the geological character of the rock strata, in passing from lake Huron to lake Superior, prepares us to expect a corresponding one in the imbedded minerals and other natural associations; an expectation which is realized during the first eighty leagues, in the discovery of red hematite, prehnite, opal, jasper, sardonyx, cornelian, agate, and zeolite.

The first appearances of copper are perceived on the head of the portage of Kee-wy-wee-non, two hundred and seventy miles beyond the Sault de Ste. Marie, where the pebbles along the shore of the lake contain native copper disseminated in particles varying in size from a grain of sand to a mass of two pounds weight. Many of the detached blocks of stone at that place are also colored green by the carbonate of copper, and the rock strata likewise exhibit traces of the same ore. These indications continue to the river Ontonagon, which has long been noted for the large masses of native copper found upon its banks, and about the contiguous country. This river, (called Donagon on Mellish's maps) is one of the largest of thirty tributaries which flow into the lake between Point Iroquois and the Fond du Lac. It originates in a district of mountainous country intermediate between the Mississippi river and the lakes Huron and Superior, and, after flowing in a northerly direction one hundred and twenty miles, enters the lake fifty-one miles west of the portage of Kee-wy-wee-non. Its mouth is in north latitude $46^{\circ} 52' 2''$, according to the observations of Captain Douglass. It is connected by portages with the Monomonee river of Green bay, and with the Chippeway river of the Mississippi; routes of communication occasionally travelled by the Indians in canoes. At its mouth there is a village of Chippeways, of twenty-five men, who subsist chiefly on the fish (sturgeon) taken in the river; and whose location, independently of that circumstance, does not appear to unite the ordinary advantages of Indian villages in that region. A strip of alluvial land, of a sandy character, extends from the lake up the river three or four leagues, where it is succeeded by high broken hills of a rocky and sterile character, and covered chiefly by a growth of pine, hemlock, and spruce. Among these hills, which may be considered as lateral spurs of the Porcupine mountains, the copper mines, so called, are situated at the distance of thirty-two miles from the lake, and in the centre of a region characterized by its wild, rugged, and forbidding aspect. The large mass of native copper lies on the west bank of the river at the water's edge, and near the foot of an alluvial hill, the face of which appears, at some former period, to have slipped into the river, carrying with it the mass of copper, together with detached blocks of granite, hornblende, and other fragments of rock peculiar to the soil of that place. The copper, which is in a pure and malleable state, lies in connexion with a species of serpentine rock, the face of which it almost completely overlays, and separate grains and masses of it are also disseminated throughout the most solid parts of the rock. Unlike most oxydable metals, which have suffered a long exposure to the atmosphere, the surface of this mass of copper presents a high metallic brilliancy; which may result from an alloy of the precious metals, or is most probably attributable to the action of the river, by which it is periodically inundated at those seasons when the waters are highly surcharged with sand and other alluvial matter. This may be presumed to abrade its surface and preserve its lustre. The shape of this mass of copper and serpentine is very irregular; its greatest length is three feet eight inches, its greatest breadth three feet four inches, and it may altogether contain eleven cubic feet. In size it considerably exceeds the great mass of native iron found some years ago upon the banks of Red river in Louisiana, and now deposited among the collections of the New York Historical Society,* but, on account of the admixture of rocky matter, is inferior in weight. Henry, who visited it in 1766, estimates the mass at five tons.† Other authorities have assigned to it a greater weight, but all who have seen this celebrated product appear to have been misled by its imposing exterior. Careful examination and admeasurements convinces me that the weight of metallic copper on the rocks does not exceed twenty-two hundred pounds. The quantity may, however, have been much diminished since its first discovery, and the marks of chisels and axes upon it, with the broken tools scattered around, prove that portions have been cut off and carried away. The author just quoted observes, "that such was its pure and malleable state, that, with an axe, he was able to cut off a portion weighing a hundred pounds. Notwithstanding this reduction, it may still be considered one of the largest and most remarkable bodies of native copper found upon the globe, and is, so far as my reading extends, exceeded only by a specimen found in a valley in Brazil, weighing two thousand six hundred and sixty-six Portuguese pounds.‡ Viewed only as a subject for scientific speculation, it presents the most interesting considerations, and must be regarded by the geologist as affording illustrative proofs of an important character. Its connexion with a species of rock, which is foreign to the section of country where it lies, indicates a removal from its original bed, while the intimate connexion of the metal and matrix, and the complete envelopment of individual masses of copper by the rock, point to a common and contemporaneous origin, whether that be referable to the agency of caloric or of water. This conclusion admits of an obvious and important application to the extensive strata of serpentine and other magnesian rocks found in various parts of the globe: such is the Copper Rock of lake Superior, which has long been known to the fur traders and voyageurs of the north, and is only here considered as an isolated mass indicating the existence of mines in that vicinity. The Ontonagon river, at the place of its deposit, is broad, rapid, and shallow, and filled with fragments of projecting rocks, which render the navigation extremely difficult and dangerous. The river flows over a coarse grained sandstone, similar in its characters to that which support the Palisado Rocks upon the Hudson. Its waters partake of the chocolate brown color of the Arkansas, and, like that stream, appear to owe this property to the banks of ferruginous red clay through which it passes. There is an island nearly in the centre of the river that serves to throw the current against the west bank of the river, where the mass of copper reposes, and which, as it is the only wooded island noticed in the river, may serve to indicate the locality of this mineral treasure to the future inquirer.

Several other masses of virgin copper have been found upon this river at various periods since it has been known and frequented by Europeans, and taken into different parts of the United States and of Europe. A recent analysis of one of these specimens at the University of Leyden, proves it to be native copper in a state of uncommon purity, and uncombined with any appreciable portion either of gold or silver.

‡ See Henry's Travels and Adventures, p. 205.

A mass of copper discovered by the aborigines at Point Che-goi-me-gon, eighty miles west of the Ontonagon, weighed twenty-eight pounds, and was carried to the island of Michilimackinac some years ago by M. Cadotte, and disposed of. It was from this mass that the War Department was formerly supplied with a specimen, and the analysis above alluded to is also understood to have been made from a portion of this mass. About eleven years ago, (1809) a piece of copper weighing twelve pounds was picked up by the Indians on an island in Winnebago lake, about one hundred miles in a direct line east of the copper rock upon the Ontonagon. A trader by the name of Campbell caused it to be taken to Michilimackinac, from which it was distributed in various specimens. Other discoveries of this metal, in masses varying from one to ten pounds, are stated to have been made upon the shores of lake Superior, the Fox, the Chippeway, and the St. Croix rivers, and upon the Mississippi near Prairie du Chien, but the statements do not rest on sufficient authority to justify any particular enumeration.

The existence of copper upon the shores of lake Superior appears to have been known to the earliest travelers and traders. As early as 1689, the Baron La Hontan, in concluding a description of that lake, adds "that, upon it we also find copper mines, the metal of which is so fine and plentiful that there is not a seventh part loss from the ore."* In 1721, P. de Charlevoix passed through the lakes on his way to the Gulf of Mexico; and this acute observer did not allow the mineralogy of the country to escape his notice. "Large pieces of copper" (he observes, in speaking of lake Superior) "are found in some places on its banks, and around some of the islands, which are still the objects of a superstitious worship among the Indians. They look upon them with veneration, as if they were the presents of those gods who dwell under the waters; they collect their smallest fragments, which they carefully preserve, without, however, making any use of them. They say that formerly a huge rock of this metal was to be seen elevated a considerable height above the surface of the water, and, as it has now disappeared, they pretend that the gods have carried it elsewhere; but there is great reason to believe that, in process of time, the waves of the lake have covered it entirely with sand and slime; and it is certain that, in several places, pretty large quantities of this metal have been discovered without being obliged to dig very deep. During the course of my first voyage to this country, I was acquainted with one of our order [Jesuits] who had been formerly a goldsmith, and who, while he was at the mission of the Sault de Ste. Marie, used to search for this metal, and made candlesticks, crosses, and censers of it; for this copper is often to be met with almost entirely pure."†

In 1766, Captain Carver procured several masses of metallic copper upon the shores of lake Superior, and about the sources of the Chippeway and St. Croix rivers, and published an account of these discoveries in his book of travels, which has served to give notoriety to the existence of that metal in the region alluded to, without, however, furnishing any very precise information as to its locality or abundance. He did not, from his own account, traverse the southern shore of the lake, but states that virgin copper is found in great plenty on the Ontonagon, or Copper Mine river, and about other parts of lake Superior, and adds, "that he observed many of the small islands, particularly those on the eastern shores, were covered with copper ore, which appeared like beds of copperas, [sulphate of iron,] of which many tons lay in a small space."‡

Five years after Carver's visit, [A. D. 1771,] a considerable body of copper was dug out of the alluvial earth upon the banks of the Ontonagon river, by two adventurers by the name of Henry and Bostwick, and, together with a lump of silver ore of eight pounds weight, conveyed to Montreal, and from thence shipped to England, where the latter was deposited in the British Museum after an analysis of a portion of it, by which it was determined to contain sixty per cent. of silver.§ These individuals were connected with a company, which had been formed in England for the purpose of working the copper mines on lake Superior, among whom were the Duke of Gloucester, Sir William Johnston, and several other gentlemen of rank. They built a vessel at Pointe aux Pins, six miles above the Sault de Ste. Marie, to facilitate their operations upon the lake; and a considerable sum of money was expended, first, in exploring the northern shore of the lake and the island of Maripeaux, and, afterwards, in the mining operations which were authorized upon the banks of the Ontonagon. These transactions will be best illustrated by a quotation from the narrative account which Henry has himself published. After returning from the Canadian shore of the lake, and passing Point Iroquois, where the silver ore was found, he observes: "Hence we coasted westward, but found nothing till we reached the Ontonagon, where, besides the detached masses of copper formerly mentioned, we saw much of the same metal imbedded in stone. Proposing to ourselves to make a trial on the hill till we were better able to go to work upon the solid rock, we built a house, and sent to the Sault de Ste. Marie for provisions. At the spot pitched upon for the commencement of our preparation, a green colored water, which tinges iron of a copper color, issued from the hill, and this the miners called a leader. In digging, they found frequent masses of copper, some of which were of three pounds weight. Having arranged every thing for the accommodation of the miners during the winter, we returned to the Sault.

"Early in the spring of 1772 we sent a boat load of provisions, but it came back on the 20th day of June, bringing with it, to our surprise, the whole establishment of miners. They reported that, in the course of the winter, they had penetrated forty feet into the face of the hill, but, on the arrival of the thaw, the clay on which, on account of its stiffness, they had relied, and neglected to secure by proper supporters, had fallen in; that, from the detached masses of metal which to the last had daily presented themselves, they supposed there might be ultimately reached a body of the same, but could form no conjecture of its distance, except that it was probably so far off as not to be pursued without sinking an air shaft; and, lastly, that the work would require the hands of more men than could be fed in the actual state of the country. Here our operations in this quarter ended. The metal was probably within our reach; but, if we had found it, the expense of carrying it to Montreal must have exceeded its marketable value. It was never for the exportation of copper that our company was formed, but always with a view to the silver which it was hoped the ores, whether of copper or lead, might, in sufficient quantity, contain."

In the year 1789, Mr. Alexander McKenzie (afterwards knighted for his enterprise) passed through lake Superior, on his first voyage of discovery into the northwest; and, in his description of that lake, says, "on the same side, [the south,] at the river 'Tonagon, is found a quantity of virgin copper. The Americans, soon after they got possession of that country, sent an agent thither, and I should not be surprised to hear of their employing people to work the mine. Indeed, it might be well worthy the attention of the British subjects to work the mines on the north coast, though they are not supposed to be so rich as those on the south.'"||

The attention of the United States' Government appears first to have been turned toward the subject during the administration of President Adams, when the sudden augmentation of the navy rendered the employment

Its authenticity has often been called in question, and persons have not been wanting who have pronounced the whole a fabrication. Great allowance is undoubtedly to be made for the time and mode of the publication, for errors of judgment, for overstrained narration, and for other circumstances. But the work, nevertheless, bears internal marks of the author's having travelled the route he designates. Not only so, there are living witnesses among the superannuated traders and voyageurs of the north, who recollect his visit to the country.

of domestic copper, in the equipment of ships, an object of consideration; and a mission was authorized to proceed to lake Superior. Of the success of this mission, as it has not been communicated to the public, nothing can with certainty be stated; but, from the inquiries which have been instituted during the recent expedition, it is rendered probable that the actual state of our Indian relations, at that period, forbade the advance of the commissioner into the region where the most valuable beds of copper exist.

Such are the lights which those who have preceded me in this inquiry have thrown upon the subject, all of which have operated in producing public belief in the existence of extensive copper mines upon lake Superior, while travellers appear to agree that the southern shore is most metalliferous, and that the Ontonagon river may be considered as the seat of the principal mines. Mr. Gallatin, in his report on the state of domestic manufactures, in 1810, countenances the prevalent opinion, while it has been reiterated in our literary journals, and the numerous ephemeral publications of the times, until the public expectation has been considerably raised in regard to them.

Under these circumstances the recent expedition, under Governor Cass, entered the mouth of the Ontonagon river on the 27th of June, having coasted along the southern shore of the lake, from the head of the river St. Mary's; and, after spending four days upon the banks of that stream, in the examination of its mineralogy, proceeded, on the 1st of July, towards the Fond du Lac. While there, the principal part of our force was encamped at the mouth of the river, and the Governor, accompanied only by such persons as were necessary in the exploration, proceeded, in two light canoes, to the large mass of copper which has already been described. We found the river broad, deep, and gentle, for a distance, and serpentine in its course; then becoming narrower, with an increased velocity of current, and, before reaching the copper rock, full of rapids, and difficult of ascent. At the distance of three or four leagues from the lake, it is skirted on either side by a chain of hills, whose extreme elevation above the bed of the Ontonagon may be estimated at from three to four hundred feet. These hills appear to be composed of a nucleus of granite, rising through a formation of ferruginous sandstone, and covered by a very heavy deposit of alluvial soil, full of water-worn fragments of rocks and pebbles, and imbedding occasional masses of native copper. Such is the character of the country in the immediate vicinity of the copper rock; and the latter is manifestly one of those extraneous bodies which has been exposed by the powerful action of the river against an alluvial bank.

During our continuance upon this stream we procured another mass of metallic copper, weighing nine pounds (Troy) nearly, which will be forwarded to the War Department. This specimen is partially enveloped by a crust of green carbonate of copper, which is, in some places, fibrous, and, on one side, mixed with a portion of adhering sand, and some angular fragments of quartz, upon which it appears to have fallen in a liquid state. There is also a crystallized substance enveloped by the oxyde, and a portion of adhering solid black matter, the nature of which it is difficult to determine by ocular inspection. Several smaller pieces, generally weighing less than a pound, were also obtained during our excursion up the Ontonagon, and in the region east of it; but all, excepting those cut from the large mass, are somewhat oxydated, or deeply encrusted upon the surface. The geological structure of the country in detail, and the mineral appearances of the shore at the copper rock, and at other points along the river, are also of a highly interesting character, but do not appear to me to demand a more particular consideration in this report.

The discovery of masses of native copper is generally considered indicative of the existence of mines in the neighborhood. The practised miner looks upon them as signs which point to larger bodies of the same metal in the contiguous earth or rocks, and is often determined, by discoveries of this nature, in the choice of the spot for commencing his labors. The predictions drawn from such evidences are also more sanguine in proportion to the extent of the discovery. It is not, however, an unerring indication, and appears liable to exceptions. A detached mass of copper is sometimes found remote from any body of this metal or its ores; and the latter, on the contrary, sometimes occur in the earth, or imbedded in rock strata, where there has been no external discovery of metallic copper to indicate it. So far as the opinions of mineralogical writers can be collected on this point, they teach that large veins or beds of native copper are seldom found,* but that it is frequently disseminated in granite, gneiss, and other rocks, and associated with the spars and ores of copper and other mines.† Thus it is usually associated, in the interior of the earth, with red copper ore, copper pyrites, malachite, copper glance, brown ironstone, &c.; and, when found upon the surface, is rather to be considered as a token of the existence of these ores within the circle of country where it occurs, than as the precursor to contiguous veins of metallic copper.

"Native copper (observes Professor Cleaveland) is found chiefly in primitive rocks, through which it is sometimes disseminated, or more frequently it enters into the composition of metallic veins which traverse these rocks. It is thus connected with granite, gneiss, micaceous and argillaceous slates, granular limestone, chlorite, serpentine, porphyry, &c.‡ Mr. Allen found it in connexion with zeolite, in the Faroe islands;§ and I have observed it associated with quartz, prehnite, and greenstone, at the portage of Kee-wy-wee-non on lake Superior. The sulphuret of copper was formerly explored in transition sandstone, at Simsbury, in Connecticut, and at Schuyler's mines, in New Jersey. Such are among the prominent facts connected with the occurrence of copper and its associations in the mineral kingdom. From a deliberate consideration of them, in application to the facts which I have been able to collect in regard to the copper of lake Superior, the following conclusions appear to me to be established:

1st. That the alluvial soil upon the banks of the Ontonagon, extending to its source, and embracing the contiguous region which gives origin to the Fox and Menomonee rivers, of Green Bay, and to the Ouisconsin, Chippeway, and St. Croix rivers, of the Mississippi, contains very frequent and some extraordinary masses of native or metallic copper; but that no body of it, which is sufficiently extensive to become the object of profitable mining operations, is now known to exist at any particular place. This conclusion is supported by the facts already adduced, and, so far as theoretical aids can be relied upon, by an application of such theories to the processes of mining. A greater extent of country might have been embraced along the shores of lake Superior, but the same remark appears to be applicable to it.

2d. That a mineralogical survey of the Ontonagon, including the district of country above alluded to, would result in the discovery of very valuable mines of copper glance, malachite, and other profitable ores of copper, in the working of which the ordinary advantages of mining would be greatly enhanced by disseminated masses and veins of native metal. This conclusion is rendered probable by the geological features of the country, and the concurrent statements of travellers; by the green colored waters which issue in several places from the earth; by the numerous bodies of native copper found; by the cuperous appearances which are presented in the crevices of rocks and loose stones, and by other analogous considerations.

These deductions embrace all I have to submit on the mineral geography of the country so far as regards the copper mines. Other considerations arise from the facilities which that section of country may present for mining operations; its adaptation to the purposes of agriculture; the state and dispositions of the Indian tribes, and other topics which a design to commence metallurgical operations at the present period would suggest. But I am not aware that any such views are entertained by Government, and have not considered it incumbent upon myself, in this communication, to enter into details on these subjects. It may be proper, however, to remark, that the remote situation of the country containing the most valuable mines, does not, at the present period, favor the pursuit of mining.* It would require the employment, not only of the artificers and laborers necessary to conduct the working of the mines, but also of a military force, to protect their operations; first, while engaged in exploring the country, and afterwards in their regular labors. For, whatever may be their professions of friendship, the Indian tribes of the north possess strong natural jealousies of the American Government, and a dislike, founded upon long habits of intercourse with the agents of the British Government in the Canadas. The motives and effects of this intercourse have been too often and too severely felt either to be mistaken or forgotten; and in situations so remote, the bands who have so long experienced the conveniences of an intercourse which has annually secured to them a gratuitous supply of clothing and arms will not be expected to repress their feelings of hostility under the circumstances contemplated, and, indeed, can only be restrained from an indulgence of the most malignant passions by the fear of a prompt military chastisement.

In looking upon the southern shore of lake Superior, the period appears distant when the advantages flowing from a military post upon that frontier will be produced by the ordinary progress of our settlements, for it presents few enticements to the agriculturist. A considerable proportion of the shore is rocky, and its alluvions are in general of too light and sandy a texture for profitable husbandry. With an elevation of six hundred and forty-six feet above the Atlantic ocean,† and drawing its waters from territories all situated north of the forty-fourth degree of north latitude, lake Superior cannot be represented as enjoying a climate very favorable to the productions of the vegetable kingdom. Its forest trees are chiefly those of the fir kind, mixed with white birch, (betula papyracea), the bark of which is so much employed for canoes by the northern Indians, and with some varieties of poplar, oak, and maple. The meteorological observations which I have made, indicate, however, a warm summer, the average heat of the month of June being sixty-nine degrees, but the climate is subject to a long and severe winter, and to storms and sudden transitions of temperature during the summer months. We saw no Indian corn among the savages upon this lake: whether the climate is unfavorable to its growth, or the wild rice (zizania aquatica) furnishes an adequate substitute, is not certain. A country wanting the advantages of a fertile soil may still become a very rich mining district, like the county of Cornwall in England, the Hartz mountains in Germany, and the mining counties of Missouri, in the valley of the Mississippi; but this deficiency must be compensated by the advantages of geographical position, contiguous or redundant population, and the facilities of a ready commercial intercourse. To these the mineral district of lake Superior can advance but a feeble claim, while it lies upwards of three hundred miles beyond the verge of our settlements on the northwestern frontier, and in the occupation of savage tribes whose hostility has been so recently manifested.‡

Concerning the variety, importance, and extent of its mineral productions, little doubt can remain. Every fact which has been observed tends to strengthen the belief that there are extensive copper mines upon its shores; while the information which has obtained during the recent mission, renders it certain that not only copper, but iron, lead, plumbago, manganese, and sulphur, are productions of that region, together with several of the precious, silicious, and crystallized minerals.§ It is rendered probable, also, that silver ore is imbedded in the transition rocks of the region, and whenever it shall become an object with the American Government, or individuals, to institute mineralogical surveys of the country, no doubt can be entertained but such researches will eventuate in mineral discoveries of a highly interesting character, and such as cannot fail both to augment our sources of profitable industry, and to promote our commercial independence. In the event of such operations, the facilities of a ready transportation of the crude ore to the Sault de Ste. Marie either in vessels or barges, will point out that place as uniting, with a commanding geographical position, superior advantages for the reduction of the ores, and for the subsequent conversion of the metal into sheet copper, ordnance, or other articles required for national purposes. At this place a fall of twenty-two feet in the river, in the distance of half a mile, creates a sufficient power to drive hydraulic works to any extent; while the surrounding country, being such as to admit of an agricultural settlement, may be relied upon for the staple articles of subsistence. It must be important to know that this advantage is not of an equivocal character. The experience of a century proves that the contiguous lands are perfectly well adapted to the growth of oats, peas, beans, potatoes, rye, and, in certain situations, of corn and wheat. In the latitude of Montreal, in Lower Canada, (nearly,) it may be expected to produce the same articles which are the objects of profitable cultivation there.

* Other views, it will be observed, have been taken of this subject; and it is believed that the "remote situation" of the mines do not, under present circumstances, present any sufficient objection to their being opened and worked. But it has not been thought proper to alter any expressions of this report, notwithstanding that subsequent observation or reflection may have proved them incorrect. The obstacles which Bostwick and Henry had to encounter no longer exist, and the whole aspect of the country has experienced a complete revolution.

‡ The establishment of a military post, and agency for Indian affairs, at the Sault Ste. Marie, which commands the pass into lake Superior, since the date of this report, places our Indian relations on that frontier upon an entirely different footing, and is calculated, in a great measure, to obviate these objections. Subsequent information, likewise, justifies the belief that the climate of lake Superior is more favorable to agriculture than was supposed. Traders, who are best acquainted with the interior, observe that, in proceeding a few miles south of the shore of the lake, its sterile character is exchanged for rich lands, finely diversified with hill and dale, and covered with tall forests of oak, maple, beech, and hickory, and irrigated by numerous streams. [H. R. S. October, 1822.]

§ The cornelian is first found on approaching the Pictured Rocks on lake Superior, and afterwards becomes abundant along the shore, extending to the Fond du Lac. Sandy lake, on the head of the Mississippi, is a good locality of this mineral, and it is found around the shores of the numerous small lakes and ponds in that region. In descending the Mississippi it is constantly met with in the alluvial soil. It is found at the foot of the falls of St. Anthony sparingly, around the shores of lake Pepin very abundant, and may be traced below Prairie du Chien, and (as I have mentioned in my view of the lead mines) even as low as St. Louis and St. Genevieve. According to the classification of Werner, which is founded on "alternate bands of red and white," many of these specimens may be considered as varieties of sardonyx. They are often associated with common chalcedony, with cacholong, and with some varieties of agate and jasper. In a few instances the common opal, in small fragments, is found.

I accompany this report with several views of northern scenery, and with a geological chart of a vertical section of the left banks of the Mississippi at St. Peter's, embracing a singular formation of native copper, in which the superposition of the layers of rock, and the several sub-deposits of the alluvial stratum, exhibit a remarkable order. The curvatures in the lines of the alluvial stratum represent a natural mound or hillock, recumbent upon the brink of the river, which has partially fallen in, thus exposing its internal structure. This formation first excited the notice of the garrison, who quarried limestone for the purposes of building at the spot. The masses of copper found are all small, none exceeding a pound in weight.

I have the honor to be, sir, with high respect and regard, your most obedient servant,

HENRY R. SCHOOLCRAFT.

Among the numerous superstitions which the Indian tribes entertain, that respecting mines is not the least remarkable. They are firmly impressed with a belief that any information communicated to the whites, disclosing the position of mines or metallic treasures situated upon their grounds, is displeasing to their manitos, and even to the Great Spirit himself, from whom they profess to derive every good and valuable gift; and that this offence never fails to be visited upon them in the loss of property, in the want of success in their customary pursuits of pastimes, in untimely death, or some other singular disaster or untoward event. This opinion, although certainly not a strange one to be cherished by a barbarous people, is, nevertheless, believed to have had its origin in the transactions of an era which is not only very well defined, but must ever remain conspicuous in the history of the discovery and settlement of America. It is very well known that the precious metals were the principal objects which led the Spanish invaders to penetrate into the interior of Mexico and Peru, and ultimately to devastate and conquer the country, to plunder and destroy its temples, and to tax and enslave its ill-fated inhabitants. It is equally certain that, to escape these scenes of cruelty and oppression, many tribes, and fragments of tribes, when further resistance became hopeless, fled towards the north, preferring the enjoyment of liberty and tranquillity upon the chilly borders of the northern lakes, to the pains of servitude in the mild and delightful valleys of Mexico, and the golden plains of the Incas. In this way many tribes, who originally emigrated from the north along the Pacific ocean to the Gulf of California, and thence over all New Spain, were returned towards the north over the plains of Texas and the valley of the Mississippi; those tribes, nearest the scenes of the greatest atrocities, always pressing upon the remoter and less civilized, who, in turn, pressed upon the nations less enlightened than themselves, and finally drove them into the unfrequented forests of the north. Among these terrified tribes the traditions of the Ojibwais affirm that their ancestors came, and that they originally dwelt in a country destitute of snows. Many tribes, who now speak idioms of their language, were left upon the way, and have since taken distinctive names. Among these are the Pottawatamies and Ottowas, &c. The latter formerly were, as they still remain, the agriculturists. The Miamis, whose language bears some affinity, preceded them in their flight. The Shawnees and the Winnebagoes, each speaking a separate and original tongue, came later, and preserve more distinct traditions of their migration. All these tribes carried with them the strong prejudices and fixed hatreds excited by the cruelty, rapacity, and cupidity of their European conquerors; and, above all, of that insatiable thirst for gold and silver which led them to sack their towns, burn their temples, and torture their people. Cruelty and injustice of so glaring a character, must have made upon their minds too deep an impression ever to be forgotten, or completely erased from their traditions. To that memorable epoch we must, therefore, look for the origin of that cautious and distrustful disposition which these tribes have since manifested with regard to the mines and minerals situated upon their lands; and the circumstance seems to offer an abundant excuse, if not a justification, for those prevarications and evasions which present a continual series of embarrassment to every person who seeks, through their aid, to develop the mineral resources, or describe the natural productions, of their territories. Hence, too, the cause why they are prone to imagine that all mineral or metallic substances obtained or sought upon their lands, are susceptible of being converted or transmitted into the precious metals.

C.

The following additional localities of native copper, derived from sources entitled to respect, and accompanied, in some instances, by specimens of the metal, may here be given:

1st. Grand Menou, or isle Royal, lake Superior. Captain —, of the schooner —, in the employ of the Hudson Bay Company, on lake Superior, describes this island as affording frequent masses of copper. While becalmed off its shores in the spring of 1822, and, afterwards, in coasting along the island for a distance of one hundred miles, his men frequently went ashore, and never failed to bring back with them lumps of metallic copper, which they found promiscuously scattered among the fragments of rock. These were more abundant in approaching its southwestern extremity, where they unite in representing it to exist in a solid vein. Specimens of limpid quartz, chalcedony, and striped agate, were also brought to me from this island. [J. S. J. J.] 2d. On the extremity of the great peninsula, called by the natives Meenaewong, or Keeweena point, which forms so prominent a feature in the physiognomy of lake Superior. It occurs in the detached form. [J. H. J. J.] 3d. At point aux Beignes, which is the east cape of the entrance into L'Ance Quevivenon. A mass from this place was raised from the sandstone rock, which predominates there. [J. Y. B.] 4th. At Caug Wudjieu, or the Porcupine mountains, L. S.; in masses enveloped with a green crust along the banks of the Carp, or Neemaibee river, which originates in these mountains. [W. M. G. Y. J. J.] 5th. On the banks of Lac Couterroille. This lake lies near the source of the river Broule, or Cawesacotai, which enters lake Superior near La Pointe. It occurs in the alluvial soil, which is a kind of loamy earth, with pebbles intermixed, but of a rich quality, and timbered with beech and maple. It is found mostly in small flat masses more or less oxydized. [B. G. J. G. Y.] 6th. In a vein on the shore of lake Superior, between La Riviere de Mort and St. John's, a little to the west of Presque Isle. [J. J.] 7th. On the northeast branch of the Ontonagon river. [J. H.] 8th. In the precipitous bluffs called Le Portail, and the Pictured rocks. A green matter oozes from the seams in these rocks, and forms a kind of stalactites, which is apparently a carbonate of copper. [G. Y.] These localities embrace a range of more than two hundred miles along the south shore of lake Superior, which proves how intimately this metal and its ores are identified with the rocks and the soil of that region.

D.

In all our calculations, respecting the position and advantages of these mines, too much stress cannot be laid upon the facilities of the lake navigation. It is believed that a ton of merchandise, or a barrel bulk, can be transported through the lakes at the same rates that are paid in the coasting trade of the United States. Nor is the risk greater. The best data which I can command induce me to conclude that a quintal of copper can be conveyed from the place of shipment on lake Superior, to the city of New York, for one dollar. The present price of transportation for a barrel bulk from Buffalo to 'Mackina, may be stated, on the average of freights, at 8s., New York. The mean weight of a barrel bulk, taking flour as the standard, may be safely put down at 200 lbs. gross, being 50 cents per cwt. But it must be recollected that there is no return freight; and, consequently, that this sum covers the expenses not only of the outward and return voyage, but still leaves a profit to the owner. Messrs. Gray and Griswold, sutlers of the 2d regiment, paid 9s. 6d., New York, per barrel bulk, from Buffalo to the Sault. This gives a result of 59 cents per cwt. But if a return cargo could be obtained, one half of this sum would afford an equal profit on the voyage; and, it is believed, that the article of bar copper could, at all times, be conveyed from the Sault to Buffalo for 20 cents per cwt. Being a very convenient species of ballast it would oftentimes be taken in lieu of stone, and, consequently, cost no greater sum than the price of carrying it on board. But the facilities and cheapness of the lake navigation cannot, perhaps, be better illustrated than by stating the price of provisions at the post of St. Mary's, every article of which is carried from 300 to 700 miles through the lakes. The following statement of the assistant commissary has been politely furnished at my request:

DEAR SIR:

SAULT STE. MARIE, October —, 1822.

Agreeably to your request, I send you a statement of the actual cost of subsistence stores furnished at this post for the use of troops, at present making the military establishment, ordered by the Government to this place.

The prices of the several articles below enumerated are at a small advance in the stores of the settlers outside of the cantonment.

The expenses of subsisting, or rather of maintaining a garrison at this place, will be as small, if not less, per annum, than at any other frontier post in our country. The provisions for the soldier cost as little, I believe, as at any other post, and next year we shall be able to raise all the forage for the use of our beef cattle, and the horses and oxen of the quartermaster's department.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

W. BICKER, A. C. S. U. S. A.

Statement of the cost of the United States' subsistence stores at the Sault de Ste. Marie, 1822.

Pork, per pound, four and a quarter cents; flour, per pound, one and nine-tenths cents; whiskey, per gallon, twenty-nine cents; Fresh beef, per pound, six and a half cents; vinegar, per gallon, twenty-two cents; salt, per bushel, ninety cents; soap, per pound, ten cents; candles, per pound, twenty and a half cents; beans, per quart, four and seven-tenths cents. The total cost of a soldier's ration is nine cents and one mill per diem.

H.

I shall here give the synonyma for this tribe of Indians, which appears to have been first recognised by the United States as an independent tribe by Wayne's treaty of 1795,* under the name of Chipewa [Chip-e-wa]. This name has been retained in all subsequent treaties with them, not, however, without some discrepance in the orthography. These variations are chiefly marked by the introduction of the letter p at the beginning of the second syllable, or the vowel y annexed to third, producing Chip-pe-wa, chip-pe-way, and Chip-e-way. The French missionaries and traders, whose policy it was to discard the names of the aboriginal tribes from their conversations, bestowed upon this tribe, at a very early period, the nom de guerre of Saulteurs, or Sauteurs, from the Sault or Falls of St. Mary's, which was the ancient seat of this tribe—a name which is still retained by the Canadians, and by many of the American traders. Among the early French writers they are also sometimes denominated Outchipouas. There is as little uniformity among travellers and geographers. Pinkerton, Darby, Morse, Carver, Mackenzie, and Herriot, either employ the word according to the orthography of Wayne's treaty, or with the modifications above noticed. The name of Chippewyans, employed by McKenzie, relates to a tribe residing north and west of the sources of the Mississippi, who, although speaking a language having great affinity, are, nevertheless, at the present day, considered a distinct people. Henry, who was well versed in the Chippewa language, also conforms to the popular usage, but observes that the true name, as pronounced by themselves, is O'Gibbeway. I shall only remark that this is the nearest approach to the true name which appears in print, and is probably quite accurate, in relation to the band residing at Chegoimegon, at the epoch to which he alludes. The word, as now employed by the Indians at this place, is O-gib-way, or O-gib-wai, the letter g in this word being pronounced soft, as in the English words gin, geography, &c. The vowels i or y in the final syllable, are, perhaps, equally proper and melodious, and may be indiscriminately used, but I prefer the letter i, as approaching nearer the aboriginal sound, which terminates abruptly, partaking somewhat of the aspirate sound h. Having taken pains to ascertain and fix the pronunciation of this word, I have not hesitated to introduce it into my correspondence and official accounts; but I am aware of my great temerity in so doing. Popular prejudices, and several of the authorities above cited, stand opposed to the proposed innovation. The continued use of the word "Chippewa" is also sanctioned by a name entitled to conclusive respect. "I write the word in this way," (observes the Executive of Michigan,) "because I am apprehensive the orthography is inveterately fixed, and not because I suppose it is correct." Still there are reasons for changing it. Justice to this unfortunate race requires it. Since the popular apathy to their condition is such, that every remembrance of their actual customs, manners, and traditions, will probably perish with them, and their name, ere long, be all that is left, it is at least incumbent upon us to transmit that to posterity in its true sound—as the fathers and sachems pronounced it. If, then, there is an acknowledged error in this respect, shall we hesitate to correct it?

PRE-EMPTION RIGHT IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 17, 1822.

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Ohio, made the following report:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and accompanying documents of John Jenkins, have had them under consideration, and report:

The petitioner states that, at an early period, he settled on the right bank of the Mississippi river, within the present limits of the State of Louisiana; that, in the year 1813, after he had made considerable improvements, the river rose so high as entirely to overflow his possessions, and render it necessary for him and his family to seek safety on higher ground; which they did by crossing into the Territory, now State of Mississippi; that, in less than a year after, Congress, by an act passed the 14th day of April, 1814, gave to every person who inhabited and cultivated a tract of land in that section of the country, and who had not removed, a right of pre-emption; that his removal, to avoid the dangers of an inundation, denied him the privileges of said act: wherefore he prays relief.

* This fact is not stated in full confidence. I cannot refer to any authorities to prove that they were formally recognised by the United States before this very recent period. By the French and British Governments they were known soon after the first settlements at Quebec and Albany (A. D. 1608, 1614,) and subsequently treated with. A band of warriors from Chegoimegon on lake Superior, under the command of Wawb Ojeag, or the White Fisher, was present at the taking of Fort Niagara by Sir W. Johnston in 17—.

The material facts of the petition are proved, as the committee conceive, by the affidavit of John Blanchard. This witness testifies, that the petitioner and his family lived near the Mississippi river in 1812, on a large farm, at a place now known by the name of Mitchell's settlement; that, during the high water in the year 1813, in descending the river, he saw the petitioner removing his family, stock, &c., to the Walnut Hills.

Your committee, believing there will be no impropriety in extending to the petitioner the right of pre-emption, report a bill for that purpose.

APPLICATION OF A PURCHASER OF LAND IN OHIO TO RELINQUISH A PART THEREOF.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 31, 1822.

Mr. VAN DYKE, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Joshua Russell, of Tyler county, Virginia, reported:

That the petitioner, in the month of December, 1817, being desirous to purchase a small parcel of land in Monroe county, in the State of Ohio, being part of section 29, township 1, range 4, west, in the district of lands offered for sale at Marietta, applied to the Register of the Land Office at Marietta to enter the quarter section, including the part sought after, when the said Register informed him that he might enter the half section, including the part he wanted, but could not enter or purchase less; and accordingly the petitioner entered the east half of said section, and paid the first instalment, amounting to $155 98, and the Register issued to him the usual certificate of purchase in the common official form; that the petitioner, relying upon the said contract with the public agent of the Government, entered upon the land, made improvements and cleared for the tillage upwards of twenty acres, and was afterwards informed by the Register that the entry was irregular, and the title could not be completed, inasmuch as, according to the construction given to the law in that behalf, the said section being what is termed fractional, the whole of it should have been entered. After receiving this intelligence, the petitioner applied to Congress for relief, and his petition was, by order of the House of Representatives, on 9th December, 1819, referred to the Committee on Private Lands; which committee, having called on the Commissioner of the General Land Office for information touching the said application, received from him a written communication, dated April 6, 1820, stating that he was "not aware of any difficulty in the petitioner's obtaining a patent for the tract when he pays the balance of the purchase money," adding "I shall write to the Register there on the subject:" whereupon, the petitioner obtained leave to withdraw his petition, and the same was withdrawn in the expectation that no further difficulty would arise to prevent the perfecting of his title; but, to his surprise, he has since learned that the Commissioner of the General Land Office afterwards addressed to the chairman of the said committee a letter dated 27th April, 1820, stating that, by information from the said Register, it appeared "that the sale was conditional and erroneous, because the whole section, being a fractional one, had been offered at public sale, and the rule was to sell at private sale all tracts in the same manner as they are offered at public sale, &c. The petitioner states that, prior to the 30th September, 1821, he applied to the said Register, wishing to retain the southeast fractional quarter section, and to relinquish the rest of his said purchase, but his application was rejected, and he therefore now prays that a law may be passed to authorize a grant to him for the southeast fractional quarter of said section, upon his paying the balance that would have been due had his application been admitted agreeably to the provision of the act of Congress passed 2d March, 1821, entitled "An act for the relief of the purchasers of public lands prior to the 1st day of July, 1820."

The committee are of opinion that Joshua Russell, the petitioner, having made a fair contract of purchase with the Register of the Land Office, a public agent of the Government, evidenced by an official certificate in writing, which states especially the terms and conditions of the sale, and confiding in the act of that public agent, having paid part of the purchase money, made improvements, and expended his time, labor, and money, in clearing the land, ought not to be deprived of the said land by reason of any error committed by the Receiver, or on the ground that his act was contrary to a rule established in the office in relation to the sale of particular sections. Equally dangerous would be the doctrine that the Register, after issuing his official certificate, could defeat the purchaser's title by suggesting conditions different from what is expressed in such certificate. The committee, impressed with a conviction that the petitioner is justly entitled to the benefit of his said purchase, report a bill for his relief.

No. 368.

[2d Session.]

LAND CLAIMS IN THE EASTERN DISTRICT, AND IN THE DISTRICT NORTH OF RED RIVER, IN THE STATE OF LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 13, 1823.

SIR:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 1, 1823.

In compliance with the sixth section of the act of the 11th of May, 1820, entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts for the adjustment of land claims in the State of Louisiana," I have the honor to transmit the reports made in pursuance of the said act by the Registers of the eastern district, and of the district north of Red river, in the said State. No report has been received from the district of the Opelousas.

In the first of these reports the claims filed under the second section of the act are numbered from 1 to 89, inclusive, and, with the exception of numbers 26, 30, 38, 39, 41, 42, 44, 45, 55, 58, 63, 64, 68, 70, 80, and 87, are, in the words of the second section, founded upon Spanish grants, concessions, or orders of survey; and ought, therefore, to be confirmed.

No. 26 is claimed under a survey made by the Surveyor General in 1781, and certified by him to have been made by an order of Governor Galvez.

Nos. 39, 41, 42, 44, 58, 68, and 80, are supported by evidence of the same nature, and ought, therefore, to be confirmed.

No. 30 is claimed by purchase, and title derived by mesne conveyances from the estate of James Hubert Belair, and was inventoried on the 10th of August, 1767, by authority of the French Government, and sold by the same authority. It, therefore, in my opinion, ought to be confirmed.

No. 38 is claimed by purchase under a deed of sale executed in 1794. The surveyor, Portier, certifies that the plat accompanying the claim is conformable to the plat made by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, on the 22d of June, 1781. It is further proved, by the deposition of two witnesses, that a tract of twenty-one arpents front, of which this claim is a part, was granted by Governor Unzaga to the widow Grondel. The Register does not certify the credibility of the witnesses, or of Portier, the surveyor. The claim is, therefore, doubtful, as it is not proved that possession, even under the deed, has been taken by the claimant, or by those under whom he derives his title. I am of opinion that the claim ought not to be confirmed.

No. 45 is claimed by purchase, and the claimants prove that the land was granted by the French Government, and that the witnesses had seen the grant. The law provides for Spanish and not French titles; but, if this was the only objection, the claim ought to be confirmed. The Register has not certified the credibility of the witnesses; no mesne conveyances are produced, or possession or cultivation proved. As the grant is asserted to have been made by the French Government, it is highly probable more than one descent has been cast. The name of the grantee is not even stated, nor any deduction of title exhibited. I am, therefore, of opinion that this claim ought not to be confirmed.

No. 55 is claimed by purchase, at auction, by the Register of Wills, and the land was surveyed by the Surveyor General of the province. As this sale was made by the authority of an officer of the Government, in the discharge of his official duty, I am of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 63 is claimed by purchase, and a deed of sale is produced, dated in the year 1781, made by authority of the Spanish Government. The evidence in this case is not full; but it is probably the act of the Register that it is so. Taking the fact asserted, that the sale was made by the authority of the Government, as established, I am of opinion that the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 64 is claimed in part by purchase and part by grant. The Register states that the part not granted, or for which no grant is produced, has been possessed and cultivated during the Spanish Government. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 70 is claimed by purchase. No grant, concession, or order of survey, is produced; but a deed, bearing date the 26th of April, 1786, states that the land had been granted on the 20th of February, 1725. Other collateral written evidence is also produced, and cultivation for forty years is proved. The claim is, therefore, recommended for confirmation.

No. 87 is claimed by purchase, and it is proved, by two respectable witnesses, that the land was surveyed and granted by the Spanish Government. It is also proved that the land has been peaceably cultivated for thirty years past by the claimant, and those under whom he claims. It is, therefore, recommended for confirmation.

The claims in which, under the fourth section of the act, additional evidence has been offered, are numbered by the Register from 90 to 103, inclusive; and, with the exception of numbers 96, 97, 101, 102, and 103, are founded upon Spanish grants, concessions, or orders of survey, and ought, agreeably to the provisions of the act, to be confirmed. Numbers 96, 97, 101, and 103, are claims unsupported by any record evidence; nor is there evidence of any kind that they are founded upon grants, concessions, or orders of survey. They are, therefore, clearly not within the provisions of the act.

No. 102 is claimed under a Spanish grant alleged to have been lost. It is proved by the Spanish surveyor, Pintado, and by a deputy surveyor of the United States, not named in the report, that the land was granted by Governor Carondelet, and that Pintado surveyed it in conformity to the grant, and that the grant was seen by him in the possession of Bertrand Gravin. The credibility of the witnesses is not stated by the Register, unless it was intended by him to be inferred from the offices which they held. Admitting the facts stated to be established, the claim ought to be confirmed.

All these claims are for small tracts, such as the Spanish Government was in the habit of granting. The idea of speculation or fraud ought not, therefore, to be entertained as to most of them. This observation applies to claims Nos. 96, 97, 101, and 103; in some of which levees have been made and kept in repair, which is an important condition in all grants fronting on the river Mississippi, and other streams subject to periodical inundations.

The report of the Register of the district north of Red river does not distinguish between claims filed under the second section of the act, and those in which additional evidence was produced under the fourth section. All the claims presented in the said report, in class the first, except numbers 40, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, and 51, are founded upon Spanish grants, concessions, or orders of survey, and ought, therefore, to be confirmed.

No. 40 is claimed under an order of survey from Governor Galvez, presumed to have been altered so as to transfer it to the land claimed. The evidence in support of that presumption is herewith submitted.

Nos. 44, 45, 46, 47, and 48, are claims for parts of the large claim of Baron de Bastrop, which exceeds a league square, and which has not been confirmed to the baron. It is, therefore, presumed that persons claiming under him cannot, under the provisions of the act of the 11th of May, 1820, be placed in a better situation than the Baron.

No. 51 is for six toises on each side of the bayou Barthelemy, from its mouth to its source. The evidence offered by the claimant, and that which rebuts it, is submitted to the two Houses of Congress.

Of the claims reported by the Register, in the second class, there is none proved, by record evidence, to be founded upon Spanish grants, concessions, or orders of survey.

No. 38 is supported by authentic acts of alienation, passed before the commandant in 1787, 1793, and 1796, in the last of which the preceding deeds are recited. It is alleged, that Jean Weigand had a concession of this land, and that it was deposited in the commandant's office. The tract has been settled nearly forty years.

No. 39 is supported by evidence very similar to the foregoing, and equally as strong. It is, therefore, my opinion that both these claims ought to be confirmed.

No. 52 is claimed under a plat of survey, sheriff's title, and possession and settlement in 1799.

No. 60 is also claimed under a plat of survey in October, 1802, and six legal transfers passed before the commandant between the years 1796 and 1801.

No. 61 is claimed under a plat of survey, dated 26th March, 1802. Possession and cultivation are proved for 28 years. One descent has been cast, and the applicant is the heir of the first occupant. It is believed, therefore, that these three claims ought to be confirmed.

No. 54 is claimed under a plat of survey, dated 21st February, 1801, and that kind of possession dependent upon cutting and using wood. No collateral evidence in writing is produced.

No. 55 is claimed by purchase, but no record evidence of grant, concession, or order of survey, is produced. The mesne conveyances make no reference to any such title; evidence of possession and cultivation twenty-eight years since is produced; but it is presumed that neither possession nor cultivation has been continued.

No. 56 is claimed upon evidence similar to the claim immediately preceding.

Nos. 57 and 58 are claimed by occupancy and cultivation. No record evidence of any kind is produced.

No. 59 is claimed as a graveyard. It was enclosed in 1793, by the order of the commandant. No record or written evidence is produced. The four last cases are clearly not within the provisions of the act.

The third class of claims, commencing in the said report with No. 62, and terminating with No. 100, are not founded upon Spanish grants, concessions, or orders of survey, and no record evidence is produced to show that any such title ever existed. They are, in fact, settlement claims, and might have been confirmed as donations, had they been presented in due time, under the several acts which have been passed.

It may be proper to observe that, in the report of the Register of the district north of Red river, the claims are not arranged and numbered in numerical order, but appear to have been numbered in the order in which they were presented by the applicants.

I remain, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

Hon. DANIEL D. TOMPKINS, Vice President of the United States, and President of the Senate.

Reports of the Register of the Land Office for the Eastern district of Louisiana, on land claims filed pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts for the adjustment of land claims in the State of Louisiana," passed the 11th of May, 1820.

CLASS FIRST:

Including claims to land entered pursuant to the second section of the act of Congress passed the 11th day of May, 1820, and entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts for the adjustment of land claims in the State of Louisiana."

No. 1. John Pierre Burat claims a tract of land, in virtue of a Spanish order of survey, situate in the parish of Plaquemine, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having twenty arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, and bounded above and below by vacant lands.

An order of survey for this tract of land was regularly issued by the proper Spanish officer, in the year 1798, which was duly executed by the Surveyor General of the province, Charles Laveau Trudeau, in the same year; and there is sufficient evidence of possession and continued occupancy by the claimant. I am, therefore, of opinion his said claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 2. Ambroise Brou claims a tract of land on which he resides, situate in the county of German Coast, parish of St. Charles, on the right bank of the Mississippi river, having four arpents twenty-nine toises two feet three inches and six lines in front, by a depth of eighty arpents; bounded on the upper side by lands of François Troscler, and on the lower side by the lands of Jacques Brou.

This land is claimed in virtue of a concession of the Spanish Government to the father of the claimant (under whom he holds) of nine arpents twenty-six toises in front, by forty arpents in depth. Secondly; in virtue of a purchase of same front, and twenty arpents in depth, made by the said father of the claimant, of the Spanish Government. And, thirdly, in virtue of another concession of twenty arpents, in additional depth to the said front; the land of the claimant being half the whole, to wit, four arpents twenty-nine toises two feet three inches and six lines.

The documents exhibited by the claimant clearly prove that the concessions, stated by him to have been made by the Spanish Government, were duly made by that Government; and he further shows a continued possession and occupancy. I am, therefore, of opinion his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 3. Ambroise Brou claims, by purchase, a tract of land, situate on the right bank of the Mississippi river, in the county of German Coast, parish of St. Charles, having two arpents one foot eight inches and six lines in front, by forty arpents in depth, and bounded on the upper side by lands of Jacques Brou, and on the lower by lands of Isidore, (a free person of color,) as appears by the plat of survey executed by the Surveyor General of the Spanish Government. Said land is one-half of a concession made by the Spanish Government, in the year 1784, to the person under whom the claimant holds. He also proves continued and uninterrupted possession and cultivation. I am, therefore, of opinion his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 4. Widow François Delery, in right of her husband, François Delery, deceased, claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, on the right bank of the river Mississippi, and bounded in front by the heirs of Delery, west by the lands of Peter Lartique, east by James Porte, and south by vacant lands, as more fully appears by the plat of survey executed by the surveyor of the Spanish Government, and exhibited to be recorded. Said land measures in front twelve arpents and nine toises, and in depth forty arpents; and is claimed in virtue of an order of survey, granted by the Spanish Government, and of continued habitation and cultivation by the claimant. It appears that, in the year 1795, the Baron Carondelet issued an order of survey for this land, in favor of François Delery, the husband of the claimant, and that it was duly executed, in the year following, by the Surveyor General of the province, and the party put in possession, as was usual, by the surveyor. There is no positive proof that the land in question has been continually inhabited and cultivated from the period of the concession, but I have no doubt of the fact from circumstances, and therefore think the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 5. Samuel Davenport claims a tract of land, situate on the upper side of the bayou Moreau, in the county of Point Coupee, about twelve leagues above Point Coupee, measuring twenty arpents in front on the Mississippi river, with a depth of forty arpents, and bounded on the lower side by lands of F. De Bois. This land is claimed in virtue of a Spanish grant, in favor of Thomas Durcey, from whom the claimant purchased it, dated the 19th of November, 1792.

The claimant has produced the original grant for this land, as stated in his notice, and has also proved his purchase from the grantee. I am, therefore, of opinion that his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 6. Joseph Castille claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Iberville, having eight arpents in front on the Mississippi river, and measuring forty arpents in depth. This land is claimed in virtue of a complete Spanish grant, dated the 11th July, 1774.

The grant alluded to by the claimant is on the records of my office, and, therefore, I am of opinion his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 7. Bernard Genois claims, in virtue of a grant made to the person under whom he claims by the Baron de Carondelet, dated the 29th November, 1793, a tract of land situate in the county of Orleans, adjoining Fort St. John, having two arpents in front, with forty arpents in depth, as appears more fully by the figurative plan annexed.

The claimant produced the original grant, as stated in his notice, made to Felicite Destrehan, a free woman of color, by the Baron de Carondelet, and, also, written evidence of his title under her by purchase. I am, therefore, of opinion that his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 8. The heirs of Patrick Conway claim a tract of land, in virtue of a concession from the Spanish Government, dated in the year 1786, and situated in the county of Point Coupee, having ten arpents in front on the Mississippi, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded on one side by vacant lands, and on the other by lands of William Conway, as more fully appears by the plat of survey executed by Charles Laveau Trudeau in the year 1786.

The claimants produce a concession by General Miro to Patrick Conway, under whom they claim, dated 1st day of December, 1786, together with a survey of said land duly executed by the Surveyor General, dated same year. It ought, therefore, in my opinion, to be confirmed.

No. 9. The heirs of William Conway claim a tract of land, situate in the county of Point Coupee, having ten arpents in front on the Mississippi, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded on one side by the claim of Patrick Conway, and on the other side by the claim of Maurice Conway, as more fully appears from the plat of survey executed by the Surveyor General of the Spanish Government, founded on an order of survey granted by Governor Miro to William Conway, under whom they claim, dated in the year 1786.

The same facts having been proved in this case as in the preceding, I am, consequently, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 10. The heirs of Maurice Conway claim, in virtue of a Spanish grant or concession to Maurice Conway, under whom they claim, dated in the year 1789, a tract of land situate in the county of Point Coupee, having twenty arpents in front, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded on one side by the mouth of the Fausse river, and on the other by the claim of William Conway.

The grant of the Spanish Government, alluded to by the claimants, is on record in my office. I am, therefore, of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 11. The widow and heirs of Louis Darby claim, in virtue of an order of survey granted by Baron de Carondelet to Louis Darby, (under whom he claims) dated in 1792, a tract of land situate in a prairie fronting to the sea, in the district of Barrataria, having forty arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on one side by the claim of Jacob Bachemen, and on the other by Bayou Bastien, running an east southeast course, adjoining a bayou emptying into the Mississippi.

The claimants produced the order of survey as mentioned in their notice: they also prove the loss of the survey made by the Surveyor General of the Spanish province, in the fire that happened in New Orleans, which was made in pursuance of said order; and they also prove possession and cultivation from the time of the aforesaid order. I am, therefore, of opinion his (their) claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 12. Augustin Massicot claims, by inheritance, a second depth of land situate behind the first depth already confirmed to him, and being on the right bank of the Mississippi, in the county of German Coast, parish of St. Charles: said front depth is bounded above by the lands of Stephen Reine, and below by lands of the heirs of Francis St. Armand. The land claimed has a front of twenty-two arpents and twenty-seven toises, opening with a depth of forty arpents.

The claimant produces an order of survey granted by Governor Galvez, in the year 1777, to James Massicot, under whom the claimant holds; he also proves possession and cultivation for more than forty years; and, therefore, in my opinion, the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 13. Ambroise Garidel claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, parish of Assumption, on the bayou Lafourche, having three arpents thirteen toises and three feet front, by a depth of forty arpents, as described in the plat of survey annexed.

The claimant holds by purchase under the title of Jean Oliver Hebert, to whom it was granted by the Spanish Government in the year 1791. This land was actually surveyed by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana in the year 1791, and makes part of another survey already confirmed to the claimant. I am, therefore, of opinion that it ought to be confirmed.

No. 14. Drausin Labranche and brothers claim a tract of land, by purchase at auction, situate in the county of Orleans, about thirteen miles above the city of New Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, containing four hundred and thirty-six superficial arpents, bounded in front by lands of Louis Dufittre, and above and below by vacant lands, as more fully appears by the survey of Charles Laveau Trudeau hereunto annexed, made in favor of Charles Therry in 1802, under whom they claim.

The claimants produce the actual survey made by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, as stated in their notice of claim, made, as the surveyor states, in virtue of an order to that effect; and, therefore, I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 15. Michael Aime claims, in right of inheritance, a tract of land situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, having sixteen arpents in front, by forty in depth, and being adjacent to and back of another tract of land fronting on the Mississippi, on which the claimant now resides.

The claimant produces an order of survey granted by Governor Miro in 1785, to Francis Aime, the grandfather of the claimant, and under whom he claims for said land. The claim, therefore, ought to be confirmed.

No. 16. Pierre Dolthonde claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having four arpents five toises two feet and eight inches in front, by a depth of one hundred arpents, bounded on the upper side by lands of Madame Hinson, and on the lower side by the same, as will more fully appear by the plat executed by Mr. Portier, hereunto annexed.

The claimant produces, first, a concession from the Spanish Government, dated in 1776, for eleven arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth; and, secondly, a concession dated in 1777, for the same front, and sixty additional arpents in the rear, granted to Antoine Thomassin, under whom he claims by purchase; the land claimed being part of the land originally granted to said A. Thomassin, I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 17. Madame widow Ranson and son claim two tracts of land, one having five arpents five toises two feet eight inches, by a depth of one hundred arpents, and the other having a front of one arpent, and a depth of one hundred arpents, both being part of the original grant mentioned in the preceding claim, as also appears from a plat of the survey: said land is situated on the right bank of the Mississippi, parish of St. Charles. The first mentioned tract is bounded on the upper side by lands of Henry Laureaux, and on the lower side by lands of Pierre Dolthonde; the second tract is bounded by lands of the said Pierre Dolthonde on the upper side, and on the lower side by lands of the claimants.

These tracts are claimed by purchase derived from title of Antoine Thomassin, mentioned in the preceding claim of P. Dolthonde, and, therefore, in my opinion, ought to be confirmed.

No. 18. Thaddeus Mayhew claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having ten arpents twenty-two toises and three feet front, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded above by lands of Lefebvre, and below by lands of Barthelemy Duverger.

The claimant holds by purchase derived from Nicholas Chauvier Delery, to whom said land was granted by the Spanish Government, as appears from the survey of the Surveyor General, Laveau Trudeau, dated the 4th of March, 1803. I am of opinion his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 19. Justus Delabarre Le Beau claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having three arpents and a few feet front and back, and adjoining Jean Maria Doudounne's plantation, and running back to the Lac des Allemands, bounded on one side by lands of Madame Habine, and on the other by lands of the claimant.

The claimant holds by purchase under the title of Roi Villéré, to whom it was conceded by the French Government in the year 1765, which the claimant exhibits. Although this claim is not founded on a Spanish grant, concession, or order of survey, yet, according to the spirit of the act of 11th of May, 1820, which I conceive meant to recognize French as well as Spanish grants, I am of opinion his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 20. Garrigues Flaujac claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Point Coupee, on the bayou Gros Tête, having forty arpents front on each side of the said bayou, with a depth of forty arpents.

The claimant holds by purchase from Louis Bertin D'Antilly, to whom it was granted by Governor Miro on the 23d day of August, 1791, as appears from the order of survey. I am, therefore, of opinion that the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 21. Silvain Roussell claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the right bank of the river Mississippi, having five arpents and a half front, by a depth of sixty arpents, bounded on the upper side by lands of Madame Paul Obert, and on the lower side by lands of Francis Dufresne.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on an order of survey executed by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana in the year 1781. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 22. Pierre Terrio, Sen., claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Jacques, on the left bank of the Mississippi, having two arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, making a superficies of seventy-nine arpents sixty-five one-hundredths, according to the survey of the principal Deputy Surveyor of the United States. Said land is bounded above by lands of Joseph Gaudre, and below by lands of the claimant.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, under a concession made by Governor Unzaga, in the year 1775, to Baptiste Cornier, under whom the claimant derives his title. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 23. Pierre Terrio, Jun., claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Jacques, on the left bank of the Mississippi, having three arpents twenty-two and one-third feet front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of Michel Le Bœuf, and below by lands of Lewis Nichol.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, and is part of the same grant mentioned in the preceding claim. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 24. Bernardo De Deva claims a tract of land, situate as follows: in the parish of Lafourche Interior, behind a depth of forty arpents, granted by the King of Spain to Carlos Gauhean Lucia Bruse and others, fronting the property or lands of one Jaccante Bernard, and lying on a bayou distant about six leagues from the Mississippi, on the right side thereof, being, in the whole, a league square.

The claimant produces a request (petition) to the Baron de Carondelet, in which he states that he, being appointed by the said baron curate for the said parish of Lafourche, and that, having gone there, he found neither church nor house to live in, and the inhabitants so poor as to be unable to support him. Under these circumstances he asks for a league square of land; which, under date of the 14th of March, 1793, Carondelet granted to him, and ordered the surveyor to put him in possession. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 25. William Deval claims a tract of land in the parish of West Baton Rouge, opposite Brown's islands, and below the lowest bayou in the bend of the Mississippi, and on which he now resides.

The claimant holds in right of purchase, and produces an order of survey granted by the Baron de Carondelet, in the year 1794, and the certificate of location by V. Pintado, the Spanish surveyor. He also proves possession and cultivation. I am, therefore, of opinion his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 26. John Louis Wagespack claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Jacques, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having eight arpents and eight toises and three feet in front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of Jacques Troxner, and below by lands of Nicholas Troxner.

The claimant purchased this land under a survey made by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana in the year 1781, who certified that he made it by an order of Governor Galvez: therefore, in my opinion, the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 27. The trustees of St. Charles's church claim a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, on the left bank of the Mississippi, having ten arpents in front, and eighty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of John C. Arnaud, and below by lands of John Noel Destrehan.

It appears the first depth of forty arpents was granted by the Spanish Government in the year 1770, and the second depth of forty additional arpents in depth was granted by said Government on the 22d day of December, 1797. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 28. Achille and Laurent Segur claim a tract of land, situate in the county of Iberville, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having thirteen arpents front, with a depth of forty arpents, originally granted by the Spanish Government to Anselme Blanchard; and, at the end of forty arpents, the claimant claims six arpents front, by forty additional arpents, granted by Governor Gayoso on the 10th of December, 1798.

This claim makes part of a large tract, granted as aforesaid, and has descended to the claimants by purchase and succession. I am of opinion it ought to be confirmed.

No. 29. The widow Guerbois claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, district of Barrataria, on the bayou Ouachas; having ten arpents front, by eighty arpents, more or less, in depth, bounded above by lands of — Durnford, and below by lands of Marigny Dauterive, and in the rear by lands of P. Foucher.

This land is claimed by purchase under a French concession made, as is proved, in the year 1740. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 30. Pierre Foucher claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, about two leagues above the city of New Orleans, on the left bank of the Mississippi, having seventeen and a half arpents, more or less, front, by a depth of eighty arpents, bounded above by lands of Barthelemy McCarty, and below by lands lately belonging to Etienne Boré, now the property of Gayairey, and her nephew, Le Breton.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, by mesne conveyances, from the estate of James Hebert Bellair, and was inventoried on the 10th day of August, 1767, by authority of the French Government, and sold by the same authority. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 31. Pierre Foucher claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, on the west side of the bayou des Familles, district of Barrataria, having twenty-nine arpents and thirteen and a half toises front, more or less, with a depth of forty arpents.

This land is held in right of purchase under a concession made by the Spanish Government on the 11th day of May, 1797, to Charles John Baptiste Fleuri, for the quantity of forty arpents front on both sides of the said bayou, of which this claim is a part. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 32. Pierre Foucher claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, district of Barrataria, on the bayou des Familles, having seven arpents front on each side of the bayou, and forty arpents in depth on each side, bounded on one side by lands of Dominique Bouligny and Pierre St. Poe, and on the other side by lands of Madame Guerbois and Marigny Dauterive.

This land is claimed by purchase under a concession made by the Spanish Government on the 2d of April, 1800, to Pablo Suares Ruis. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 33. Robert Martin claims a tract of land, situate on the bayou Bœuf, in the county of Lafourche, having a front of forty arpents on said bayou, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded above by land of Pilboro, and below by vacant land.

This land is claimed by purchase under François Flores, in whose favor an order of survey was made by Governor Galvez on the 7th of August, 1777. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 34. Robert Martin claims a tract of land, situate on the bayou Blake, in the county of Lafourche, having a front of fifty arpents on both sides of said bayou, with a depth of forty arpents.

This land is claimed by purchase under Miguel Saturnino, in whose favor an order of survey was made by Governor Gayoso on the 2d of November, 1798. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 35. Robert Martin claims a tract of land, situate on the bayou Bœuf, in the county of Lafourche, having a front of forty arpents on both sides of said bayou, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded above by lands of Montaran, and below by lands of Dumain.

This land is claimed by right of purchase under Antoine Pilboro, in whose favor an order of survey was made by Governor Galvez on the 2d day of July, 1776. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 36. Robert Martin claims a tract of land, situate in the interior of Lafourche, on the bayou Bœuf, having a front of thirty arpents on both sides of said bayou, with the ordinary depth of forty arpents, bounded above and below by public lands.

This land is claimed by right of purchase under Jacques Montaran, in whose favor an order of survey was made by Governor Galvez on the 5th of May, 1775. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 37. William Wilson claims a tract of land, situate on both sides of the bayou Blake, having a front of forty arpents on both sides of said bayou, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded on one side by lands of Miguel Saturnino, and on the other by vacant land.

This land is claimed by purchase under John Slano, in whose favor an order of survey was made by Governor Gayoso on the 8th of August, 1798. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 38. François Saulet claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, on the left bank of the Mississippi, having sixteen arpents front, by a depth extending to lake Pontchartrain. Fourteen arpents of said land are included in the plan annexed, within blue lines, and the other two arpents are situated below, and divided from the said fourteen arpents by the claim of Margaret Girardin, of one and a quarter arpents, bounded formerly by — Blanchard, and now by lands of Delhommer.

This land is claimed by purchase. The surveyor, Mr. Portier, certifies that the plat accompanying this claim is conformable to the plat made by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana on the 22d day of June, 1781. The claimant produces a deed of sale for part of this land, made in the year 1794, and the depositions of two witnesses, stating that a tract of twenty-one arpents front (of which this is a part) was granted by the Spanish Governor Unzaga to the widow Grondel, and that this claim or grant extends to the lake. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 39. Francis Joseph Delhommer claims a tract of land situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, on the left bank of the Mississippi, having three arpents front, and running back forty arpents, and then two arpents front, extending to lake Pontchartrain, bounded above by lands of François Soulet, and below by lands of the claimant.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant produces a Spanish sale, made and passed before Jacques Massicot, then commandant of the parish, and dated 15th May, 1784; he also produces several affidavits, stating that the land was granted by the Spanish Government upwards of forty years ago. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 40. John Baptiste Vickner, Nicholas Vickner, Louis Le Bon, and Andre Madere, heirs of Balthazar Vickner, claim a tract of land, situate in the county of German Coast, containing five arpents front on the left bank of the Mississippi, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded above by lands of John B. Vickner, as the plat annexed shows.

This land was granted by the Spanish Government to Balthazar Vickner, on the 23d April, 1776, from whom it has descended to the present claimants. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 41. Edmund Drouet and John Baptiste Drouet claim a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having three arpents and eleven feet front, by a depth of forty arpents, bounded above by lands of Joseph Foursier, and below by lands of Toré Gano.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimants produce a survey made by the Surveyor General, by authority, in the year 1793, of which this claim is the half. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 42. Widow of Joseph Faussier claims a tract of land, situated in the county of Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, containing three arpents and eleven feet front, by a depth of forty arpents, bounded above by lands of widow Jean Mendez, and below by lands of Edmund and J. B. Drouet.

This claim is founded on purchase, and is derived from the same title as the preceding one, being half of the original survey. I am, consequently, of opinion it ought to be confirmed.

No. 43. Samuel Alfred Taylor claims a tract of land, situated in the former district of Galveztown, he thinks now in the parish of Iberville, containing three hundred superficial arpents, bounded on one side by lands of Baptiste Abair, and on the other by vacant lands.

This land is claimed by purchase, under a grant by the Baron Carondelet, bearing date 10th February, 1795, to Daniel McConnell, under whom the claimant holds. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 44. John Louis Drouet claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, containing four arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded as per plat annexed.

This land is claimed by purchase under a survey made, by authority, by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, dated in the year 1802. The claimant also proves possession in himself, and those under whom he claims, upwards of forty years. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 45. The heirs of Antoine Bernard Dauterive claim a tract of land, situated in the parish of Orleans, district of Barrataria, containing about fifty arpents front on the river Ouachas, extending back to the land formerly of Madame Pablo, now of Pierre Foucher, bounded above by lands of the widow Guerbois, and below by the bayou Dauphin.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimants prove that this land was granted by the French Government, and the witnesses testify that they have seen the concession for it. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 46. François Mayronne claims a tract of land situate in the parish of Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, containing, 1st, five arpents eight toises front, and eighty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of Joseph Dauphin, and below by land of the claimant; 2d, six arpents front, and one hundred arpents in depth, bounded above and below by lands of the claimants; 3d, one arpent and a half front, and one hundred arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of the claimant, and below by lands of Dominique Bouligny.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant produces orders of survey, and surveys executed for this land in favor of those under whom he claims, duly executed by the Spanish Government. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 47. Joseph Marie Bourguignon claims two tracts of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the left bank of the Mississippi, one containing one arpent front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by land of widow Michel Lesch, and below by lands of the claimant; the other tract contains three-quarters of an arpent front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by the first tract, and below by lands of Noel Destrehan.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, and is part of a tract of four arpents front granted by the Spanish Government, and recorded in the claims of Adam and widow Michel Lesch, among these reports. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 48. François Mayronne claims a tract of land, situated in the district of Barrataria, being an island, containing two leagues front.

This land is claimed in right of purchase under a complete Spanish grant, made 1st March, 1794. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 49. Adam Lesch and widow Michel Lesch claim a tract of land, situated in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing two arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded above by one arpent front of Labranche, brothers, and below by one other arpent front of Joseph Bourguignon.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant produces an order of survey executed by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, in the year 1785, for four arpents front, of which this is a part, and held under that title. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 50. Eugene McCarty claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Bernard, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing three arpents front, crossing the bayou Bœuf, running south on the lower line of the land of Pierre Marigny, now owned by Jourdin frères, bounded above by the said Jourdin, and below to lands granted to the islanders.

This land is claimed by purchase, and is part of a tract of land formerly confirmed by the late Board of Commissioners in favor of Louis De Clouet, the whole founded on a survey made by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana in the year 1799. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 51. Catharine Rodriques, widow of Joseph Gonzales, claims a tract of land situated in the parish of Ascension, six miles from the Mississippi, on the right bank of the bayou Lafourche, containing five arpents seven toises and three feet front, and forty arpents in depth, and bounded above by lands of Baptiste Landry.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on an order of survey, and survey made during the Spanish Government of Louisiana. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 52. John Baptiste Labranche, Hermegene Labranche, and Similien Labranche, claim a tract of land, situated in the parish of St. John Baptiste, bounded above by land of widow Deslonde, and below by land of widow Joseph Schrantz, containing twelve arpents twenty-two toises front on the left bank of the Mississippi, and forty arpents in depth; also, a tract of land, containing one arpent in front, and forty in depth, between the land of the said widow Schrantz and that of Adam Lesch.

This land is claimed by purchase founded on surveys made by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, one in the year 1786, now produced, and the other made in 1785, now in the possession of the said Adam Lesch. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 53. Pierre St. Armand claims a tract of land situated in the island of Grand Isle, district of Barrataria, county of Orleans, containing three hundred and fifty-seven acres and three one-hundredths, bounded west and north by the bay of Cormenda, and marshy lands, east by the Gulf of Mexico, and south by lands claimed by François Anfai or Normond.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on an order of survey by Governor Galvez, on the 2d of July, 1781. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 54. Widow Jacques de Villiers claims a tract of land, situated on the island of Plaquemine, in the parish of Iberville, right bank of the Mississippi, bounded above by bayou Jacob, and below by bayou Plaquemine, containing about seven arpents front, and a depth of forty arpents, running back to the lands of Antoine Rodrigues, now Cadet Jacob.

This land is claimed by deed of gift, and is a part of a tract founded on a concession of the Spanish Government in the year 1772, already registered in book B, page 184, and confirmed. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 55. John Baptiste Drouin Labranche and Lucien Labranche claim a tract of land, situated in the parish of Orleans, (Chapitoulas,) being a second depth back of land belonging to Alphonse Faussien, containing a front of ten arpents and three feet on the right bank of Mississippi.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, at auction, by the Register of Wills. The Surveyor General of Louisiana executed the plat of said land, and certified that said land extended to lake Verret, and contained four hundred and thirty-six superficial arpents. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 56. François Mayronne claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, district of Barrataria, bounded on the north by vacant land and by lands of claimant, east by lands of D. Bouligny, south by lands of Martha Dauphin, now Manuel Rosseau, and west by vacant land, containing a front of six arpents, and forty arpents in depth.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant produces a concession made by the Spanish Government on the 8th of August, 1796, to Joseph Montegut, under whom the claimant holds. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 57. Henry Fonteneau claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, bounded on the upper side by lands of Mr. Fortin, and below by lands of Gabriel Cloutier, containing eight arpents four toises three feet front, on the second depth, extending to lake Maurepas.

This land is claimed by purchase. It is proved that this land was part of a village of the Eolapesas Indians, and by them sold, with the consent of Governor Bienville, in 1735; afterwards surveyed by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, in the year 1790; and deeds of sale show that this land has been possessed and cultivated by the claimant since the year 1784. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 58. The widow Joseph Schrantz claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of St. John Baptiste, bounded above and below by lands of Labranche, brothers, containing three arpents in front, on the left bank of the Mississippi, and forty arpents in depth.

This land is claimed in virtue of a survey made by authority of the Spanish Government in the year 1785. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 59. John Alexis Le Blanc claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of Iberville, containing about four arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded below by land recorded in the name of Joseph Rabin, and above by lands held by John Baptiste Allain.

It appears that two arpents front of said land is derived from Armand Richard, who obtained a complete title from the Spanish Government for thirteen arpents ten toises front, of which this is a part; the two other arpents front are derived from Joseph Richard, who obtained a complete Spanish grant for six arpents front, of which this is also a part. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 60. John Baptiste Allain claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of Iberville, containing five arpents, bounded above by lands claimed by J. Alexis Le Blanc, and below by land of Isaac Le Blanc.

Four arpents of this land is derived from a complete grant in favor of Joseph Richard, and one arpent from a complete Spanish grant in favor of Bonaventura Le Blanc, on record in this office, in book No. 1, folio 244, for nine arpents and twelve toises front, of which this is a part. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 61. Etienne Tusson and Victoire Le Blanc, his wife, claim a tract of land, situated in the parish of Iberville, bounded above by lands of Simond Broussard, and below by lands of Pierre Hebert, containing about five arpents and a half front, and forty arpents in depth.

It appears that this claim is part of a tract granted to Susan Baptiste Allain, on the 5th of February, 1775, by a complete grant or concession, on record in this office, lib. 1, fol. 323. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 62. Valerie Hebert, Jacques Melanson, his wife, together with Paul Hebert, severally claim a tract of land, under a complete Spanish grant in favor of Pablo Hebert, from whom their title is derived, to wit: Valerie Hebert claims five arpents and four toises front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded below by lands granted to Pedro Hebert, and entered in the name of Armand Hebert, and above by lands of said Melanson and wife.

The said Jacques Melanson, and his wife, Maria Christine Landry, claim three toises three arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded below by said Valerie Hebert, and above by Paul Hebert.

Paul Hebert claims two arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded below by said S. Melanson, and above by Mathurin Landry.

The whole tract, according to the original grant and survey, contains ten arpents and seven toises front, and forty arpents in depth. I am of opinion these claims ought to be confirmed.

No. 63. Gervaise Arnauth claims a tract of land, situated in the county of Orleans, left bank of Mississippi, containing eighteen arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of Ioniac, and below by lands of Norbel Fortier.

This land is claimed by purchase from persons who produce a sale made for said land in the year 1781, by authority of the Spanish Government. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 64. Civile Arnault claims a tract of land, situated in the county of Orleans, right bank of the Mississippi, containing seventeen arpents twenty toises and eleven inches front, and eighty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of Honoré Aieux, and below by lands of Lorenzo Mesie.

It appears the first forty arpents in depth is claimed by purchase during the Spanish Government of Louisiana, that ten arpents front, of the second depth, was granted by Governor Gayoso on the 9th August, 1797, and the remaining parts appear to have been possessed and cultivated during the Spanish Government. I am, therefore, of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 65. Louis Cossier claims, for the use of Robert Martin, a tract of land, situated in the parish of Lafourche Interior, fronting on the bayou Cattou, and containing forty arpents front, on each side of said bayou, and forty arpents in depth, bounded, in the year 1788, above and below by vacant land.

This land is claimed by purchase, under an order of survey made by Governor Miro, in the year 1788. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 66. Louis Duma, for the use of Robert Martin, claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of Lafourche Interior, containing fifty arpents front, on each side of bayou Cattou, and forty arpents in depth, bounded, in the year 1798, above by vacant lands, and below by lands of Cossier.

This land is claimed by purchase, under an order of survey made by Governor Gayoso, on the 7th of March, 1798. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 67. Jacques Lambez, for the use of Robert Martin, claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of Lafourche Interior, containing a front of thirty arpents, on each side of bayou Cattou, and forty in depth, bounded, in the year 1789, by Cossier above, and below by vacant land.

This land is claimed by purchase, under an order of survey made by Governor Miro, in the year 1789. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 68. Widow Jacques Fortier claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of Orleans, containing twenty-seven arpents and a half front, with all the depth to be found, lying on the left side of the Mississippi, bounded above by land of J. Holiday, and below by land of Pierre Sauvé, as more fully appears by the plat annexed.

This claim is founded on a survey, executed by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, purporting to have been made by authority of the Spanish Government. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 69. Helen Ross McMasters, by Samuel McMasters, claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of St. James, left bank of the Mississippi, containing thirteen arpents and twenty-nine toises front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of Mr. Boucré, and below by lands of Mr. Brown.

This land is claimed by purchase. The claimant produces an order of survey made by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, by authority, dated in the year 1782, for a front of five arpents and fifteen toises; the balance of the claim being composed of small, probably subdivisions of a larger tract, the original titles cannot be traced, but the claimant proves quiet possession upwards of thirty years. I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 70. Barthelemy Jourdin, Pierre Jourdin, and Manuel Hod, claim a tract of land situated in the parish of Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, bounded above by lands of Dr. Flood, and below by lands of Bernardy and Planchard, containing twenty-five arpents and seventeen toises front, and seventy arpents in depth.

This land is claimed by purchase. It appears that the upper part of this land is derived from the widow Loubise, and the lower part Raquet, who was owner of the lands adjacent and back of the first concession, since the land of Mr. Posé, now Dr. Flood's, (whose land has a depth of eighty arpents,) to the land of Mr. Brown, now Bernardy and Planchard. A deed of sale, dated 26th April, 1786, states that said Raquet had a second depth of seventy arpents, by a commission granted to him by the West Company, in the year 1725, on the 20th February. Said deed also states that said Raquet, in the year 1786, made an exchange of three arpents front on the river, and forty arpents in depth, for five arpents front, with a depth of thirty arpents back of the first depth of said widow Soubre, and which is also shown by the plat of survey of the Surveyor General, Laveau Trudeau. The claimants also prove that the whole of this land was established and cultivated upwards of forty years. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 71. John Baptiste Marchand and Celestin Vickner claim a tract of land, situated in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing four arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of John Baptiste Baudry, and below by lands of Adam Jacob.

This land is claimed by purchase, under a grant made to Jean Albert le Naitre, on the 23d April, 1776. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 72. Christopher Adams claims a tract of land, situated about five leagues below the mouth of bayou Plaquemine, on the right side of the Mississippi, beginning at the distance of eighty arpents from said river, being a cypress swamp, and containing one league square.

This land is claimed by purchase under a grant made by Governor Miro, dated 29th January, 1790. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 73. Jacques François Enoul Liraudais claims a tract of land, situated in the county and parish of Orleans, near the city, containing thirteen arpents front, to wit: eleven arpents front have a depth of eighty arpents, and the remaining two arpents have a depth of forty arpents, bounded above by lands of the nuns, and below by the Fauxbourg la Course.

The claimant holds in right of inheritance founded on original French concession. I am, therefore, of opinion his claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 74. Jacques François Enoul Liraudais claims a tract of land, situated in the parish and county of Orleans, on the left bank of the Mississippi, near the city of New Orleans, containing nineteen arpents and three-quarters front, and eighty arpents in depth.

This land is held partly in right of inheritance and partly in right of purchase, the whole founded on an original French concession. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 75. Sosthene Roman and Antoine Marigny d'Auterive, acting as syndics of the creditors of Jean Baptiste Degruys, claim a tract of land, situated in the county of Orleans, district of Barrataria, being an island, containing about two leagues long and a league wide, bounded on one side by the lake Barrataria, and on the other side by the bayou St. Denis.

This land is claimed in virtue of an order of survey, made by the Spanish Governor, Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, on the 24th April, 1798. I am, therefore, of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 76. Sosthene Roman and Antoine Marigny d'Auterive, syndics of the creditors of Jean Baptiste Degruys, claim a tract of land, situated in the county of Orleans, district of Barrataria, being a depth of eighty arpents, adjacent to and back of the lands of François Bouigny, (now Antoine Foucher, who also owns eighty arpents in depth,) and back of the property of Jacques Porte and Piguery, now Deston Destrehan, Henderson, Bartl. Hazard, Saulet, and J. V. Degruys. Said depth of eighty arpents is situated on both sides of the bayou Ouachas.

This land is claimed in virtue of an order of survey, granted by Estevan Miro, late Governor of the province of Louisiana, on the 12th August, 1789. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 77. Sosthene Roman and Antoine Marigny d'Auterive, acting as syndics of the creditors of Jean Baptiste Degruys, claim a tract of land, situated in the parish of Orleans, district of Barrataria, containing one hundred and sixty arpents front on the right bank of the bayou Barrataria, two leagues distant from the property of Porte and Destrehan, Henderson, &c., whose lands are fronting on the right bank of the Mississippi.

This claim is founded on an order of survey made by Governor Miro, 12th August, 1789. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 78. Simon Babin and the widow Paul Babin claim a tract of land, situated in the parish of Iberville, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing five arpents and twenty-three toises front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of Narcisse Le Blanc, and below by lands of Charles de Armas.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on a concession and survey made pursuant thereto in the year 1772. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 79. James Williams claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of Plaquemine, left bank of the Mississippi, containing fifty-four arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of Delornelle, and below by lands of Jean Vinet.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on a procès-verbal of survey, executed by Don Andry, a Spanish surveyor, dated 28th November, 1774, for forty-nine arpents front of said land; and the claimant proves possession and cultivation by himself, and by those under whom he claims, ever since the aforesaid period. I am, therefore, of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 80. Widow Thomas Alexander claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of Lafourche, on the right bank of the bayou Lafourche, containing seven arpents and thirteen toises front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded as described in the plat of survey annexed.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on a survey made by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, by authority, in the year 1802. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 81. John Teirot claims a tract of land for himself and others, situated in the parish of Ascension, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing five arpents and twenty-four toises front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of Joseph Richard, and below by lands of Dr. Prevost.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on a grant made by the Spanish Government in the year 1774. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 82. Dr. Prevost claims for himself and others a tract of land, situated in the parish of Ascension, on the left bank of the river Mississippi, containing five arpents twenty toises and three feet front, bounded above by lands of John Teirot, and below by lands of ———.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on a grant made by the Spanish Government in the year 1774. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

Dominique Bouligny claims a tract of land, situated in the county of Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, district of Barrataria, containing about two hundred superficial acres, bounded east by lands of Antoine and Tenon Foucher, and north and south by lands of the claimant.

This land is claimed by purchase, founded on a concession made by the Spanish Government, as appears from the book of concessions in my office. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 83. John Joseph Jourdin claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of Orleans, district of Barrataria, containing twenty arpents on each side of the bayou called Barrataria, and forty arpents in depth, bounded on three sides by lands of Thomas Durnford.

This land was granted by the Spanish Government, on the 20th March, 1794, to John Normond, and by him sold to the claimant on the 9th September, 1800, in whose possession it has been since that period. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 84. John Tregle claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the east side of the river Mississippi, containing seven arpents and thirty-four feet front, and eighty arpents in depth, bounded above by the lands of Theodore Tregle, and below by lands of Matthias Ory.

This land claimant holds, by inheritance from his father, and is part of a larger tract sold by the claimant to his brothers, who have had their claim duly confirmed by the late Board of Commissioners; the whole being founded on a grant made by Governor Galvez, then Governor of the province of Louisiana. I am of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 85. Ursin Perret claims a tract of land situated in the parish of St. John Baptiste, right bank of the Mississippi, containing seventeen arpents front, and eighty arpents in depth.

This land is claimed by purchase, under a complete Spanish grant made in the year 1776. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 86. Louis Mollere claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of West Baton Rouge, west side of the Mississippi, containing fifteen arpents in front, and forty arpents in depth.

The claimant produces the order of survey of this land made by Vincent Pintado, a Spanish surveyor, in the year 1800. Claimant also proves by a certified copy of this land of the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, that the first survey was made by order of the commandant, Grandpré, in pursuance of instructions to that effect from Governor Gayoso, bearing date 23d January, 1799. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 87. James Godberry claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. James, containing four arpents and eighteen toises front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of widow André Bernard, and on the lower side by lands of George Roussel.

This land is claimed by purchase, and it is expressly stated, on oath, by two respectable witnesses, that this land was originally granted by the Spanish Government, and surveyed by the same authority; and that it has been peaceably possessed and cultivated by the claimant, and those under whom he holds, during the last thirty years. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 88. Espiritie Liston claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of West Baton Rouge, right bank of the Mississippi, containing twenty arpents front, and forty arpents deep, lying, and being at a distance of thirty arpents below a grant made to claimant, and afterwards annulled on 29th August, 1792.

The Spanish Government, on the 29th day of August, 1792, granted to claimant another tract of land, which was afterwards annulled at the instance of the claimant; and, in lieu thereof, this land was granted to him on the 27th October, 1792, as appears from the book of the Spanish grants in my office. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 89. Alexander Boudin, attorney in fact of the heirs of the late Patrick Conway, claims a tract of land, situate in the district of Point Coupee, containing ten arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded on one side by vacant lands, and on the other side by lands of William Conway.

This land is claimed in virtue of a complete Spanish grant in favor of said Patrick Conway, dated 1st December, 1786, as appears from the books in my office. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

SAMUEL H. HARPER, Register.

NEW ORLEANS, January 6, 1821.

CLASS SECOND.

Including claims to land under the 4th section of the act of Congress passed the 11th day of May, 1820, which have been regularly filed in the proper office, but which have not been confirmed.

No. 90. Samuel Perry claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Point Coupee, below the place commonly known by the name of Point Raccoucé on the west side of the river Mississippi, containing sixty-one chains and fifty links in front, and one hundred and four chains in depth, forming a superficies of ten hundred and forty acres, and bounded on the upper side by lands of John McLanahan, and on the lower by lands of Charles Morgan.

This land was claimed before the former Board of Commissioners for this district, who confirmed the claim to the depth of forty arpents, but rejected the balance. Their reasons for so doing, as stated by the Board, were, that the land claimed is situated at the neck of a large bend in the river, and that, by granting to the claimant the ordinary depth of forty arpents, his claim would extend to the opposite neck, thereby giving him two fronts, which they contended was contrary to the principle of granting lands by the Spanish Government.

My construction adopted by the Spanish Government in relation to the refusal to grant two fronts to the same individual, is this: that, where two persons were interested in the same piece of land, it was not permitted that one should stretch across from one point to the other, to the injury of the other, but that the land should be so divided as that each might have a front on the river, as if, in this case, the land was so situated as to give two fronts; but where the grant was made to one person, and not for a greater quantity than was usually given, as in this case, and where it is indispensably necessary that levees should be made at both points of the river, so as to render the land valuable to all by keeping the water from overflowing, I think the Spanish Government, under those circumstances, would not have hesitated to have given the claimant the whole of his claim; according to these premises, and the claimant having shown, in addition to his other proof, that no other individual pretends to have any claim to the land in question, I am of opinion he ought to be confirmed to the whole extent of his claim.

No. 91. Francis Debois claims a tract of land, situate on the bayou Moreau, in the county of Point Coupee, having twenty arpents in front on the Mississippi, with a depth of forty arpents, and bounded on the upper side by lands formerly of Francis Durcey, now of Samuel Davenport, as more fully appears by the plat of survey exhibited to be recorded.

This land is claimed in virtue of a Spanish order of survey, and the survey duly executed by the Surveyor General of the province.

This claim was rejected by the late Board of Commissioners, on the ground that it did not appear to them that it was inhabited and cultivated on the 1st day of October, 1800. The claimant did then, what he has done now, produced the order of survey, and the plat duly executed; and I am of opinion that, in virtue of the 1st and 2d sections of an act of Congress passed subsequently to the decision of the Board, to wit: "An act entitled an act for the final adjustment of land titles in the State of Louisiana and Territory of Missouri," dated 12th April, 1814, the claimant ought to be confirmed in his claim.

No. 92. Louise Fortier Habisse claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, on the right bank of the Mississippi, and being a double concession behind the front on which the claimant resides, having a front of thirty-two arpents on the same river, and running back eighty arpents, as appears from the plan exhibited.

The half, or front of this tract of land, has already been confirmed by the late Board of Commissioners; but, the other half, or rear, was not confirmed for want of evidence.

The claimant now produces written evidence that ten arpents front of the present claim was granted to Roi Villeré by the French Government, in the year 1765, under whom the claimant holds by purchase, and the remaining twenty-two arpents front, with the depth aforesaid, was granted to the husband of the claimant by the Spanish Government, in the year 1797. I am, therefore, of opinion her claim to the double or second concession ought to be confirmed.

No. 93. Peter Troxclair claims a tract of land situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having four arpents front, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded on the upper side by lands of Charles Rixner, and below by lands of Francis Troxclair.

This land makes part of another tract, and is included in the same survey which has been already confirmed to Francis Troxclair on the report of the Register and Receiver of Public Moneys for this district; and the same evidence adduced in that case applies equally to this, to wit: the permission of the proper Spanish officer to settle the land, but, by mistake, a report on this claim was omitted. Under these circumstances, I am of opinion it ought to be confirmed.

No. 94. Antoine Decuir claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Point Coupee, on the Chenelle, having forty arpents front, by forty in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of Joseph Decuir, and below by lands of

This land was claimed before the late Board of Commissioners, and one-half, viz: eight hundred superficial arpents, confirmed. The reason why they did not confirm the balance, I presume, arose from mistake; the agent of the claimant filed the notice of the claim only for what is already confirmed; but, the whole of the land claimed rests upon an order of survey issued by the Spanish Government, dated 12th July, 1788, and duly executed by the Surveyor General of the province of Louisiana, dated 18th February, 1790, and since resurveyed by the deputy surveyor of the United States. The claimant, moreover, proves possession and cultivation from the year 1790 to this time; and, also, that no other lands have been given him by the Spanish Government; also, that the claimant has made the public road and levee thereon. I am, therefore, of opinion his claim ought to be confirmed to the whole extent.

No. 95. The heirs of M. Mahier claim a tract of land, situate in the county of Iberville, on the west side of the Mississippi, having twenty arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth.

This claim was acted upon by the Register and Receiver of this district, (No. 456 of their reports, dated 20th November, 1816,) and only nine and a half arpents front was confirmed, supposing the balance had been confirmed by the late Board of Commissioners; but, upon further examination, I find we have been mistaken in the land. The confirmation of the Board for ten and a half arpents related to a different tract. As the title was good, under the law upon which we acted, for nine and a half arpents, which is now confirmed, it is equally good for the balance of the claim. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 96. Thomas Hebert claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of Iberville, west side of the Mississippi, containing one hundred and fifty superficial acres, and bounded in front by lands of the claimant, and above by lands of Olivier Arnandez, and below by lands of Pierre Devet.

This claim was rejected by the late Board of Commissioners for want of sufficient evidence. The claimant now proves that he had quiet and uninterrupted possession thereof more than ten consecutive years prior to the 20th of December, 1803. If this evidence had been given to the Board, I think they would have confirmed the claim; and, as the title would have been good under the then existing law, I am of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 97. The widow and heirs of Diego Arnandez claim a tract of land, situate in parish of Iberville, above the bayou Plaquemine, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having ten arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of ———, and below by lands claimed by Armand Hebert.

This claim was rejected by the late Board of Commissioners for want of testimony. The evidence now produced proves that this land was granted by the Spanish Government, in the year 1787, to Pedro Hebert, who afterwards abandoned said land, and neglected to keep up the road and levee. That, on the 10th of August, 1792, the Baron de Carondelet ordered the commandant of the parish of Iberville to give the lands on which the levees were not made, or were abandoned to such persons as would make them. That this tract being one of that description, pursuant to that order, the husband and father of the claimants were put in possession; who, and whose heirs, have ever since continued to reside thereon, and make the roads, levees, &c. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 98. Antoine Leonard and his wife, (the widow of the late Bernard Dauterive,) and tutor of her minor children, claim for the succession of said Dauterive, and those who hold under him, a tract of land in the parish of Iberville, containing six arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded by lands of Thomas Hebert and Gregoire Melanson, and is part of a larger tract originally granted to Athanasio Landry.

This claim was rejected by the late Board of Commissioners for want of testimony. The claimants now prove that this land was granted by the Spanish Government; and that it was in possession and cultivation by them, and by those under whom they claim, more than ten consecutive years prior to the 20th of December, 1803. I am, therefore, of opinion the claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 99. Xavier Robeclaux claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of Iberville, on bayou Plaquemine, on the right bank, having ten arpents front, by forty arpents in depth.

The claimant produces an order of survey from the Spanish Government, dated 18th December, 1794; but the late Board of Commissioners rejected this claim merely because it was not proved to have been inhabited and cultivated on the 20th December, 1803. The claim, however, I think, stands confirmed, or ought to be, in virtue of the second section of the act of Congress, of 12th of April, 1814, entitled "An act for the final adjustment of land titles in the State of Louisiana and Territory of Missouri."

No. 100. The widow and heirs of Joseph Mollere, for the use of F. P. Michel, claim a tract of land, situate in the parish of West Baton Rouge, containing eight hundred superficial arpents.

This land was claimed before the late Board of Commissioners on the ground of its being held in virtue of a Spanish order of survey, which was produced; but they rejected the claim, alleging that possession was not shown on the 1st October, 1800. The claim, however, is and ought to be confirmed in virtue of the second section of the act of 12th April, 1814, cited in the preceding claim.

No. 101. Louis Reaubeau claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, on the west side of the Mississippi, nearly opposite Point La Hache, containing twenty arpents front, and forty arpents in depth.

This claim was reported among others by the Register and Receiver of this district, under date 20th November, 1816; but there being no evidence adduced in support thereof, it is not confirmed. The claimant now proves possession and cultivation upwards of twenty-five years, and that he has always made the roads and levees. I am, therefore, of opinion this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 102. Barthelemy McCarty claims, by inheritance from his father, John Baptiste McCarty, a tract of land, situate back of the city of New Orleans, bounded on the north side by the canal Carondelet, the bayou St. John, and part of Roquegny's land, on the west side by lands of the claimant and the heirs of Boré, and on the southeast by vacant lands, measuring about one thousand three hundred superficial acres.

This land was formerly claimed before the late Board of Commissioners in the name of John Baptiste McCarty, the father of the claimant, and by them rejected on two grounds: first, that the claimant pretended to have had a grant for this land from the Baron de Carondelet, dated in 1795, but that it had been destroyed by fire; and, secondly, if ever the grant was made, it was clearly apparent to the Board that the said land was covered with other grants long antecedent to that made to the claimant. It, however, is now proved by the testimony of the Spanish surveyor, Pintado, and by a deputy surveyor, at that time, of the United States, that the grant was made by Carondelet; and that said Pintado did actually survey it in conformity thereto, and that the grant was not burnt, but mislaid for some time, and afterwards seen by the latter witness among the papers of a certain Bertrand Gravier; that it was complete, and in the best form. With regard to the fact assumed by the Board, that this land had been antecedently granted to others, I find no such evidence on record. On the contrary, it is now proved by B. Lafon and J. Pilie, both surveyors, that the land in question does not interfere with any other grant; but, admitting the fact, I conceive the only point then, as well as now, to be decided, is, whether the United States have any claim to said land. I am of opinion that they have none, and, therefore, think this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 103. Maria Dauberville, widow Bouligny, claims a lot of ground, situate in the city of New Orleans, at the corner of Dumain and Conde streets, containing seventy-three feet on Conde street and sixty-five feet on Dumain street, bounded on one side by the public ball-room, and on the other side by the public stores, containing a superficies of four thousand seven hundred and forty-five feet, all French measure, under a grant from the Baron de Carondelet, in the year 1792, (which has been mislaid or lost,) to the late Colonel Bouligny, her husband; and which the said Colonel Bouligny, during his lifetime, and the said applicant after his death, and have always, since the said grant, cultivated and possessed.

This claim was presented to and acted upon by the late Board of Commissioners, and by them rejected. It appears from a minute examination of the case, and from the additional testimony offered by the claimant, that the commissioners were probably mistaken in point of facts. They assigned as a reason for the rejection of the claim, that the lot had been granted by the Spanish Government to Don Guido Dufosset, on condition that he should pay $12 per month; and that he having failed to comply with the condition, upon the representation of the Intendant to the King, it was annexed to the royal domain. I have not been able to discover any connexion between Dufosset and the claimant.

She claims in right of her husband, deceased, late Colonel Bouligny, and, in order to show a title in him, she produces the testimony of four respectable inhabitants of the county; to wit: Louis De Ferret deposes that, in the year 1793, he was a cadet in the regiment of Louisiana; that he resided in the family of Colonel Bouligny, the claimant's husband, from that time to the transfer of the province; that, during all that time to the present moment, this lot has been considered the property of the family of Colonel Bouligny; that Colonel Bouligny built a house on said lot, with the knowledge of the Governors who successively commanded, and of the Intendant; that he never heard any claim set up to said lot by the Government; that he has seen a concession or grant for it signed, as he believes, by the Baron de Carondelet, to Colonel Bouligny, for the said lot; that, in the year 1794, there was a very destructive fire in the city of New Orleans, and that, in the confusion occasioned by the conflagration, many papers of individuals were lost and burnt. Another witness, Antoine Crugat, was a lieutenant in the regiment commanded by Colonel Bouligny, and confirms all the material facts stated by the first witness, particularly as to the building of the house, and enclosing said lot, with the perfect knowledge of the Governor. And further, that it was within his knowledge, as an officer of the Treasury of the State for the last five years, that the claimant has uniformly paid the taxes for the house and lot. Another witness, Manuel Garcia, says that, in the year 1792, it was generally understood by persons acquainted and connected with the Spanish Government, that a grant had been given to the husband of the claimant for this lot by the Baron Carondelet; that her husband built a house, &c., thereon; that, after the Baron de Carondelet was transferred to the province of Quito, Governor Gayoso was the Governor of Louisiana; that he knows Colonel Bouligny possessed the lot as his own; that, in the year 1799, orders were received from Spain to transfer the cognizance of the grants of lands, and every thing that related to the public property, to the Intendant of the province, Don Juan Ventura Morales; that the said Intendant was very strict and scrupulous in claiming all public property, and that Colonel Bouigny must have had a title for his lot, otherwise he would have been dispossessed. Witness also states that he was commander of the royal galleys; that he knows some of the archives of the Spanish Government of Louisiana were removed to Pensacola, and thence to the Havana, and that the vessel in which they were was searched by pirates, and a great part of the said archives were destroyed, and that among them were papers relative to concessions of lands in Louisiana, as well as other papers; that, some time after the cognizance of the public property was transferred to the Intendant, a strict research was set on foot by the Intendant to ascertain the lots and other property belonging to the King in the city of New Orleans, but that witness never knew or heard that any claim was made to this lot by the Intendant. Another witness, J. Delassire, deposes, in substance, to that sworn to by the other witnesses. Such are the facts in this case, which are respectfully submitted for decision.

SAM. H. HARPER,

Register of the Land Office for Eastern district of Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, January 6, 1821.

CLASS THIRD.

No. 104. John Baptiste Hebert claims a tract of land, situated in the parish of West Baton Rouge, containing five hundred and seventy-four arpents and sixty-five one-hundredths, fronting on the Mississippi, and bounded on the upper side by lands of Alexis Hebert, and on the lower side by lands of Charles Hebert.

The claimant proves uninterrupted possession and cultivation ever since the year 1792.

No. 105. Drausin Labranche and brothers claim three tracts of land of two arpents front each, making, in the whole, six arpents front, on the right bank of the Mississippi, with a depth of forty arpents, situate in the county of Orleans, bounded on the upper side by lands of the claimants, and below by lands of Louis Dufithe, two arpents of which are held in virtue of a purchase from Charlotte Lacombe, a free woman of color; two other arpents by purchase from Simon Menard, and two other arpents by purchase from Francis Lousier and Madame Emelie Jean-net Lavergne.

The claimants prove possession and occupation, by those under whom they claim, more than ten years anterior to the cession of Louisiana to the United States.

No. 106. Francis Duplessis, Sen., claims a tract of land on the left bank of the Mississippi, in the parish of Plaquemine, county of Orleans, having fourteen arpents front, and bounded on the upper side by lands of Jeannet Nivet, and on the lower side by lands of James Williams, as more fully appears from the plat hereto annexed.

This land is said to have been granted to Gentilly Dreux by the Spanish Government, and is held by the claimant in virtue of purchase. He proves possession and cultivation, by those under whom he claims, for more than forty years.

No. 107. Pierre B. St. Martin and Madame widow Ranson claim a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having fourteen arpents two toises and five feet front, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded on the upper side by lands of Madame Ranson, and on the lower side by lands of Charles Perret, as more fully appears from the plat annexed.

The claimants prove that this land was originally the property of Charles Darenbourg, and occupied by him in the year 1783, under whom they claim by successive sales.

No. 108. Pierre Pujal Perret claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having five arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth, and bounded on the upper side by lands of Pierre B. St. Martin, Jun., and on the lower side by lands of Rouel Perret, being half of a tract of land of which the said Pierre B. St. Martin claims the other half.

It appears that this land was originally the property of Robert Robin Delagny, and that it was in possession in the year 1784. The claimant holds by successive purchases under the said original owner.

No. 109. Pierre B. St. Martin, Jun., claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having five arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth, being half of the tract, one-half of which is claimed by Pierre Pujal Perret, bounded on the upper side by lands of Madame Le Blan, and on the lower side by lands of Pierre P. Perret, as appears by the plat annexed.

This claim is precisely similar, and held by the same title as the preceding claim.

No. 110. George Mather claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. James, on the left bank of the Mississippi, having twenty-eight arpents (more or less) front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of John Tirquet, and on the lower side by lands of the widow Raymon Cousset.

This land is claimed by purchase from the original owners, and the claimant proves uninterrupted possession upwards of thirty years of himself, and those under whom he claims.

No. 111. Antoine Vichnair and Jacques Vichnair claim a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the left bank of the Mississippi, having four and a half arpents (more or less) front, with a depth of forty arpents, bounded on the upper side by lands of Jacques Clemant, and on the lower side by lands of Michel Permy.

The claimants produce evidence of the purchase from the original proprietor, dated in the year 1788.

No. 112. Manuel Garcier claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having twenty-two arpents and nine toises in front, with a depth of forty arpents, making a superficies, as per plan annexed, of seven hundred and ninety-five arpents, bounded on the upper side by lands of George Bossier, fils, and on the lower side by lands of Pierre Bossier, père.

The claimant holds by purchase, and proves possession in those under whom he claims, some time anterior to the year 1758.

No. 121. Mrs. widow Vaugine Darenbourg claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, county of German Coast, on the west side of the Mississippi river, having five arpents, less fifteen feet, front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by the claim of Charles Perret, and on the lower side by the claim of Mrs. Brou, as more fully appears from the plat of survey annexed.

The claimant holds in right of purchase, and proves possession in herself, and those under whom she claims, upwards of twenty-five years.

No. 122. Yves Bartelotte claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, county of German Coast, on the right bank of the Mississippi, having four and a half arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of Delette, and below by lands of Noel Delette.

The claimant holds in right of purchase, and produces a bill of sale, made at public auction, by Manuel Andry, Spanish commandant, dated 8th November, 1796.

No. 123. Peter and George Bossie claim a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the west side of the Mississippi river, having twelve and a half arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded above by Justin and Maximilian Bossie, and below by lands of Manuel Garcia, with an opening of eighty degrees.

The claimants hold in right of purchase, and produce a deed of sale, by which it appears said land was possessed and cultivated in the year 1791.

No. 124. Eugene Bare claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the west side of the Mississippi, having four arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of Francis Jacob, and below by lands of Justin and Maximilian Bossie.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant produces a deed of sale, by which it appears said land was possessed and cultivated in the year 1800.

No. 125. Antonio Mendez claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of Assumption, district of Lafourche, containing six hundred and forty acres, being on the bayou Bœuf, at the entrance of said bayou, on the left hand, entering said bayou from lake Palourde.

The claimant produces the certificate of the commanding officer at Lafourche, during the Spanish Government, which states that the claimant had permission from said Government to settle said land prior to the 20th December, 1803.

No. 126. Pedro Gonzales claims a tract of land, situate in the district of Lafourche, in the parish of Lafourche Interior, on the bayou Grand Caillou, containing six hundred and forty acres, adjoining the lands of Maurieun Le Blanc.

The claimant produces the certificate of the Spanish commandant at Lafourche, which states that the claimant had permission to settle said land, prior to the 20th December, 1803.

No. 127. Louis Nichol claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Jacques, left bank of the Mississippi, having one arpent twenty-seven toises three feet front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by land of Felix Lambert, and below by land of Joseph Guedry, as more fully appears from the plat of survey annexed.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, and proves possession in himself, and those under whom he claims, upwards of forty years.

No. 128: Louis Nichol claims another tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Jacques, west side of the Mississippi river, having one arpent twenty-seven toises and three feet front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper sides by lands of Ennis Thibodeaux, and below by lands of Michel Lambert.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, and the claimant proves possession, in himself and those under whom he claims, upwards of forty years.

No. 129. Joseph Bourgeois claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of Lafourche Interior, on the right bank of the Lafourche, descending, having four arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of Bastien Landry, and below by lands of Baptiste Daigle.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, and possession and cultivation, by the claimant and those under whom he holds, is proved upwards of twenty-eight years.

No. 130. Simon Le Blanc claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Acadia, having six arpents and nineteen toises in front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by lands of Charles Gotreau, and below by land of Joseph Gravoise.

This land is claimed in right of, and the claimant proves possession, in himself and those under whom he claims, upwards of twenty-eight years.

No. 131. Madame widow Millet claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. James, having two arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded on the upper side by land of John Borry, and below by land of Henry Berthol.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, and the claimant proves possession and cultivation, in herself and those under whom she claims, upwards of thirty years past.

No. 132. The heirs of Joseph Hebert claim a tract of land, situate in the parish of Iberville, of forty arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded below by lands of Oliver Arnandez, and above by lands of Simon Melanson, commencing at forty arpents from the river.

The claimant proves peaceable and uninterrupted possession of this land ten consecutive years before the 20th December, 1803, and possession on that day.

No. 133. Pierre Rivet claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of Iberville, containing four and a half arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of Thomas Hebert, and below by lands of Alexander Landry, in front of other lands of the claimant, at forty arpents from the river.

The claimant proves uninterrupted possession of said lands ten consecutive years prior to the 20th December, 1803, and possession on that day.

No. 134. Thomas Villanueva claims a tract of land, situate on the canal leading from the bayou Lafourche to Lake Verret, containing two hundred and sixty-four acres.

The claimant proves that one Francis Goutreaux had permission of the proper Spanish officer to settle this land several years previous to the 20th December, 1803; that it was so settled; that said Goutreaux has since conveyed the same to the claimant, in whose possession it now is.

No. 135. Louis Foucher claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of Orleans, fronting on the bayou des Cannes, having eighty-eight toises front, and running back, converging to a point, containing ninety-two arpents and three hundred toises, superficial measure, bounded above by lands of widow Panis, and below by lands of Jacques Liveaudais.

This land is claimed by purchase from Joseph Rousiniac; and, by reference to deeds of sale, it appears that, in the year 1780, Mr. Liveaudais, the father, purchased it from the Ursuline nuns, so that it must have been in possession long anterior, and, being part of a larger tract originally, it is now impossible to trace it to the first grant.

No. 136. John McDonough, Jun., claims a tract of land, situate eleven leagues below the city of New Orleans, on the right bank of the river Mississippi, containing sixty and a half arpents in front on the river, by eighty arpents in depth, by virtue of a purchase made by him of the late Francis Bernoudy, for the sum of $16,000.

The documents produced in favor of this claim are, first, a certificate of Charles De Latour, the late Spanish commandant of that district, attesting the right to said land in said Francis Bernoudy, by whom it was settled and improved with extensive works and buildings, cultivated, and the levee and road made and kept in repair since the year 1779; 2d, a certificate of Francis Langlois, proving the improvement and cultivation of the said land as early as 1777 and 1778, by the said F. Bernoudy, and his residence thereon; 3d, a certificate of Bernard Bernoudy, brother to the said F. Bernoudy, proving that said tract of land had been purchased in the year 1776, by his said brother, from Charles Oliver de Vegin, and had been cultivated and expensively improved a term of forty years prior to the purchase of the claimant; 4th, a plot of survey of said land, executed by Ferdinand P. Portier, a sworn surveyor, in the year 1805; 5th, a deed of sale from Francis Bernoudy to the claimant of the said tract of land, passed before Michel De Armas, Esq., notary public, in the city of New Orleans, dated 7th of February, 1816.

It appears this land was in the possession of Abner Gray, and actually inhabited and cultivated by him in the year 1802, and from that time till 20th December, 1803; on which day said Gray resided thereon, who afterwards sold it to Dument, who sold it to Stephen Blunt, of whom the claimants are the legal representatives.

No. 176. The widow and heirs of Maturin Landry claim (for the use of Seth and James Johnn, who are purchasers under them) a tract of land, situate in the parish of Iberville, on the right bank of the Mississippi, containing nearly six arpents front, adjoining and bounded by land claimed by Maturin Landry, and then running back forty arpents.

This land is claimed by purchase; and it appears that said Maturin Landry (from whom the claim is derived) was in possession of said land in 1803, and for more than ten consecutive years prior thereto.

No. 177. Benjamin Morgan claims a lot of ground in the city of New Orleans, at the corner of Gravier and Magazine streets, containing two hundred and forty-two feet on Gravier street, and one hundred and thirty-two feet on Magazine street, both French measure. This lot was purchased from Julien Poydrass, and the claimant proves, in this claim, as in all the subsequent claims for lots contained in this report, that this, and they, have been peaceably and uninterruptedly possessed prior to the cession of Louisiana to the United States.

No. 178. Benjamin Morgan claims a lot of ground in the city of New Orleans, at the corner of Gravier and Camp streets, adjoining the preceding lot, containing on Gravier street seventy-eight feet four inches, and on Camp street one hundred and eighty-seven feet six inches, French measure. This lot claimant bought of Messrs. D. and T. Arquhart. The deeds of sale for this lot proved that it was possessed at least as early as 1799.

No. 179. Benjamin Morgan claims a lot of ground in the city of New Orleans, containing sixty feet front upon Magazine street, and having the same width through the square to Camp street, between Gravier and Poydrass streets, being about three hundred and forty feet, all French measure. This lot was purchased by the claimant from Nicholas Gravier. Same proof as in claimant's first claim.

No. 180. Benjamin Morgan claims a lot of ground, situate in the city of New Orleans, at the corner of Levee and Gravier streets, extending along Gravier street to Magazine street, measuring upon Levee street sixty feet seven inches, upon Gravier street three hundred and twelve feet, and Magazine street sixty-one feet, French measure. This land claimant bought of William Flower, attorney of Cochran & Rhea, and deeds of sale prove it to have been owned and possessed as early as the year 1784.

No. 181. Benjamin Morgan claims a lot of ground in the city of New Orleans, at the corner of Levee and Gravier streets, measuring one hundred and eighty-eight feet upon Gravier street, and sixty feet on Levee street, evidencing, at the lower end of the lot, fourteen feet, all French measure. This lot claimant purchased of Pierre Bailey, and deeds of sale show that this lot was possessed and sold on the 27th February, 1789.

No. 182. Benjamin Morgan claims a lot of ground in the city of New Orleans, now occupied as a brick-yard, measuring upon Tchoupitoulas street three hundred feet, and extending to Levee street, with the right of the batture in front. This land claimant purchased, and deeds of sale show that it was possessed and sold originally in the year 1792.

Note.—As the foregoing six claims are for lots in the city, I had doubts whether the law contemplated enregistering such claims; but, at the request of the claimant I have done so, and cannot entertain a doubt as to the validity of his titles.

No. 183. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land called the Orange Grove, near the English Turn, left bank of the Mississippi, measuring twenty-six arpents front, and forty arpents deep. This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant proves, from deeds of sale, that this land was occupied and sold as early as the 31st March, 1803.

No. 184. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land in the county of Orleans, adjoining the Orange Grove, left bank of the Mississippi, containing four arpents front, by forty arpents in depth. This land is claimed by purchase from Madame Dupré, 16th February, 1804, and deeds of sale show that she had bought the same about twenty-two years previous.

No. 185. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land situate in the county of Orleans, adjoining the last mentioned tract, containing four arpents front, and forty arpents in depth. This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant proves, by deeds of sale, that it was possessed and sold as early as the 14th December, 1796.

No. 186. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, left bank of the Mississippi, near the upper end of the English Turn, containing about thirty arpents and twenty-eight toises front, and forty arpents in depth; the place now called "Cainanin." This land is claimed by purchase, and deeds of sale show that it was possessed and sold 1st September, 1803, and they also recognise said land as having been granted by the Spanish Governor, Baron Carondelet.

No. 187. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land adjoining the last mentioned tract, containing three arpents front, and extending to the lake. This land is claimed by purchase, and deeds of sale show that it was possessed and sold as early as the 23d July, 1791.

No. 188. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land at the English Turn, right bank of the Mississippi, opposite the Orange Grove estate, containing, in front, on a line at right angles with the upper and lower boundary line, fifteen arpents and fourteen toises, and forty arpents in depth. This land is claimed by purchase, and the title by occupancy and sales, to those under whom the claimant holds, is traced as far back as the year 1770.

No. 189. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land at the English Turn, right bank of the Mississippi, containing ten arpents front, with a depth not exceeding eighty arpents. This land is claimed by purchase, and possession is traced, in those under whom claimant holds, to 6th December, 1787.

No. 190. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land at the English Turn, adjoining the last mentioned tract, containing six arpents front, with a depth of forty arpents. This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant shows, from deeds of sale, that this land was possessed and occupied since 6th December, 1787.

No. 191. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land, situate about seven and a half leagues below New Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi, containing twenty-one and a half arpents, and one hundred and twenty feet front, and forty arpents in depth. This land comprises three different tracts which the claimant has purchased. It appears from deeds of sale passed, that this land was sold in presence of the commandant of the parish during the Spanish Government in 1788.

No. 192. Benjamin Morgan claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, at the English Turn, adjoining the tract second above mentioned, on the right bank of the Mississippi, measuring four arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, running back in two parallel lines.

This land is claimed by purchase. It appears this land was possessed by the original owners in the time of the Spanish Government in Louisiana.

No. 193. G. Roussel and Louis Le Bourgeois claim a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. James, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing two arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above and below by lands of the claimants.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimants prove quiet possession and cultivation by themselves, and by those under whom they claim, upwards of thirty years. The witnesses also swear that this land was originally granted by the Spanish Government.

No. 194. Stephen Henderson claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Orleans, right bank of the Mississippi, containing about forty arpents front, and eighty arpents in depth, bounded above by the lands of the widow of François Delery, and below by the lands of J. B. Degruys and Antoine Foucher, Jun.

This land is claimed in right of purchase, and the claimant proves possession and cultivation by himself, and by those under whom he claims, upwards of forty years.

Three arpents front of said land was purchased from Mr. Foucher, with a depth of forty arpents, and the remaining eight arpents with a depth of eighty arpents, together with forty additional arpents back of the purchase from said Foucher, was purchased from Stephen Henderson.

The claimant proves possession and cultivation by himself, and by those under whom he claims, previous to, and since the year 1790.

No. 202. Samuel McCutchen claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing ten arpents front, and a depth to the lake, bounded on the upper side by lands of Alexander Labranche, and below by lands of claimant.

This land is claimed by right of purchase, and the claimant proves possession and cultivation by himself, and by those under whom he claims, forty-four consecutive years. This land is part of the following tract:

No. 203. Alexander Labranche claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing four arpents front, and a depth to the lake, bounded above by lands of Duvergne, and below by lands of Samuel McCutchen, as more fully appears from the plat annexed.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant proves possession and cultivation by himself, and by those under whom he claims, upwards of thirty-five years.

No. 204. James Brown claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. Charles, on the left bank of the Mississippi, about twenty-seven miles above the city of New Orleans, containing four arpents front on said river, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of the claimant, and below by lands of Francis Trepagnier.

This land is claimed by purchase, and the claimant produces deeds of sale from the 30th December, 1782, through different persons, down to himself, which also proves the possession of said land during the same period.

No. 205. Thomas Villanueva claims a tract of land, situate on the canal leading from the bayou Lafourche to lake Verret, containing five hundred and sixty-five and seventy one-hundredths superficial acres, according to a plan of survey recorded in book No. 1, of Lafourche, page 79.

This land was claimed before the late Board of Commissioners, and not acted upon by them, through mistake, as one of them, to wit, the honorable Joshua Lewis, states; but it appears the claimant settled said land by the permission of the proper Spanish officers, and that it was in possession and under cultivation on the 20th December, 1803, and for several years previous thereto.

No. 206. George Emele claims a tract of land, situate in the parish of St. John Baptiste, on the left bank of the Mississippi, containing two arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of Lean Vichner, and below by lands of Leonard Tregle.

No. 262. Widow Cheté claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, on the right side descending the bayou Lafourche, containing twelve arpents in front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded on one side by lands of widow Baptiste Leonard.

Jacques Rigaud claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, right side of the bayou Lafourche, containing sixty arpents front, and twenty arpents in depth, about fifteen leagues from the Mississippi river.

No. 263. The inhabitants of the parish of Lafourche Interior claim a tract of land as a burying ground in said parish, at a distance of fifteen leagues from the Mississippi, containing about five arpents front, and forty arpents in depth.

No. 264. Maria Bruné claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, right bank of the bayou Lafourche, containing six arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of John Mayzen, and on the lower side by lands of Silvier Blanc.

In the preceding five claims the claimants prove possession and occupation ten years prior to the 20th December, 1803.

No. 265. John Charles Terrio claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, on the bayou Grand Callon, between bayou La Cere and bayou Le Bon, containing six hundred and forty superficial acres.

The claimant proves possession and cultivation of this land prior to the year 1800.

No. 266. The widow Crousse and the heirs of Antoine Albarrow claim a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, on bayou Terrebonne, containing twenty arpents front, and ten arpents in depth, adjoining lands of Alexander Verdain and Joseph Deson.

The claimant proves possession and cultivation of this land prior to the year 1803.

No. 267. Peter Williams claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, containing twenty arpents front on both sides of bayou Terrebonne, and thirty arpents in depth, adjoining lands of C. Berto.

The claimant proves permission to settle this land by the proper Spanish officer, and also possession and cultivation prior to the year 1800.

No. 268. Louis d'Antin, Jun. claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, on the bayou Grand Brulé, containing six arpents front, and twenty arpents in depth, adjoining bayou Blue Water.

The claimant proves possession and cultivation of this land ten years prior to the 20th December, 1803.

No. 269. Louis d'Antin, Sen. claims a tract of land, situated in the county of Lafourche, right bank of the bayou Lafourche, containing about thirteen arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded above by lands of the heirs of Louis Pinell, and below by lands of the widow Nicholas Bertrand.

The claimant proves possession and cultivation ten years prior to 20th December, 1803.

No. 270. Fabien d'Antin claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, on the bayou Grand Brulé, containing twelve arpents front, and twenty arpents in depth, adjoining bayou Blue Water.

The claimant proves possession and cultivation prior to the year 1803.

No. 271. John Guillot claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, behind a depth of forty arpents, at a place called Grand Chene, containing six hundred and eight and seventeen one-hundredths superficial acres.

The claimant proves possession and cultivation prior to the year 1800.

No. 272. Baptiste d'Antin claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, on bayou Grand Brulé, containing six arpents front, and twenty arpents in depth, adjoining the bayou Blue Water.

The claimant proves possession and cultivation prior to the year 1800.

No. 273. John Mason claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, containing twenty arpents front on each side of bayou Terrebonne, and thirty arpents in depth, adjoining the claim of Peter Williams.

The claimant proves permission to settle said land by the proper Spanish officer, and also possession and cultivation prior to the year 1800.

No. 274. The widow and heirs of Albert Beau Sergeant claim a tract of land, situate in the county of Lafourche, containing thirty arpents front on the bayou Callon, and thirty arpents in depth.

The claimants prove possession and cultivation of this land upwards of thirty years.

The preceding claims, comprehended in Class III., are not founded on either Spanish grants, concessions, or orders of survey exhibited to me, and are, therefore, not embraced by the literal meaning of the act of 11th May, 1820, but as I believe they are within the spirit of that act, I have thought it proper to report them. I infer this from analogy to former laws on the subject. By previous acts of Congress claims in Louisiana have been recognised as valid which were founded solely on settlement rights, provided the habitation and cultivation was shown to be on the 20th December, 1803, or anterior to that period. All the cases reported in this class are proved to have been in peaceable possession, either by the claimants, or those under whom they claim, before, and some of them long previously to the 20th December, 1803, and, therefore, would have been valid under former laws, to which I have alluded. But I think the mere fact of the long and uninterrupted possession of those lands, under the Government of Spain, is strong presumptive proof that the original settlers or claimants had a good title to the land claimed. It is a well known fact that some of the Spanish Governors of the province of Louisiana, and particularly the Intendant Morales, were extremely tenacious of the lands belonging to the royal domain, and made strict inquiries as to the right of individuals for the express purpose of detecting frauds against the Government.

It is fair to conclude, in my opinion, that, if the present claimants, or those under whom they hold, had not good titles for their lands, they would have been ejected. If good titles for those lands ever existed the question naturally arises, why are they not produced? Various reasons might be assigned for their non-production, but the most obvious which occur to me are the following: Lands, as they are now claimed, are generally very different in their local descriptions from what they were when originally granted, owing to the various successions from fathers to their children, and the subdivisions arising from sales; so that, although a large plantation may have been regularly granted by former Governments, yet its subdivisions since that period are so described as to boundaries that it is extremely difficult, and, in some cases, impossible, to trace them to the original source; and this difficulty is still more increased from the loose manner in which grants to land were made by the Spanish Government, frequently on loose sheets of paper, afterwards stitched together in the form of a book, which, from time or accident, are in many places much mutilated.

But another reason for the non-production of the title papers in these claims, may arise from their actual destruction. It is a well known fact, and specially proved in some claims embraced by these reports, that the archives of the Spanish Government suffered greatly by the fire which happened in the city of New Orleans in the year 1794; and, it is equally notorious, that a considerable portion of the archives were removed to Pensacola, and from thence to Havana, and, on the passage to the latter place, were plundered by pirates.

All circumstances considered, and for reasons deduced, which are respectfully submitted, I am of opinion all the claims included in this class ought to be confirmed.

SAMUEL H. HARPER, Register.

NEW ORLEANS, January 6, 1821.

CLASS FOURTH.

No. 275. Pierre Leglise claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Point Coupée, on the west side of the Mississippi, containing sixteen arpents in front, by forty in depth, and bounded on one side by land of Francis Mason, and on the other by land of J. B. Rabelais.

This claim was submitted to the late Board of Commissioners for this district, and by them rejected on the ground of abandonment on the part of the claimant. The facts before the board were, that the claimant purchased this land in the year 1806 from the heirs of Jean Pierre Dargulon, and produced, in support of his claim, the affidavit of two of the inhabitants of the district, that it was within their knowledge that Jean Pierre Dargulon was proprietor of, and did inhabit and cultivate this land upwards of twenty-five years from the date of making the affidavit, viz: from the 28th December, 1806, and that it had always been considered his property up to that period. The claimant now corroborates the proof of possession by other affidavits, as far back as the year 1775 or 1776. The late board having rejected a number of other claims in the same district of country precisely similar to this, and which were re-entered afterwards in virtue of a law extending the time for that purpose, it became my duty, together with the Receiver of Public Moneys, to consider these cases, and report our opinion thereon; which we did under the title of "reports of the Register and Receiver of Public Moneys of the eastern district of the State of Louisiana," &c., and dated the 20th November, 1816, which reports were confirmed by the act of Congress on the 11th May, 1820.

The same facts in relation to the claims thus reported, and afterwards confirmed by Congress, also exist in this case, and are as follows: The additional evidence filed in support of the claims reported, as aforesaid, prove that, in the year 1776 or 1777, Governor Galvez issued grants for all the lands in the district where those and this claim lie; that they were, for some years, constantly inhabited and cultivated; that, in the summer of 1779, all dikes, levees, houses, &c., were swept away by the overflowing of the river Mississippi, so that all the inhabitants of that part of the country were compelled to leave their habitations; that they, however, always maintained a kind of possession by cutting timber, taking fire-wood, &c.; that the abandonment was involuntary and temporary; and that, when the country became habitable, the original occupants returned.

The same witnesses further stated, that no person was permitted to settle on lands in that part of the country without previously having obtained a grant from the commandant or Governor; but that the people in general were ignorant of the importance of land titles, and often lost or mislaid them. Upon these facts we reported favorably on the claims alluded to, as may be seen more at large in the case of Charles Gross, No. 475, and which was confirmed by the act of Congress of 11th May, 1820. The same facts exist in this claim, and the same reasoning is equally applicable to it; and, as those of a similar nature have already been confirmed, and having no reason to change my opinion formerly expressed, I am, consequently, of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 276. Pierre Leglise claims a tract of land, situated in the county of Point Coupée, on the west side of the river Mississippi, containing six arpents in front, and forty in depth, bounded on each side by lands of Beleny Chatity. This land is claimed by purchase from Baptiste Lemoine. The same facts occur in this case as in the preceding; consequently, my opinion is the same.

No. 277. Pierre Leglise claims a tract of land, situate on the west side of the Mississippi, county of Point Coupée, containing eighteen arpents in front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded on one side by land claimed by Mr. Mairann, and on the other side by lands claimed by Louis Gremillion. This land is claimed by purchase. This is a similar claim to the preceding.

No. 278. Lerron La Cour claims a tract of land, situate in the county of Point Coupée, west side of the Mississippi, containing seven arpents front, and forty arpents in depth, bounded on one side by lands of widow Pierre Decuir, and on the other side by lands of widow Crozat. This land is claimed by purchase, and is similar to the preceding.

SAM. H. HARPER,
Register Land Office, Eastern district Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, January 6, 1821.

SIR:

LAND OFFICE, OUACHITA, January 1, 1821.

In transmitting my report of the land claims entered in this office, pursuant to the act of Congress of last session, it may not be improper in me to say something in explanation of the classes into which I have divided the claims.

The first class comprehends those only in which original written Spanish titles have been filed in this office.

The second class contains those claims where there are no written titles produced, but for which, it is probable, that there have been good titles which are lost.

The third class are claims considered honest, and meriting the indulgence of the Government.

The fourth class consists of claims in which the testimony is not believed. The Spanish titles contained in this class evidently call for land in the State of Mississippi, and are believed to have been already entered in the district west of Pearl river. In fact the whole of the claims in this class are considered as a base attempt to defraud the Government.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient servant,

D. J. SUTTON.

The honorable JOSIAH MEIGS,
Commissioner General Land Office, Washington City.

Report of the Register of the Land Office for the district north of Red river, in the State of Louisiana, pursuant to the act of Congress passed on the 11th May, 1820, entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts for the adjustment of land claims in the State of Louisiana."

FIRST CLASS OF CLAIMS.

No. 1. Antonio Vaca claims a tract of land, of forty arpents front, on each side of the bayou Macon, in the district (distrito) of Concordia, by the ordinary depth of forty arpents, being three thousand two hundred superficial French arpents, equal to two thousand seven hundred and eight superficial American acres. This claim is founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, dated at New Orleans on the 18th October, 1789, and signed by Estevan Miro, then Governor of the province of Louisiana.

No. 2. François Leclair claims a tract of ten arpents front, on each side of the bayou, or Rigolet du Bondieu, post (questo) of Natchitoches, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to six hundred and seventy-seven American acres. This claim is founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Estevan Miro, Governor of Louisiana, and dated at New Orleans, the 4th December, 1790.

No. 3. Juan Belgar claims a tract of forty arpents front, on the right bank of Red river, in the post of Rapides, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres. This claim is founded on an order of survey, dated at New Orleans, the 6th June, 1798, and granted to the claimant by Governor Gayoso.

No. 4. Pedro Himenes claims forty arpents front, on each side of the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the parish of Natchitoches, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to two thousand seven hundred and eight American acres; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, and signed by Governor Miro, at New Orleans, the 11th May, 1788.

No. 5. Jacques Dupui claims thirty arpents front, by forty deep, equal to one thousand and fifteen American acres, situated on the bayou D'Areau, in the port of Rapides; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Gayoso, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 19th May, 1798.

No. 6. Julian de Lion claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated on the right bank of Deer creek, (bayou Chevreuil,) in the parish of Catahoula; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Miro, and dated at New Orleans, the 15th September, 1788.

No. 7. Louis Hernando claims fifteen arpents front, on each side of the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the parish of Natchitoches, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand and fifteen American acres; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant the 9th July, 1789, and signed by Governor Miro.

No. 8. Juan de Lion claims a tract of land of twenty arpents front, by forty arpents in depth, equal to six hundred and seventy-seven American acres, situate on the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the parish of Natchitoches, and founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, and signed by Governor Miro, at New Orleans, the 8th August, 1790.

No. 9. Antoine La Montagne claims six arpents of land in front, by forty arpents deep, equal to two hundred and three American acres, on the west bank of the river Ouachita, near the post; founded on an order of survey granted by Governor Miro to the claimant, and signed at New Orleans, the 5th April, 1790.

No. 10. Juan Mansol claims twenty arpents front of land on both sides of the bayou Macon, in the post of Ouachita, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Gayoso, and signed at New Orleans, the 11th February, 1799.

No. 11. Jacques Pecondom claims forty arpents front of land on each side of the bayou Toreau, in the parish of Rapides, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to two thousand seven hundred and eight American acres, and founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, and signed by Governor Miro at New Orleans, the 24th March, 1790.

No. 12. Baptista Garsa claims a tract of land of thirty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand and fifteen American acres, situate on the bayou Toreau, in the parish of Rapides; founded on an order of survey signed by Governor Gayoso, the 6th June, 1799, in favor of the claimant.

No. 13. Ramon Estrada claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situate on the bayou Marteau, in the post of Rapides; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Gayoso, and signed at New Orleans the 9th May, 1798.

No. 14. Jean Pierre Valade claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, on each side of the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the parish of Natchitoches, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to two thousand seven hundred and eight American acres; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, and signed at New Orleans, the 8th May, 1788, by Estevan Miro, then Governor of Louisiana.

No. 15. Jean Filhiol claims a tract of land of ten arpents front, on both sides of the river Ouachita, at the Prairie des Canots, by the ordinary depth of forty arpents, equal to six hundred and seventy-seven American acres; founded on an order of survey in favor of the claimant, and signed by Governor Miro at New Orleans, the 29th June, 1785.

No. 16. Manuel Mindez claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, on each side of the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the post of Natchitoches, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to two thousand seven hundred and eight American acres; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, and signed by Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, (then Governor,) at New Orleans, the 7th July, 1799.

No. 17. Henry Slaughter claims a tract of land of fifteen arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to five hundred and seven American acres, situate on the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the parish of Natchitoches, and founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, and signed by Governor Gayoso at New Orleans, the 11th February, 1799.

No. 18. Alexander Breard claims a tract of land, of one arpent front, on the Ouachita river, near the town of Monroe, by the ordinary depth of forty arpents, equal to thirty-three American acres. This claim is founded on an order of survey, granted by Governor Estevan Miro to Balthazar Foguel, on the 5th April, 1790, for six arpents front, whereof five have already been confirmed in the name of Mrs. Relf, by an entry at Opelousas. This claimant has a regular title to this one arpent front by nine successive deeds of sale from Foguel down to himself—all authentic acts, passed before the commandant and public notary.

No. 19. Antonio Lafita claims a tract of land, of thirty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand and fifteen American acres, situated on the Horse-shoe lake, in the post of Rapides; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Miro, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 12th of February, 1790.

No. 20. Louis Dumortier claims a tract of land, of forty arpents front, on each side of the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the post of Natchitoches, by the ordinary depth of forty arpents, equal to two thousand seven hundred and eight American acres; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Gayoso, and signed by him the 10th August, 1798.

No. 21. Jacques Talvande claims a tract of land, of twenty arpents front, on each side of the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the post of Natchitoches, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres; founded on an order of survey granted by Governor Miro to the claimant, and dated at New Orleans, the 6th February, 1689.

No. 22. Antonio Courvel claims thirty arpents front of land, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand and fifteen American acres, situated on Deer creek, (bayou Chevreuil,) in the parish of Catahoula; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Gayoso, and signed at New Orleans, the 15th of June, 1798.

No. 23. Juan Gonzales claims a tract of land, of forty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated on the bayou Macon, and post of Ouachita; founded on an order of survey granted by Governor Miro to the claimant, and signed at New Orleans the 15th of January, 1789.

No. 24. Louis Morino claims fifteen arpents front of land on each side of the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the post of Natchitoches, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand and fifteen American acres; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, dated the 7th December, 1789, and signed by Estevan Miro, then Governor of Louisiana.

No. 25. Miguel de Santo claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by forty arpents deep, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situate on the bayou Macon, in the post of Ouachita; founded on an order of survey granted by Governor Miro to the claimant, and dated at New Orleans, the 12th of March, 1788.

No. 26. Jacques Dumeni claims twenty arpents front of land, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to six hundred and seventy-seven American acres, situated on the bayou Macon, in the post of Ouachita, and founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, under date of the 7th April, 1790, and signed by Estevan Miro, then Governor of Louisiana.

No. 27. Julien Galban claims forty arpents front of land, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated on the bayou Toreau, in the district (distrito) of Rapides; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, and signed by Governor Gayoso at New Orleans, the 8th May, 1799.

No. 28. Miguel Llano claims a tract of land of twenty arpents front, on both sides of the Rigolet du Bondieu, in the post of Natchitoches, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Estevan Miro, Governor of Louisiana, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 8th April, 1790.

No. 29. Santiago del Rio claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated in Sicily island, fronting the pine woods, in the post (puesto) of Rapides, founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant, and signed by Governor Miro at New Orleans, under date of the 10th May, 1789.

No. 30. Jean Filhiol claims a tract of land of twenty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to six hundred and seventy-seven American acres, situated in the little prairie of the Prairie of the Woods, (prairiellon de la Prairie des Bois), in the parish of Ouachita. There is no title filed in this claim, but there is produced a certificate from Samuel H. Harper, the Register of the Land Office at New Orleans, containing a copy from the Register of land grants kept by the Spanish Government for the province of Louisiana, and now in his possession, of an entry purporting that, on the 16th June, 1795, there was granted to Jean Filhiol twenty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, in the place claimed. This was during the government of the Baron de Carondelet. The entry does not mention whether the title was an order of survey or a complete grant; but it must have been one of them, as no other entries were made, or indeed could have been, at New Orleans.

No. 31. Francisco Adante claims thirty arpents front of land, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand and fifteen American acres, situate in the post of Ouachita, on the bayou Macon; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Miro, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 9th July, 1788.

No. 32. Francisco de la Garsa claims forty arpents of land front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated on the bayou Clair, in the parish of Catahoula, and founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Gayoso, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 8th May, 1798.

No. 33. Miguel Lafita claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated on Deer creek, (bayou Chevreuil), in the parish of Catahoula, and founded on an order of survey granted by Governor Miro to the claimant, and signed at New Orleans, the 8th September, 1790.

No. 34. Gilberte Gallardo claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by forty arpents deep, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated in the Prairie du Bœuf, in the parish of Catahoula, and founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Miro, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 3d December, 1788.

No. 35. Pedro Ariola claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated in the parish of Catahoula, in the Prairie du Lac; founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Estevan Miro, Governor of Louisiana, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 5th day of September, 1789.

No. 36. Pedro Apolinar claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated in the parish of Catahoula, on Deer creek, (bayou Chevreuil), and founded on an order of survey granted by Governor Gayoso to the claimant, dated at New Orleans, the 8th June, 1798.

No. 37. Henry Bry claims a tract of land of four arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one hundred and thirty-five American acres, on the left bank of the river Ouachita, at the place called Fort Miro. This claim is founded on a sale at public auction, by the Spanish Government, to John Hughes, for the sum of one hundred and three dollars, which was paid into the Royal Treasury, the whole approved by Juan Ventura Morales, the Intendant, and by the Treasurer and Assessor, and countersigned and noted by Carlos Ximines, the Secretary of the Government at New Orleans, the 30th January, 1802, and by Gilberto Leonard, the Auditor (contador) of the army, on the 10th of February following. This appears to be equal to a complete grant, as the Intendant makes use of the same words as in complete titles, after reciting that a survey had been made and returned by Carlos L. Trudeau, the Surveyor General, under date of the 25th July, 1800, (usando de la facultad que el Rey nuestro senor me tiene conferida, apruebo el remate hecho en Juan Hughes, de las quatro arpanes de tierra relacionados y los concedo, &c.) There is a regular deed from Hughes to Sarpy and Cortes, and from them to the claimant, passed before notaries public in New Orleans. It appears that this land had before been granted by the Spanish Government, (although no title can be found,) as it was sold by Antoine Toupart to Louis Badins in 1789; by him to Jean Poiret in 1791, and by Poiret to the Spanish Government (for public use) in the year 1795, under the orders of the Baron de Carondelet; but, not being found further useful, was sold, as above mentioned, by the Government to Hughes in 1802. All those sales are authentic acts, passed before the commandant.

No. 40. Antoine Dumontier claims a tract of land of fifty arpents front, by the ordinary depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand six hundred and ninety-two American acres, situated on or near the lake San Joseph, above Natchez, in the county of Concordia, and founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor De Galvez, and dated at New Orleans, the 8th December, 1776.

No. 41. Louis Duran claims a tract of land, of twenty arpents front, on each side of the bayou Catahoula, in the district of Rapides, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, founded on an order of survey granted to Governor Miro to the claimant, and dated at New Orleans, the 8th July, 1790.

No. 42. Louis Jarnaque claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated at the mouth of the bayou Marteau, in the county of Rapides, founded on an order of survey granted by Governor Miro to the claimant, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 8th November, 1786.

No. 43. Manuel O'Garte claims a tract of land of sixty arpents front, on both sides of the river or bayou Batea, in the county of Natchitoches, by the ordinary depth of forty arpents, equal to four thousand and sixty-two American acres, founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Miro, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 3d March, 1785.

No. 44. The heirs and representatives of John and Joseph Owen claim eight hundred superficial acres of land, situate on the bayou Gallion, and parish of Ouachita. This claim is founded on a survey made in June, 1804, by orders of the Baron de Bastrop, in his grant of twelve leagues square, and by a sale from him, by authentic act, (for a nominal consideration,) to the claimants, in 1805, as persons who came with him, under his contract with the Spanish Government, of date 21st June, 1796, (printed in the appendix to the Land Laws, page 27.) It is also proved, by official documents from the Spanish commandant, John Filhiol, that those two persons came to Ouachita, to settle on the Bastrop grant, in the year 1797.

No. 45. Christa Owen claims four hundred arpents of land, equal to three hundred and thirty-eight American acres, situated in the prairie Simon, and parish of Ouachita, in the grant of Baron de Bastrop. In this claim is filed a plat of survey, and a conveyance to the claimant, from the attorney in fact of the Baron de Bastrop, in 1810. It is also proved, by official documents, that the claimant is one of the settlers who came here in 1797, in pursuance of the baron's contract with the Spanish Government.

No. 46. John and Abraham Dehart claim eight hundred acres of land on the bayou Gallion, and parish of Ouachita, in Bastrop's grant, founded on a conveyance from the Baron de Bastrop to them, in 1805, as two of the settlers who came to Ouachita in conformity with his contract with the Spanish Government. It is also proved, by official documents, that those two claimants came to Ouachita in 1797, in pursuance of the baron's contract.

No. 47. John Dehart, Jun. claims four hundred arpents of land, equal to three hundred and thirty-eight American acres, situate in the prairie Simon, and parish of Ouachita, in the Bastrop grant. In this claim is filed a plat of survey and conveyance from the attorney in fact of the Baron de Bastrop, in 1810, to the claimant, as one of the settlers entitled to land in the Bastrop grant. It is also proved, by official documents, that the claimant is one of the settlers who came to Ouachita, in 1797, in pursuance of the baron's contract with the Spanish Government.

No. 48. Winant Dehart claims four hundred arpents of land, equal to three hundred and thirty-eight American acres, situate in the prairie Simon, and parish of Ouachita, in the Bastrop grant, founded on a plat of survey and conveyance from the attorney in fact of the Baron de Bastrop, in 1810, to the claimant, as one of the settlers entitled to land in the Bastrop grant. It is also proved, by official documents, that the claimant is one of the settlers who came to Ouachita in 1797, in pursuance of the baron's contract with the Spanish Government.

No. 49. Pedro Poso claims twenty arpents front of land, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to six hundred and seventy-seven American acres, situated in the island of Sicily, and parish of Catahoula, and founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor Miro, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 6th day of August, 1788.

No. 50. Miguel Lizondo claims a tract of land of forty arpents front, by the ordinary depth of forty arpents, equal to one thousand three hundred and fifty-four American acres, situated on the east side of Red river, in the county of Natchitoches, and about four or six leagues below the post, (puesto), founded on an order of survey granted to the claimant by Governor De Galvez, and signed by him at New Orleans, the 6th May, 1776.

No. 51. The Baron de Bastrop claims six toises of land, on each side of the bayou Barthelemy, from its source to its mouth, founded on the grant from the Baron de Carondelet to the claimant, under date of the 12th June, 1797, and printed in the Land Laws, page 28 of the appendix. In this claim John Heberard deposes that he was in the employ of the Baron de Bastrop in 1799; and that he knows that a mill, for manufacturing flour, was built on the bayou Seard, which was commenced in the year 1798, and was manufacturing flour in the year 1799. This testimony is believed entitled to credit.

The length of the bayou Barthelemy is not exactly known, but it is believed to be upwards of one hundred miles, (by the meanders, much more.) It rises in the Arkansas Territory, and empties into the river Ouachita, a few miles from the town of Monroe.

CLAIMS OF THE SECOND CLASS.

No. 38. Henry Bry claims four arpents front of land, by the depth of forty arpents, equal to one hundred and thirty-five American acres, situated on the left bank of the river Ouachita, near Fort Miro. There is no title filed with this claim; but, by authentic acts passed before the commandant, it was sold by Jean Weigand to Louis Toutin, in 1787; in this sale mention is made of the crop then on the land. Toutin sold to Auguste Roy, in 1793; Roy sold to Noel Pradine, in 1796; Pradine sold to Joseph de la Baume, in 1796; in this sale, passed by the commandant, after noting the foregoing conveyances, mention is made that Jean Weigand had a concession of the land, which was then deposited in the commandant's office. This concession cannot now be found. La Baume sold to Vincent F. Tejeiro, in 1801; Tejeiro sold to Sarpy and Cortes, in 1803, and they to the present claimant, in 1814. These three last acts are passed before Peter Pedesclaux, a notary public in New Orleans. This land has been settled constantly for nearly forty years.
